

SIMS ANNOUNCES CANDIDACY FOR CONGRESS; STEELE CLAIMS UPSHAW PLEDGED TO RETIRE

Stocks Ordered To Punish Unruly Convicts

UNIFORM RULES FOR PUNISHMENT SENT TO WARDENS

Stocks To Be Employed
Only as Last Resort and Strict Regulation Governs Their Use.

LASH NOT INCLUDED IN OFFICIAL RULES

Five Methods of Discipline, Depending on Grade of Offense, Prescribed by Commission.

Use of stocks instead of the lash as a last resort to control unruly prisoners in Georgia convict camps was ordered Saturday by the state prison commission in a new set of rules on prison punishment issued to wardens.

The new rules are based on recommendations of a committee of physicians of recognized standing in Georgia. They were approved by the commission following a state-wide inspection of conditions in prison camps following reports of cruelty in administering punishment and open advocacy in some quarters of a return to the practice of flogging. The lash was outlawed by Governor Thomas W.
Hardwick some years ago following widespread demand for reform of prison camp methods.

The new rules provide for five methods of discipline, to be used according to the degree of insubordination of the prisoner concerned. Solitary confinement is provided for minor infractions of discipline. Second in the list comes restrictions of diet; third, grade of clothing to stripes; fourth, use of shackles and chains, and, as a last resort, stocks.

Punishment Restricted.
It is provided that no prisoner shall be kept in the stocks longer than one hour at a time, and that he is to be examined and found physically sound by the camp physician before this punishment is inflicted.

The new rules have been approved by Governor Clifford Walker and will be put into effect by the prison commission immediately.

Dr. T. F. Abernethy, secretary of the state board of health; Dr. J. O.
Elrod, president of the Georgia Medical society, and Dr. Richard B. Binnion, physician to the state prison farm at Milledgeville, formed the committee of physicians who conferred with members of the prison commission on the humane features and physical safety of the punishments recommended.
After lengthy consideration, and careful examination of all records and data bearing upon the question, the physicians recommended the five forms of punishment adopted as being neither unusually severe or harmful to prisoners.

"It is the consensus of opinion," the committee wrote, "that stocks shall be the last resort. This should be unusually severe or harmful to the prisoner provided, he is found to be physically sound upon examination by the camp physician."

The new rule thereupon passed by the commission for the government of convict punishment in the various camps in the state, reads as follows:
"They (the wardens) shall safely keep all prisoners committed to their custody, rigidly enforce discipline by the use of such humane modes of punishment as will best enforce submission to authority and compel and induce the performance of good and faithful labor during work hours, such

A Masterpiece of Short Fiction

In the past few years fiction lovers of America have learned that Blue Ribbon Fiction means the best in short stories and serials.

The Constitution calls special attention to the Blue Ribbon short story which appears in today's magazine—SEVEN DEVILS, by Adela Rogers St.
Johns.

It is a poignant tale of a Great Love based on the one thing in life that is everlasting.
With a skill worthy of the old masters, Miss St. Johns leads up in her story to a climax that is not only a thing of joy in its beauty but is a great lesson as well.

Three Atlanta Girls Hurt as Car Skids On Butler Highway

ELECTED CHAIRMAN OF SERVICE BOARD

JAMES A. PERRY.

PERRY NEW HEAD OF SERVICE BODY

Elected Chairman of State Commission to Succeed the Late Paul B. of Caucuses.

James A. Perry, member of the Georgia public service commission, Saturday was elected chairman to succeed the late Paul B. Trammell. Mr.
Perry was chosen by a vote of three to one, after a series of caucuses and discussions between the five members of the commission which lasted from 9 o'clock Saturday morning until 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Commissioner Perry's name was finally the only one formally placed in nomination. He was nominated by Commissioner O. R. Bennett. On the final vote Commissioners Bennett, Mc-Donald and Orrin Roberts voted for Mr. Perry, while Commissioner John
T. Bolefue voted "no."

The selection of a chairman on Saturday followed a week of postpone-ments. It was originally expected the election would take place last Tuesday, but the executive session was put off from day to day until Saturday.

Mr. Perry has been a member of the public service commission since July 29, 1911. He was graduated from the University of Georgia in 1888, was mayor of Lawrenceville and later a member of the state legislature in 1900 and 1901.

Harvard Head Is No Friend Of Reporters

President Lowell Says He Has Not Been Interviewed in 17 Years.

Chicago, February 20.—(AP)—President A. Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard, today broke a self-imposed silence long enough to confide to a Harvard alumnus, who is also a newspaperman, that he had not spoken to the press for 17 years.

"This practice has been a great comfort to me," continued President Lowell, who was stopping at the home of Barrett Wendell, Jr., in
"I have made it a rule never to be interviewed. I never have anything to say to newspapermen. I have followed this rule without a departure for 17 years. I do not intend to depart from it now. I make no exceptions."

NO BONES BROKEN, PHYSICIANS STATE

Information Received in Atlanta Says Injured
Girls Are Expected To Arrive in City Today.

Butler, Ga., February 20.—(Special).—An automobile containing four members of the North Avenue Presbyterian school basketball team skid-ded against an embankment near here this afternoon, slightly injuring three Atlanta girls, all of whom are about 16 years old. They are Charlotte
Teasley, daughter of Mrs. O. L.
Teasley, of 218 E. Fourth street; Jean Cook, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Virgil Cook, and Elizabeth Flinn, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. O. Flinn, the former pastor of North Avenue Presbyterian church.

Adolyn McClatchey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. McClatchey, also an occupant of the car, was not injured.
The car was driven by J. W. Hollingsworth, executive secretary of the North Avenue school.

The girls were removed to a home in Butler, where it was announced that no bones were broken, and they were not seriously injured. To take all precaution possible, however, physicians from Macon came here to make further examination.

The accident occurred about two miles from town on the Albany-Butler road, which was wet and slippery following Friday's heavy rain. The car, which was said to be traveling at a moderate rate of speed, skidded into the bank, partially overturning.

The party was returning from a trip to several points in south Georgia where basketball games were played. The team played at Marshallville Thursday night, at Moultrie Friday night, and at Albany Saturday morning. The party was on the return trip to Atlanta at the time of the accident.

There were about 25 in the party, traveling in three cars. R. F. Hudson was in the leading car, and unaware of the accident, proceeded to Atlanta.

The second car, driven by Mr. Hollingsworth, figured in the accident;
the third car, being driven by Joe F.
Nutting, brought the injured girls to Butler.

Members of the party were assured tonight that the girls are not seriously injured.

GIRLS TO RETURN TO ATLANTA TODAY.

The three members of North Avenue Presbyterian school's basketball team who were injured in a south Georgia accident Saturday are quickly rallying from the shock of their experience and are not seriously hurt, according to long-distance telephone information received Saturday night by Miss Thyrza S. Askew, principal of the school.

Miss Askew told The Constitution she had been in communication with Miss Elizabeth Clanton, coach of the team, and had been informed that physicians from Macon who went to attend the girls in Butler had told Miss Clanton her charges could leave for Atlanta this morning.

"Jean Cook suffered no more than a bruise on her face," Miss Askew said, "and Elizabeth Flinn was only shocked by the wreck. Charlotte Teasley received a bruise on her side from which she complained, but physicians have assured Miss Clanton that no bones were broken and no serious hurts sustained."

OPERA GUARANTY RECORDS BROKEN; SEASON ASSURED

Total of $139,000 Pledged
By Citizens to Bring Metropolitan Company
Here This Year.

SEASON EXPECTED TO PAY EXPENSES

List of Prices for Tickets
Is Made Public—Season Will Begin Monday,
April 19.

The guarantee list for Atlanta's 1926 season of grand opera Saturday night totaled $139,000, a total of $14,300 in excess of the amount needed to bring the Metropolitan Opera company here this year.

While this is regarded as one of the most remarkable achievements over established in Atlanta, the guarantors' list will be held open for several additional days in order that any who may not yet have sent in their cards and who desire to enjoy guarantors' privileges—including first choice of seat reservations—may do so.
The higher the guarantee list totals, the less obligation rests upon each individual guarantor.

This year it is confidently expected that the opera season will more than pay for itself, making it unnecessary to call upon guarantors at all. In view of the popularity of the program announced for the season, exceptional interest centering in both new and old stars who are to come here and prosperous times which are now being enjoyed throughout the southeast, seat sale for the opera is expected to go over the requisite $125,000.

Seat Prices Lowered.
Simultaneously with announcement of the guarantee total, the Music Festival association made public the scale of prices for the 1926 season, which discloses that special rates have been put into effect this year for the benefit of college students. At the same time those and open to the general public, which make it possible for certain seats to be secured this year at prices materially lower than those prevailing in 1925.

Prices for the first four rows on the sides of the balcony have been reduced from $22.50 per season and $4.25 for single performance tickets, prevailing in 1925, to $20 per season and $3.50 for single performance tickets this year.

The season will begin Monday, April 19, and continue throughout the week. Performances will be staged each night except Thursday, with matinees Thursday and Saturday, making seven performances in all.

Among new stars who will appear here for the first time will be Marion Talley, 19-year-old Kansas City girl who achieved an unprecedented triumph on her debut at the Metropolitan.

Kaiser Drops Poverty Role To Entertain

Gayety Follows Prospects of Receiving Millions From Germany.

Doorn, Holland, February 20.—(AP).
With the prospect of receiving millions from Germany as recompense for the loss of his vast estates, the former kaiser has dropped his role of poverty and has embarked on a series of receptions and dinners reminiscent of the old imperial days.

The change in the mode of life at his chateau here is marked. Not only are entertainments given on a grand scale, but the ex-kaiser and his wife accept invitations to functions elsewhere.

Tonight, for the first time since his arrival in Holland, William, Princess Hermine, Prince Henry and other members of the former royal family were guests at an official gala dinner given by the governor of the province of Utrecht.

Many official personages and numerous members of the Dutch aristocracy were invited. The dinner was followed by dancing.

MEXICO WARNED IT MUST REPEAL PROPERTY LAWS

Break With United States Is Predicted If She Retains Confiscatory Land Provision.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., February 20.— (Special).—The showdown between the United States and Mexico on the question of confiscation of American property rights in the latter country is at hand, according to information obtained from an authoritative source tonight.

The Coolidge administration, it is learned, has virtually warned the Mexican government that American recognition of the government of President Calles will be withdrawn. Ambassador Sheffield called home and diplomatic relations broken off if Mexico persists in giving a retroactive interpretation to the new petroleum and land laws. Such retroactive construction would have the effect of confiscating one state department contends, not less than half of the $1-000,000,000 of American investments in Mexico.

Great Britain is standing shoulder to shoulder with the United States in dealing with Mexico in this crisis.
The British government has lodged a protest with Mexico similar to the American, denouncing the Mexican laws as confiscatory of a large portion of the $800,000,000 British investments in Mexico. It is understood that if the United States should withdraw recognition Great Britain would do likewise.

It looks now as if nothing could avert a break in cordial relations with Mexico, save a backdown by President Calles.

RELIEF SOCIETY MEMORIAL HOME NOW COMPLETED

Washington, February 20.—(AP).—
John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, today accepted in the name of the organization the two recently completed flagstaffs and white marble balustrade presented on behalf of the widow of Colonel James A. Stryker, of New York.

The presentation, made by John A.
Merrill, president of the All-American Cables, Inc., brought to completion the imposing memorial home of the relief society, final details of which were held up during the war.
Captain Stryker gave $100,000 towards construction of the great marble building.

MRS. RICHARDSON 'CONSIDERS' RACE

Prominent Clubwoman
Out of City When Fee Was Paid and Is Uncertain About Running.

Featured by action of friends of Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, former president of the Atlanta Woman's club, in entering her name as a candidate for county commissioner, close of the entry lists for the March 24 primary at noon Saturday revealed five eleventh-hour candidates for the commission.

In addition to Mrs. Richardson, the following new candidates qualified by paying their entry fees: Robert E.
J. Cone, attorney; Ernest C. Ben-ley, attorney; Earl F. Scott, mechanical engineer, and B. Bettis, wholesale meat dealer.

Mrs. Richardson was out of the city when her name was entered and she was uncertain on her return Saturday night whether she would remain in the race. Close friends, however, said that she would give the matter full consideration.

Two commissioners are to be elected from the county-at-large, as terms of Commissioners Paul Etheridge and Virlyn E. Moore expire at the close of the ensuing year. The term of Commissioner Edwin F. Johnson, from the country districts, also expires at the close of the year, but he is unopposed for the office.

Commissioner Etheridge is a candidate to succeed himself, having paid his entrance fee several days ago.
Commissioner Moore did not offer for re-election, and it is understood that he will be a candidate for the judgeship of the civil division of Fulton superior court to succeed Judge W. D.
Ellis, who plans to retire from the bench.

STORM THREATENS PASSAGE OF TAX REDUCTION BILL

Clouds Gather as Result of Agreement, But Leaders Predict Prompt Ratification.

Washington, February 20.—(AP).— Storm clouds appeared today over the course of the compromise tax reduction bill agreed to by the house and senate conferees, but prompt ratification of the measure by both branches early next week was believed certain tonight by leaders.

A revolt against the bill in the house broke today with announcement by Representative Newton, republican, Minnesota, that he will move to have the compromise sent back to conference with instructions that the proposal for a restrictive cut in the inheritance tax be eliminated.

Will Fight Agreement.
The inheritance tax also continues the center of controversy in the senate where members who voted for its repeal are ready to fight the conference agreement restoring the tax to the measure.

Revised estimates of reductions in the bill as finally drafted by conference showed today that it would provide for an actual saving to taxpayers this year of $387,811,000 instead of $381,000,000 as first figured.
The more than $6,000,000 increase was attributed to modifications made in the corporation tax.

The retroactive reduction in the inheritance tax, whereby the increased rates made in the 1924 act would be substituted with the lower rates in effect in the 1921 act was voted by the senate. This vote, however, was coupled with the vote for repeal of the inheritance tax and the proposal was not voted upon separately. It will mean a refund of about $15,000, 000 in taxes this year and will result altogether, it is estimated, in a loss of $85,000,000 in taxes already assessed on estates made subject to the tax in the period since the 1924 act went into effect June 2 of that year.

Pointing out that the house has not considered such a proposition and that no one had requested it before the ways and means committee hearings, Representative Newton, who is considered one of the republican "regulars," moved for a vote on the inheritance tax at the close of 1926.

MAYOR TO MAKE PLATFORM PUBLIC AFTER VACATION

Promises Vigorous Campaign To Win Seat in Washington—Leaves on Trip to Florida.

STEELE ANNOUNCES TEXT OF LETTER

Says Upshaw Gave Him Definite Assurance He Would Not Again Stand for Reelection.

Walter A. Sims, for two terms mayor of Atlanta, Saturday formally announced his candidacy for congress to represent the fifth Georgia district.
L. J. Steele, widely-known Decatur attorney, has also announced as a candidate for the post now held by William D. Upshaw, who has not yet stated whether he will stand for re-election. Louis Burton, attorney, has also announced he will enter the race.

The election will take place September 8 and plans for intensive campaigns are being laid by candidates, with every indication of a hotly-contested race.

In announcing his candidacy Mayor
Sims said he was leaving for a vacation and would make known his platform at a later date. He promised a vigorous campaign for the office.

Steele Issue Statement.
While the mayor was announcing his intention to run, Attorney Steele issued a statement in which he made public a letter which he said Congressman Upshaw had written him definitely promising he would not again be a candidate for reelection.

Congressman Upshaw Saturday filed a speaking engagement in Rochester, N. Y. Efforts to secure a statement from him were unavailing.

"I feel sure that Mr. Upshaw will not run again," Mr. Steele said, "although I have not heard from him since I made my announcement several weeks ago. Two years ago he wrote me on three different occasions that he would not again offer for congress after the election of 1924."

"I now hold a letter from him, written to me May 31, 1924, in which he writes as follows:

Text of Letter.
"My dear Mr. Steele:
"I passed through Atlanta between trains and met our mutual friend, McElreath, at the Kimball house. During the course of our conversation he said: 'Mr. Steele remarked to me that if he knew Upshaw would not run next time, he would not run for congress this time.'
"You have that word now—that is, if you received my last letter, ask Walter McElreath, who has known

COLLEGE PARK VOTES $65,000 BOND ISSUE

College Park, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—By the decisive vote of 355 to 45, citizens of College Park today voted a bond issue of $65,000, which will be used to erect three school buildings. The total registration was 510.

It is planned to erect a high school building and two primary buildings in different sections of the city. Anticipating that bonds would win, the city has gone forward with the plans, employing an architect, and it is expected that the new buildings will be ready for the fall opening of school.

The citizens of College Park are happy tonight in the knowledge that the bonds won, as it marks a forward step in the city's progress. Practically all civic bodies united in urging votes for bonds today.

As soon as legal technicalities are completed with the bonds will be validated and sold and actual work begun upon the buildings.

STATE OF OHIO, COUNTY OF RICHLAND—
Personally appeared before the undersigned, W. H. G. Kegg, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the Secretary of the Lumbermen's Mutual Insurance Co., and that the foregoing statement is correct and true.
W. H. G. KEGG, Secretary.
Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 15th day of February, 1926.

strictly enforcing grade rules and good conduct account for the use of handcuffs and striped clothing; fastening them in stocks in such a way as will cause them to be restricted in their movements for not longer than one hour at any one time, provided the prisoner is found to be physically sound upon examination by the camp physician.

The new rules are being sent to every warden in the state, with instructions to comply with them.

Methods Condemned.
The problem of adequate punishment for unruly prisoners has been one much interest in Georgia since the abolition some two years ago of use of the lash upon convicts in this state.

Last fall when members of the legislative penitentiary committee began making their trips of inspection to the various convict camps, many methods of punishment devised by wardens to substitute for the lash were condemned by the committee as barbarous and far worse than flogging.

Such contrivances as posts and beams by which convicts could be suspended from their wrists with their toes barely touching the ground; "stretchers," which pulled the convicts' joints in manner similar to the "rack" of medieval times, and a form of "crucifixion" by spread-eagling against a wooden fence, suspended by wrists and heels, were discovered in operation. The prison commission promptly set to work to devise rules of uniform punishment for control of all camps.

The new rules will go far toward solving the punishment problem in Georgia prisons, in the opinion of all members of the commission.

MEXICO WARNED TO CHANGE LAWS

Calles in the regulations carrying the laws into effect. He has intimated that the regulations now being drafted will not give retroactive effect to the laws. It is possible that the stern admonishment of Mexico by both the United States and Great Britain has given him pause.

Such intimations, however, the United States has found delusory. When the constitution of 1917 was promulgated, Washington protesting against the retroactive article 27 confiscatory, but President Obregon eventually promised that the laws carrying the article into effect would not be retroactive and confiscatory. The Calles administration came in and passed the laws which we find confiscatory and now we were told that the regulations carrying the laws into effect would not be subject to our criticism. All of which produces the impression that the Mexican government is "just kidding us along."

The contention of the American government is that the laws are cunningly devised to deprive a foreigner of his property in that country, even though it were acquired prior to the adoption of the 1917 constitution. Under these laws he cannot continue to hold his property unless he waives the protection of his government and in any event his ownership terminates upon his death. In some cases the ownership rights of corporations terminate in 10 years.

Controversy Nine Years Old.
Our position is that we do not oppose the application of such laws to property acquired since their passage, but that we do object to our nationals being deprived of property acquired theretofore under laws guaranteeing them unrestricted possession.

The controversy between the two countries as to American property rights in Mexico dates back to May 1, 1917, when the Carranza government adopted the existing Mexican constitution. In article 27 of that constitution, Mexico declared for the first time that, regardless of the ownership of any given tract of land, the oil and mineral deposits beneath the surface belonged to the nation. This was a radical departure from the policy which had dictated the various preceding laws and which had enabled and encouraged foreigners to explore and exploit the mineral resources of the country.

The question as to whether article 27 was to be interpreted as being retroactive immediately came up and recourse was had by several American oil companies to the Mexican courts. Meanwhile on February 10, 1918, the Carranza government aggravated the situation by imposing heavy taxes on petroleum lands and on contracts and royalties and exacted license fees for new drilling and explorations. The supreme court of Mexico, however, took the side of the oil companies and upheld all their rights which had been acquired prior to May 1, 1917.

Commission Was Appointed.
Finally, in September, 1922, President Obregon further clarified the situation by declaring that article 27 was non-retroactive. The Mexican government at that time had not been recognized by the United States but on the basis of this declaration a United States-Mexican commission was appointed and convened in Mexico City on May 14, 1923, to go into all questions in dispute between the two countries. This commission, composed of six of the most prominent Americans and two prominent Mexicans, sat until August 15, by which time all the differences between the two governments had been satisfactorily cleared up. As an immediate result of this conference, the United States government, on August 31, 1923, recognized the Mexican government under President Obregon.

Foreign corporations were not entirely satisfied with the results of the conference and maintained that the attitude of the Mexican government as evidenced by article 27, was ultimately confiscatory. Further negotiations were then instituted between the Mexican government and the foreign corporations themselves, grouped as the Association of Producers in Mexico. The Mexican treasury department was able to announce on October 15, 1924, that an amicable agreement had finally been reached between the government and the producers on all points of controversy.

MEXICO'S ANSWER RECEIVED BY KELLOGG.
(By Lease Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)
Washington, February 20.—Mexico's answer to the latest state department note protesting against the retroactive and confiscatory features of the new alien land and oil laws was received by Secretary of State Kellogg early today. No comment was made by the department as to its contents.

Well informed circles state that the Mexican answer reaffirms the position previously taken by that government. Mexico, from the beginning, has taken a directly opposite view from that advanced by Secretary Kellogg and has denied vigorously that the new laws were either retroactive or confiscatory.

Previously the Mexican government has intimated that the new laws will be administered in such a way as not to give offense to this government, and it is understood that this phase of the situation is dealt with in the new note.

No information was given out regarding when the Mexican correspondence would be made public. Both governments thus far have intimated that the other was responsible for the delay in making public the notes exchanged between the two governments.

CYRUS CURTIS RESIGNS OFFICE IN PRESS BODY

Orlando, Fla., February 20.—(AP)—Cyrus Curtis, publisher of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, has tendered his resignation as vice president of the International Press Foundation, according to a letter made public today addressed to former Congressman Charles D. Haines, of Altamont Springs, from John C. Martin, general manager of the Public Ledger company. Mr. Martin stated in his letter that Mr. Curtis requested that his resignation take effect immediately.

RUNS FOR CONGRESS

Pikeville, Ky., February 20.—Through the wild mountain country of Kentucky 12 escaped prisoners are fleeing for their lives tonight, while entangling groups of man-hunters close in upon the fugitives, determined to capture them dead or alive.

The prisoners have a ten-mile lead on the posses which are tracking them down. They also have a start of 12 hours. But to make good their escape they either must break through the cordon of armed officers and citizens or penetrate the wild mountains to the south, on the Virginia border. The latter outlet would be a perilous one.

The twelve men who are trying to flee the law broke jail in Pikeville Thursday. A posse, warranted after an all-night search through the tangled hill country, had returned here today, almost despairing of their hunt, when a new trail developed. George Harris, a mountaineer, rode into town and told of meeting the fugitives and routing them when they asked for food.

"Twelve men surrounded me in the woods and forced me to lead them to my home," Harris related. "I managed to attract my wife's attention by whistling. She and Jack and Jim and Henry, my sons, met the men with shotguns. They drove them off and they headed for the Virginia border."

RALEIGH FARMER AND WIFE DEAD IN SUICIDE PACT
Raleigh, N. C., February 20.—(AP)—C. M. Jackson, Wake county farmer, and his wife were found dead at their home today and their daughter, Dora Jackson, 37, critically wounded.

Officers called to the Jackson home by a neighbor, found Mrs. Jackson dead from ax blows while the daughter was unconscious from similar injuries. Jackson was dead of a shot gun wound.

A suicide "pact" theory has been advanced by investigating authorities.

MANIAC GUNMAN TERRIFIES OMAHA

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Omaha, Neb., February 20.—For six days Omaha has been in the grip of the terror of a maniac gunman and tonight the nerves of the people are worn to a frazzle. Business is disrupted, theaters are deserted, churches are neglected, while the people stand in dread of the unknown madman who shoots so accurately that during the week he has killed two without leaving a trace other than empty cartridge shells and has fatally wounded another, has fired shots through three or four lighted windows, has caused the death of one man from excitement, and has worked up both Omaha and Council Bluffs into a frenzy of fear.

At night the streets are deserted as soon as dusk falls and for blocks not a light can be seen on the ground floor of homes.

Here is a list of the most important outrages of the sniper:

Last week, shot Walter Peterson, conductor, as he was cranking his automobile. Peterson never saw where the bullet came from, but recovered the sudden pellet, which was later identified as from the same gun used by the madman.

Last Sunday evening, shot and killed William L. McDevitt.

Sunday night, fired through two lighted windows, barely missing those within.

Monday night, fired through window in Sisters of Mercy home.

Tuesday night, fired through drug store window at Miss Esther Mauthe.

Wednesday night, shot and killed a man in a crowd.

as the latter was making a purchase. Wednesday night, killed Dr. A. D. Searles, prominent physician, in Searles' office in downtown Omaha building.

Friday night, shot and mortally wounded Ross Johnson, Wabash railroad detective, in the Wabash railroad yards. Johnson was shot six times. He is the only one of the victims to have seen the killer and to live to tell it. Johnson, before lapsing into unconsciousness, was able to give the police a good description of the man, who stood 50 feet away and fired six shots at him, and scored six hits.

In every case, the killer left behind a connecting link in the shape of empty shells from his pistol or rifle. The firing point on the shells indicate that all were fired from the same gun. And the fact that no motive can be found for any of the outrages has caused specialists in narcotics to declare the killer is a madman with a homicidal mania, who at ordinary times is normal, but who occasionally seized with a desire to kill and starts out with his pistol to kill, regardless of his victim.

Department stores are badly affected by the general excitement. Today the Thompson-Belden store, one of the largest department stores in the city, cancelled all its newspaper advertising for Sunday and next week. President Belden says the fear of the madman killer has so taken the minds of Omaha people that they are not buying.

The effect on theaters, both speaking and moving pictures, is deadening. Attendance at afternoon shows has been dropping steadily, and at night the falling off is tremendous.

Official Drawing of Sears-Roebuck Plant

First picture of official architects' drawing of the $3,000,000 Sears-Roebuck mail order branch and retail store now being constructed on Ponce de Leon avenue near the Spiller property near the Ford plant.

The drawing was completed last week by George C. Nimmons & Co., Chicago architects. It calls for floor space of more than 600,000 square feet. The main building is to be nine stories in height with an English basement, and an adjoining one-story unit will be erected for handling incoming and outgoing shipments. A power plant in the rear of the main structure will provide the plant's own power. The store is expected to be ready for operation early this fall.

STORM THREATENS NEW TAX MEASURE

lars" today described the proposal as "unprecedented and unparalleled legislation for the benefit of a few persons."

There are indications that others will follow Mr. Newton's lead, but leaders predict the house will ratify the high-tide measure.

Senate approval also is expected by Wednesday night and the measure then will be sent to President Coolidge.

The revised estimates prepared today showed that the net saving to income tax payers this year will be $164,400,000. However, on the income taxes alone the savings will be about $219,000,000, but this is offset somewhat by the increase in the corporation income taxes.

FINANCIAL INCOME WORK BEING PUSHED.

Paris, February 20.—(AP)—The senate finance committee is diligently pushing ahead in its work on the financial measures, and prospects now are that its report will be ready for discussion Tuesday.

The committee is showing a disposition to conciliate its views as far as it can with those of the chamber's finance committee, in order to avoid a conflict between the houses. Several features of the chamber's bill have been amended, however, and some rejected, while the committee is inclined to favor a report suggesting new measures to balance the budget.

It will take at least another month, it is now feared, in chamber lobbies, to get final action on the bills, because as they return from the senate they are not likely to pass without changes.

The weakness of the franc for the last two days, when it again reached the record quotation of 28 to the dollar, is attributed to the fact that parliament will be obliged to vote another month's special appropriation in default of final adoption of the budget.

LANDLADY GETS WARRANT TO STOP CHARLESTON FANS

Evanston, Ill., February 20.—Reformers have denounced the Charleston, S. C., physicians have warned their patients but it remained for Mrs. Anna C. Olson, apartment house owner, to swear out a warrant for a Charleston dancer. The warrant was for Miss Dorothy Cope, Northwestern university co-ed, who occupies one of the apartments.

"They danced the Charleston until 2:30 o'clock Friday morning," the landlady complained in court, "then yesterday afternoon, 30 girls almost shook the walls down."

The case has been set for Tuesday, at which time Justice of the Peace Samuel Harrison will be called upon to decide if Charleston dancing is disorderly conduct.

RALEIGH FARMER SLAYS DAUGHTER, WIFE AND SELF

Raleigh, N. C., February 20.—(AP)—With the death in a Raleigh hospital today of Dora Jackson, of Leesville, the death toll of a tragedy in her father's farm house was raised to three. C. M. Jackson, 63, well known farmer of the Leesville section, near here, and his wife were found dead this morning in their home, and Dora Jackson, 37, was dying, after what appears to police to have been a double murder and suicide.

The bodies of both women were hacked, evidently with an ax, and Jackson was found, his head literally blown to pieces with a shotgun.

Police officers believe that Jackson attacked his wife and daughter with the ax, then went into another room and bracing the muzzle of the shotgun under his chin, killed himself.

Citizens of Gilmer In Big Mass Meeting Indorse Extra Session

Ellijay, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—A large crowd of Gilmer county citizens greeted Governor Clifford Walker when he spoke here Wednesday, explaining in detail the subjects included in the extra session call of the legislature.

The speaking took place in the school auditorium, the 400 pupils attending the meeting and listening attentively to the governor's plea for better educational advantages for the state.

At the close of the meeting resolutions were adopted commending the governor for calling the extra session of the legislature and indorsing the extra session subjects. The legis. for and senator from Gilmer were requested to support such legislation as will afford a modern, scientific and unified system of public education, which will give every child in the state an equal opportunity, and a modern and complete system of hard-surfaced highways connecting county site with county site, and to provide suitable means for the happiness and comfort of the state's Confederate soldiers.

W. F. GEORGE TO SPEAK MONDAY IN ATHENS

Athens, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—Senator Walter F. George will deliver the Washington day address here at the University of Georgia Monday, February 22. He will discuss the events of the Washington administration.

The address will be delivered in the university chapel and the public is invited to hear it.

Three Deaths Laid To Wife Of Fireman

New Orleans, February 20.—The husband and children of 23-year-old Mrs. Renette Bussey began to die one by one until finally with Bussey and two children dead and a third child very ill, the police today arrested the mother and charged her with poisoning all four.

The deaths in the Bussey family have all occurred in recent months.

Lawrence Bussey, the husband was a city fireman. He died last April under what the police say were mysterious circumstances. The children, one of which was a 16-month-old baby, died early this year.

Little Verdia Bussey, aged 5, is in Charity hospital suffering from a "strange illness."

COOLIDGE REMAINS AT HOME WITH COLD

Washington, February 20.—President Coolidge cancelled his engagements and remained in his room resting in an effort to completely shake off the cold that has persisted since last Tuesday. White house officials reported improvement stating his decision to rest was simply a precaution.

President Coolidge is scheduled to address the 50th annual convention of the National Education association on Monday. Major James F. Coughal, white house physician, expressed confidence today that the president would be sufficiently recovered to make the speech.

PLAN NATIONAL SHRINE OF HOME OF HENRY CLAY

Lexington, Ky., February 20.—(AP)

Sons of the Revolution today inaugurated a movement to make "Ashland," the home of Henry Clay, the great commoner of pre-civil war days, a national shrine.

Judge Samuel M. Wilson, a historian of prominence, was appointed general chairman of a committee to be named by the Sons that will direct whatever campaign is necessary to attain their objective. Next week a general meeting of representatives of all the historic and civic organizations in the city will be called to outline in detail the plans for the purchase of this estate.

Professor Darst left for Washington tonight, where he will present the resolution adopted here today to the senate agriculture committee.

The two-day conference, which ended today, was called primarily for the purpose of forming a Tennessee-Missouri unit of the cotton acreage reduction movement association. Discussion of ways and means of acreage reduction occupied the greater part of the session.

The meeting was attended by state farm bureau presidents and secretaries from Tennessee, Arkansas, Missouri, Texas, Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia, Oklahoma and Mississippi.

The general purpose of the conference, E. P. Taylor, director of organization of the American Farm Bureau Federation, Chicago, said, was "more service, more members and mass action."

Definite plans for the extension of the work of the farm bureau were brought out, and reports from Alabama, Texas, Louisiana and Tennessee indicated that state-wide organization campaigns were now under way in those states. Complete cooperation of government farm workers in reduction and organization was pledged by officials representing those groups.

OGDEN'S RESIGNATION FROM ARMY ACCEPTED

San Antonio, Texas, February 20, (AP)—Information that the resignation of Lieutenant Henry H. Ogden, round-the-world flier, has been accepted by the war department, was received at Kelly Field today.

As soon as he is able to leave he expects to go to Mexico City to visit friends a few days before going north to join Lieutenant Leigh Wade and party in making plans for the proposed arctic flight.

He will visit Henry Ford's airplane factory at Detroit on the way to New York and will investigate the possibility of using planes built by Ford for the flight to the North Pole.

GIRL SCOUTS PLAN PAGEANT MARCH 12

Plans for the presentation of a big pageant by the Girl Scout organizations of Atlanta on the night of March 12 have been completed, according to an announcement Saturday by Mrs. Harvey Parry, who is in charge of the work of the Girl Scouts in Atlanta. The pageant will represent the ideals of youth and will trace these ideals in successive scenes from the days of ancient Greece to the present day. The pageant plans are being carried out under the direction of Mrs. Frank Holland, in charge of arrangements, and Mrs. Parry, who is director of stage production.

Dr. C. E. Buchanan will have charge of a large special orchestra which will furnish music for the occasion. Chorus members of Girl Scouts will also be one of the features. Miss Victoria Montgomery will serve as assistant stage director, while Miss Isabel Randolph of Agnes Scott college will have charge of the girls who will represent the athletes of ancient Greece in the first episode.

Rehearsals of the individual groups began February 17 and there is a total of more than 200 girls in the cast. Boy Scout organizations of Atlanta will assist in the production by serving as ushers.

Reservations for seats are now being made at the Girl Scout headquarters on the fifth floor of the Chamber of Commerce building.

CONSTANT CURLING AND WAVING RUINS HAIR

DAVIDSON SINGERS WILL APPEAR HERE

Girls just must curl and wave bobbed hair to appear prettiest. But constant curling and waving burn and dry the luster, vitality and very life from the hair.

To offset these bad effects, just get a 30-cent bottle of delightful, refreshing "Dandierine" at any drug store or toilet counter and just see for yourself how quickly it revives dry, brittle, lifeless and fading hair.

"Dandierine" is a dependable tonic and will do wonders for any girl's hair. It nourishes, stimulates and strengthens each single hair, bringing back that youthful gleam, glint and vigorous luxuriance. Falling hair stops and dandruff disappears. "Dandierine" is pleasant and easy to use. —(adv.)

CURED HIS RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no loss time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation. If you write to me, Eugene M. Fulton, Carpenter, 207 N. Marietta Avenue, Marietta, Ga., I will better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation. —(adv.)

WOODRUFF ANNOUNCES FOR TRAMMELL'S SEAT

Albert J. Woodruff, of Decatur, formally announced his candidacy Saturday to succeed the late Paul B. Trammell as a member of the Georgia public service commission. Mr. Woodruff will be a candidate for both the unexpired term of Mr. Trammell and the succeeding term of six years.

In making his announcement Mr. Woodruff says that he contemplates an active campaign all over the state. Freight rates bearing on agriculture have been made a subject of constant work and study for the past 25 years by Mr. Woodruff, he declares, and he expressed the belief that commercial interests of the state, comprising the agricultural, retail and manufacturing business do not now have adequate representation on the commission.

Mr. Woodruff was a candidate for the public service commission in the primary of 1924, at that time contesting the reelection of the late James D. Price. He defeated Mr. Woodruff by less than 4,000 votes, when Commissioner Price died last fall, Governor Walker named Orrin Roberts, of Monroe, to fill the vacancy.

The vacancy pending election was filled by Governor Walker by appointment of John T. Boisseuillet. While Mr. Boisseuillet has as yet made no announcement, it is generally believed that he also will be a candidate for the place in September primaries.

EMORY HOLDS OFF FOR 'YW' CAMPAIGN

Announcement was made Saturday by H. Y. McCord, general chairman, that the campaign which was to have started Monday morning to raise $750,000 for Emory university, had been postponed one week in order to allow the Young Women's Christian association to complete their campaign.

Mell R. Wilkinson, who is directing the "YW" drive, stated Saturday night that this unselfish action upon the part of Emory and the gentlemen who are in charge of that campaign was characteristic of the south. It had been hoped, Mr. Wilkinson stated, that the "YW" campaign could be completed during the one week, but this had been found impossible.

With a clear field in which to work, Mr. Wilkinson expressed the opinion that they will have no difficulty in raising the remainder of the $750,000 they are asking for.

Several substantial subscriptions were added to the "YW" fund Saturday, it was announced. Among these was one for $500 by Harry D. Tipton, president of the Southern Baking company; one for $1,000 from a lady who asks that her name not be used; and one of $2,500 from the Southern Baking company. Additional smaller subscriptions amounted to $1,000 more, making a total of $82,000 that has actually been subscribed to date.

This amount includes only cards that have actually been properly signed and turned into campaign headquarters, drive officials stated. It does not take into account several thousand dollars in promised subscriptions and it does not include a great deal of money that is still in the hands of workers.

Each of the ministers of Atlanta have been asked to devote all or a part of their Sunday morning sermons to the "YW," and to allow members of their congregations to distribute and collect subscription cards during the morning service.

FORD INSPECTS HIS GEORGIA LAND

Savannah, Ga., February 20.—(AP.) "I cannot possibly tell you a thing about it right now, but I may be able to tell you something when I return from inspecting the land," was the statement of Henry Ford, Detroit automobile manufacturer, this morning, in reply to the question as to what purposes he expected to put the acreage he purchased in Bryan county several months ago.

Mr. Ford, Mrs. Ford and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ives, of Dearborn, arrived at Savannah shortly after 10 o'clock aboard Mr. Ford's private yacht the "Sallia," and after being greeted by Mayor Hull and a number of others on board the yacht at the municipal docks, left in an auto for Bryan county to make an inspection of his land.

When it came to speaking of the south and this part of it in particular, Mr. Ford talked freely and enthusiastically. "For it was in the south that I first got my start," he declared. "We started our company in the fall 23 years ago, and of course our first agents were in the south, and they were a fine of men, too, many of them still being with the company."

"I can hardly realize the great progress the south as a whole is making. It has most assuredly come into its own, and there is no power that can hold it back," he said.

The automobile manufacturer was greeted upon his arrival at the municipal dock by several hundred people who had gathered to get a glimpse of him and to view the beautiful floating palace where he lives while on the water.

As soon as the "Sallia" docked, Mayor Hull, accompanied by Mark Fenton and Thomas Purse, of the board of trade; J. E. Herbert, of the Savannah Motor club, and a Savannah Press reporter, boarded the yacht and were met by Mr. Ford on the after deck where the party were welcomed to the city and extended the usual courtesies. Mr. Ford admired the fine weather with which he was greeted here. He was greatly interested in the river front and commented favorably on the facilities afforded shipping at Savannah. He showed the party over the yacht, which is 200 feet in length and most luxuriously fitted out with every comfort and convenience conceivable. The boat carries a crew of 25.

After spending a day at the Ford holdings in Bryan county, the party returned to Savannah late this afternoon and again boarded the yacht. He will remain here until Monday it was announced.

French Defeat Prevents Wreck Of Locarno Pact

BY JOHN STEELE.

Copyright, 1926, by The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.

London, February 20.—Now that the effort to enlarge the permanent membership of the council of the League of Nations by the introduction of Spain, Poland and Brazil, has been definitely abandoned after the greatest defeat of French policy in years, it is possible to tell the detailed story of the development of the crisis which threatened to wreck the Locarno pact.

When Germany agreed at Locarno to enter the League of Nations, the allied statesmen promised it would have a permanent seat on the council as a great power.

The French, however, immediately began scheming to counteract the influence which such a seat would give Germany, and a proposal was put forward that Poland, who is now Germany's chief enemy in Europe, also be given a permanent seat and that Brazil and Spain, as Latin powers, also be introduced.

Through French intrigue, the vatican was also induced to support the entry of these powers, because they were Catholic nations and for the good of the church. Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, was also persuaded to take at least a favorable view of the French demand, although it is doubtful if he gave any definite promise, this not being in his power without the authority of the British cabinet.

The French, however, undoubtedly considered him as committed to support them and there is equally little doubt that he at least encouraged their pretensions.

When Sir Austen returned to England, however, there was such an outburst of indignation among the press and people over the breaking of faith with Germany that he was forced to take a new line, and now France has acquiesced and abandoned its demand for the time being.

There was another feature of the French plan which still remained to be dealt with. Behind the plan to increase the membership of the council of the League of Nations there was a plan to later change the rules of the council to make a majority instead of a unanimous vote sufficient for a decision. This, with the solid Latin bloc, among which Poland must be included, meant the definite French control of the league.

Sweden, alarmed at this, has taken a definite stand against this change in the constitution of the council and will probably be able to defeat it.

All this is an object lesson of what might have happened to the United States if it were in the League of Nations.

The European powers have been wire-pulling, plotting and combining, either to secure control of the League of Nations or to force their rivals from controlling it, and neutral powers like Sweden, Holland and the South American states, which have no direct interest in the issues, would be dragged in. Had the United States been a member of the league, it would undoubtedly have been involved in this welter of European hates, rivalries and attempts to bargain for buy-and-sell and support.

The Women the Men Admire

THOUSANDS of women are daily asking themselves, "How can I make myself the envy of my sisters and the center of attraction to the men?"

Many women on every hand and quite probably your neighbor will tell you that they regained youthful vitality and the appearance of youth by taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Many women after they are thirty years of age begin to lose their freshness and charm. A woman may complain of headaches, pains in the back and lower limbs, is nervous and irritable and this is the time she must heed the warning and advise with some one like the Medical Staff of Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel at Buffalo, New York.

Confidential advice by letter will be given free of charge and many women have been thankful for getting early advice as to what to do to keep attractive. A beautiful skin, sparkling eyes, vigor and vivacity follow when the woman takes a course of treatment with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which can be obtained in any drug store, in fluid or tablet form.

One woman who has regained health thru its use says: "I was suffering with a nervous breakdown. I became very weak, was so nervous I could not sleep or rest at night. I had no appetite, my back hurt and I seemed to ache and pain all over. A friend persuaded me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it did wonders for me. It restored my nerves and completely restored my health in every way. 'Favorite Prescription' made a new woman of me."—Mrs. Albin Johnson, 4236 Pendleton Ave., Tampa, Fla.—(adv.)

SHORT WEIGHTS HIT IN ENGLAND

London, February 20.—(AP)—The government's food council, after a long debate today issued a report urging drastic legislation to prevent traders from giving short weight or measure in the sale of foodstuffs. The investigation revealed instances in which the public has been seriously overcharged.

The chief recommendation is that giving short weight on measure and oral misrepresentations of weights and measures shall be made statutory offenses.

It is understood that Sir Philip Chiffley-Lester, president of the board of trade, will recommend that the council's suggestions be embodied in a bill to be introduced shortly in parliament.

The council recommends that a wide range of foodstuffs shall be retained by net weight, including meat, bread, cereals, coffee, cocoa and jam. It also recommends that milk to be retained in half pints and multiples thereof. The council asserts that there is an astonishingly prevalent practice of giving short measure in selling milk. It found one firm which by using under-sized milk bottles, was able to make an extra profit of 1,400 pounds a year.

Young Woman Forsakes Bar For Convent

Chicago, February 20.—(AP)—Chicago's youngest woman lawyer was missing today from the meeting of the Gamma Chapter of Kappa Beta Psi, women's legal sorority, of which she had been an enthusiastic member.

Her partner, Miss Marguerite McGuinness, said that the missing Portia, Miss Catherine Brophy, had slipped away last week without farewells, explaining later in a letter written on the train that she was to enter a convent at Dubuque, Iowa.

Miss Brophy's first case resulted in the acquittal of her younger brother, Edward, accused of talking back to a policeman. The talking had occurred after he had been struck by an automobile and a crowd had gathered, bringing with it a policeman. He was lodged in a police station cell.

"None of the Brophys will be imposed upon while they have a lawyer in the family to defend them," said his counsel.

Bert Kuhn Dies.

Shanghai, Sunday, February 21.—(AP)—Bert L. Kuhn, of Chicago, widely known as a correspondent in the Far East, died today of pneumonia. He had been correspondent at Honolulu and Manila, and had worked in Chicago and San Francisco.

Georgia National Guard Being Inspected

Prominent figures in the annual federal inspection of Georgia national guard organizations, shown above, are, left to right, Adjutant General Charles H. Cox, Brigadier General H. D. Russell, of Macon; Lieutenant Colonel J. M. Kimbrough, senior instructor of the Georgia guard, and Major W. L. Jones, chief inspecting officer, who is now engaged in visiting and inspecting all Georgia national guard troops. Major Jones is expected to complete this week his inspection of all units of the 122d infantry, "Atlanta's own" regiment. General Cox is the head of the Georgia guard and also is commanding officer of the Atlanta regiment. General Russell commands a brigade composed of a South Carolina regiment and the 121st Georgia regiment. Colonel Kimbrough, as Georgia's senior instructor, is the "last word" in training programs and since his assignment to the state the guard has taken on new life and now is considered among the best state guard organizations in the country.

Major Jones, chief inspecting officer, formerly served at Fort McPherson and is well known here. He recently has been serving as instructor to the Florida national guard.

Library Literary Notes

BY CLYDE PETTUS, OF THE CARNEGIE LIBRARY

A Young Lady's Diverting Adventures

The title page of "The Diary of a Young Lady of Fashion in the Year 1764-1765," states that the chronicle is the work of Cleone Knox, an Irish girl of consequence some two hundred odd years ago and that the present credit for its appearance is due to a kinsman, Alexander Blacker Kerr. In a preface Mr. Kerr explains his finding the journal in four leather-bound notebooks among the family papers, and offers an apology for his relative's grammar and general style which falls somewhat below more critical, present-day standards. With such brief preliminaries, and the assurance, that though no existing miniature or portrait of Miss Knox has been discovered, tradition has it that the lady was not deficient either in beauty or charm, the editor stands aside for the diverting incidents recorded by the (captivated) Pen of his ancestress.

Either English critics have been misled by those who find in them a prejudice against things Irish or in the case of "Cleone" they have been "caught" by her droll yuck as she confessedly was by her own "Handsome Wretch," Mr. A. for the book's first appearance called forth a nine days' wonder in England and the London Times proclaimed that this diary "must take its place beside that of Mr. Pope's." It is true that there are mischievous about Miss Knox's "Burke's" "Landed Gentry" fails to yield any information of her once delightful existence, and is silent even upon the subject of her kinsman, Mr. Kerr. But whether the 18th century diarist showed only an extraordinary astuteness in her appeal to modern readers or whether there is the more obvious explanation that English reviewers suspect, it is certain that the heroine from County Down will not lack an audience of sufficient numbers.

The principal story related in Miss Knox's journal has been met with in fiction of periods less remote. There have been suitors as impudent and profligate as the bold black ancestor and parents as odorous as Edward Knox, of Castle Kearney. Nor is it a new method of applying balm to love that is forbidden its smooth course to try what time and the grand tour may do for lacerated affections. It is the heroine of the diary who is surprising—with reticence as non-existent as her capital letters are abundant.

With a true sense of the dramatic, Cleone begins her chronicle the morning after Mr. A.'s bold attempt to climb the ivy below her window has ended in humiliation and the destruction of a crimson plush suit. Banishment to Ballinacreech not proving so jolly as it sounds and the Irish sutor letting no grass grow under the wheels of his pursuing post-chaise, Cleone's third week entries record parental anger and unseemly epithets followed by a prodigious bustle in preparation for the tour. In obedience to the dictates of the infallible "Traveler's Aid," the party is equipped with such necessities as:

"A portfolio case of instruments for writing, a sketch book and a note book, an opera glass, a tinder box, a night lamp, sheets and a quilt, a navigator's compass in a snuff box, a thermometer and tooth pick in a cane, a barometer in a sword, a blunderbuss and a case of pistols," which in addition to vast wardrobes and sundry Prayerbooks, fans and combs boxes was quite as much as any six horses fresh as daisies could be expected to push.

Finds English Insignia.
After County Down Cleone finds England a bit insipid, the inhabitants of Derbyshire contributing to this effect by having "clean, busy air about them, as if they loved work and were anxious to do their duty." But her spirits are only momentarily dashed by this state of affairs, a rustic wardrobe requiring such fascinating additions as rose brooches and lace caps, and country manners receiving instruction in the graceful use of language and the art of conversation. Tell your daughter that the genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother, you must say "California." Refuse any imitation.—(adv.)

Two Men Scalded Reported Injured
The condition of C. S. Stanford, 35, of 289 Central avenue, one of two men who were scalded by hot water when a tank in Black's restaurant in Hills Park exploded early Saturday morning, is not serious. It was stated by officials of Grady hospital.

J. C. Hutcheson, of 50 Houston street, who was seated at the same table with Stanford when the pair were drenched by the boiling water, was permitted to go home after receiving treatment at the hospital.

JAYCEES WILL OFFER EDUCATION COURSES
Two additional educational courses will be offered by the junior chamber of commerce. Charles W. Binns, assistant solicitor of Fulton county, will teach a course in parliamentary law, starting March 2, at 6:30 o'clock, and a special commercial law course will be taught by Joseph A. Jordan, former law instructor at George Washington university.

No fees will be charged, as in the salesmanship-personality class under Roy LeCraw. The latter has a present enrollment of 80, according to J. F. Gordy, secretary of the chamber. Business women are invited to enroll in the courses.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS HOLD COUNCILS IN BROOKS
Quitman, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—A series of Sunday school workers' councils are being held in Brooks county, preparatory to the state convention which is to be held in Albany in April and the Mercer association, which will be held at Beulah church in this county in May. Meetings have been held recently at Barney and Barwick, the Thomasville and Boston districts.

Colfeurs and Curt Papers.
In London Miss Knox discovered that the thrifty among great ladies saved hair-dressing costs by keeping their heads "unopened" for so long a time that a nest of mice was found concealed within one coiffure. The heroine's own addiction to curl papers was responsible for the destruction of a "pretty little poem on a tabby cat" unfortunately for posterity not written in her diary.

French innkeepers justified a preconceived ill opinion by robbing the party of a quantity of linen ruffles and a gilt snuff box; and French ladies of quality were stocking a shade too deeply blue to please their visitors. Even the presentation to their Majesties at Versailles was a disappointment to Cleone who found "Marie Lesclapart an old Dowdy, the Dauphin like a skeleton, the royal daughters plain and clumsy and the royal infants sickly."

But on the whole the diary shows zestful days of adventure culminating in an entirely romantic elopement in Venice where the ex-coachman, Paddy, in melancholy default of horses, had turned his Irish ingenuity to rowing a gondola. As for "Cleone" she records no more after an ecstatic statement of Mr. A.'s arrival in Venice, but her kinsman, Mr. Kerr is kinder and adds an envoy to the effect that the lady of long ago lived—as they say—happy ever after—with 12 children, eight of whom were boys.

FULTON HI SCHOOL SOCIETY IS NAMED FOR JOSEPH BROWN

"The Joseph E. Brown Literary and Debating Society" has been chosen as the official name for more than 700 students of Fulton High school who gather in the auditorium of the new school on Washington street for frequent public debates. W. F. Dykes, principal, announced Saturday.

The name was chosen by the students, it was pointed out, because it was on the site of the new school that the mansion of Georgia's war governor stood and where he lived from 1865 to 1894. It was here that the governor's daughter, Miss Mary Brown, now Mrs. E. L. Connally, was married to Doctor Connally, and many other events in Atlanta's social history took place.

A junior high school of the Atlanta system was named for Governor Brown. Fulton High school is in the county system, of which J. A. Wells is superintendent.

Ford Makes 57 Miles On Gallon of Gasoline
Pukwana, S. D.—J. A. Stranky of this city has invented a device which in actual test has increased the power and mileage of automobiles from 25 to 50 per cent and removes carbon from the cylinders. With it attached automobiles have made from 35 to 57 miles on a gallon of gasoline. Another remarkable feature of this simple and amazing device is that its action is governed entirely by the motor, making it automatic. It can be installed by anyone in five minutes. Mr. Stranky wants distributors and is willing to send a sample at his risk. Send your name and address to J. A. Stranky, B-534 Stranky Bldg., Pukwana, S. Dak., today.—(adv.)

OUCH! BACKACHE! RUB LUMBAGOAWAY
When your back is sore and lame or lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a 35 cent bottle of old, honest St. Jacobs Oil at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub it right on your aching back, and the soreness and lameness is gone.

In use for 65 years, this soothing, penetrating oil takes the pain right out, and ends the misery. It is absolute.

It is harmless and doesn't burn the skin.—(adv.)

GORE RETRIAL MOVE IS SET FOR TUESDAY

Hearing on a motion for a new trial for Mel M. Gore, Buckhead barber, convicted and sentenced to die in the electric chair March 24, in connection with the murder of William H. Cheek, Peachtree road grocer, was postponed Saturday until Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock by Judge John D. Humphries in Fulton superior court.

Attorney Reuben A. Garland, of the defense counsel, asked that the hearing be postponed until next Saturday, stating that counsel desired more time for the preparation of the amended motion which would set out 35 alleged errors as a basis for the new trial. Judge Humphries declined to grant the request and notified Attorney Garland to be ready Tuesday morning.

Announcement was made that Attorney Garland would be assisted in his plea for a new trial by Attorneys W. A. James, Linton James, Clifford James, and M. S. Maritz, of New York.

NEGRO K. P.'S TO PLAN ANNIVERSARY AFFAIR

Plans for the 47th anniversary of the colored Knights of Pythias, March 28, will be made at a meeting at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Castle hall, 223 1-2 Auburn avenue. The anniversary celebration will be held at the city auditorium and all of the 26 lodges in the Atlanta district will take part, according to officials of the order.

Upshaw Debates 18th Amendment With La Guardia

Rochester, N. Y., February 20.—(AP) Debating dry law enforcement here today, Congressman Fiorella H. La Guardia, of New York, declared it had broken down entirely and become a joke, while Congressman William D. Upshaw, of Georgia, held that the country had benefited and now is facing a test of the possibility of enacting into law a great moral principle.

Congressman La Guardia asserted the 18th amendment has been found impracticable and protested that while some are stressing the importance of the 18th amendment, the 14th amendment, dealing with human rights and liberties, "is as dead as a door nail in certain sections of the country."

Congressman Upshaw said there were only 20 congressmen who would dare put their names to a manifesto calling for repeal of the 18th amendment, and that many, although nominally wet, know their districts are dry and would refuse to be counted with the wet vote.

COLLINS-GLENNVILLE RAILROAD TO EXTEND

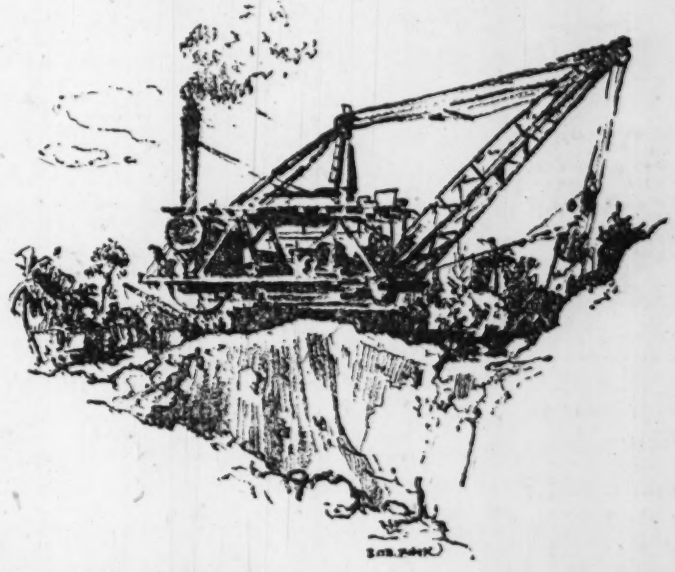

Glennville, Ga., February 20.—At a meeting of the stockholders of the Collins and Glennville Railroad company held at its office here it was decided to extend the line from Glennville to Ludowici, where it will connect with the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad company.

This will give the Collins and Glennville railroad three trunk line connections, one with the Atlantic Coast Line at Ludowici and two at Collins, one with the Seaboard and one with the Central of Georgia.

By the extension of this line it will serve 20 miles of territory that has been without railroad facilities for several years and will be quite a boost to property in this city and along the line of the road. The right of way which was formerly used by the old Georgia Coast and Piedmont railroad has practically been secured and work will be started as soon as permission can be secured from the interstate commerce commission and will be rushed as rapidly as possible.

$207,800,000 construction— proof of Coral Gables' prosperity

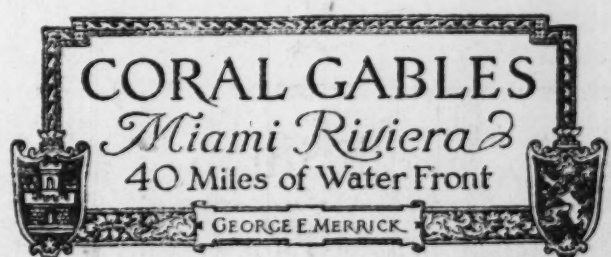

CONSTRUCTION is more than a symbol of growth and activity. It is the guarantee of prosperity. The following facts are Miami's answers to the propaganda put out by bankers, realtors and city officials in various parts of the country to stop the flow of capital to Florida for investment. Read them.

Outside capital is engaged in construction operations at Coral Gables to the extent of $207,800,000. These figures cover actual construction and building programs of 221 contractors. They embrace the completed cost of 2112 homes, 78 apartments and 25 commercial buildings. Thirty of these contractors alone, in work already begun and work planned for early construction, show a total of $147,000,000. Herewith is the list in detail:

30 leading contractors with estimated cost of their building projects
American Building Corp., Cincinnati, owners; Myers & Cooper Co., Cincinnati, contractors; 1000 homes	$75,000,000

Southwest Georgia Solons Overwhelmingly in Favor Of Paving State Highways

Practically All Favor Improved Highways, But Differ as to Method To Be Employed.

Albany, Ga., February 20.—(AP)—Revealing a wide divergence of opinion as to the best method to be employed, legislators of southwest Georgia have expressed an overwhelming favor of paving the highways of the state, and as soon as possible.

Opinions were obtained from 21 solons in this section of the state in a symposium just completed by the Albany Herald, and all but two argued heartily for paving.

"Without exception," says The Herald, "the other 19 were in favor of paved roads, and all who were willing to submit an opinion ventured the idea that bonds would have to be issued or a revision of the special state taxes made. Many declared they were approaching the coming extra session with an open mind and were not committed to any method of raising funds for the paving work."

"One of the dissenters, Representative George Riley, of Sumter county, assumed the role of prophet and envisioned a black outlook for the state unless Georgians put their autos up, 'quit chasing pretty visions in the air, and go back to work,' says The Herald. The other, J. D. Miller, of Terrell county, refused to express an opinion on the ground that he had not been notified officially that Governor Walker had called an extra session of the legislature.

Continuing, The Herald says: "Eleven expressed opposition to a bond issue unless some provision could be made to care for the interest and sinking fund without placing an increased burden of taxation on the people of the state. By far the majority were in favor of a revision of the present taxes on gasoline and vehicle taxes to care for the redemption and interest on the suggested bonds. Six were unalterably opposed to a state bond issue."

Opposition Voiced.
The statements of those opposed to a bond issue follow:

O. B. McElvey, of Mitchell—"I oppose an unqualified bond issue on the grounds that it is not fair to the counties which have already met federal appropriations and have paved their main highways."

Dr. C. L. Ketchum, of Lee—"Although favoring paving, I am opposed to a bond issue because it would place too great a burden of taxation on the next generation."

A. T. King, of Mitchell—"I am unalterably opposed to a state bond issue."

E. H. Griffin, of Decatur—"The state highways should be paved, but I am opposed to a bond issue for the purpose."

A. L. Miller, from Ninth District—"Georgia highways should be paved, but I do not believe a bond issue should be employed."

Robert L. Gillen, of Stewart—"I do not favor a bond issue for roads."

AN OLD STORY EMPHASIZED

Over fifty years ago we told how helpful Scott's Emulsion could be to young babies, growing children, the youth in the teens, the nursing mother and down to the aged.

Our story was believed because it was true and now, after fifty years, in all confidence, we are able to emphasize this story unchanged.

Scott's Emulsion of vitamin-tested, invigorating cod-liver oil with glycerine and hypophosphites of lime and soda, is just as potent today as it was five decades ago in its power to nourish and build up the human body.

You will be surprised how much strength and resistance can be obtained by taking a very little regularly every day.

R. O. T. C. FLAYS LANE CIRCULAR

Adoption of a report opposing arguments contained in the Lane circular aimed against military training for the youth of America, indorsement of the national defense act and election of officers featured the annual meeting Saturday of the Association of Reserve Officers' Training Corps Colleges, fourth corps area, at Georgia Tech.

The policy of inadequate appropriations in the development of R. O. T. C. units was deplored and styled as "unwise, unsound and uneconomical." It was urged that the units be maintained at their full strength and efficiency.

Referring to the national defense act, the report stated: "We record our conviction that this policy offers the best, wisest, most democratic, most efficient and most economical system of national defense for a nation that has no design of aggression, but desires to maintain itself in security with the least possible disturbance of the economic employment of its citizens."

The committee offering the report on the Lane circular was composed of Dr. G. H. Denny, University of Alabama, chairman; Chancellor C. M. Snelling, University of Georgia; Dr. E. W. Sikes, Clemson college; Major W. E. Broucher, Louisiana State university, and Major A. C. Tipton, University of Florida.

After the morning session delegates were entertained at a luncheon at the Capital City club and a trip to Stone Mountain in the afternoon.

Round table discussions were held on the following subjects: "R. O. T. C. Work With Special Reference to the Lane Circular"; "Chicago Resolutions of Land Grant Colleges"; "Should R. O. T. C. Colleges Have a Distinctive Uniform?"; "Suggested Changes in the Basis of Awarding the Corps Area Gallery Competition Trophy"; and "Fort Monroe vs. Fort Barrancas for Camp of Artillery Unit." It was voted not to change R. O. T. C. uniforms.

Colonel O. T. Bond, president of the Citadel, Charleston, S. C., was named president to succeed Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech. Major A. G. Goodwyn was elected secretary, and Charleston, S. C., was selected for the meeting next April.

VOL. LVIII, No. 253.

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 21, 1926.

State Road Bonds Urged by Anderson In Slap at Board

Editor of Macon Telegraph and Former Highway Board Member 'Explains' Opposition.

SITUATION CALLED 'MISERABLE FARCE'

"Pay-As-You-Go" Plan Characterized by Macon Editor as 'Political Sop' For Legislators.

W. T. Anderson, editor of The Macon Telegraph and former member of the Georgia highway board, publishes today in his paper, a lengthy statement regarding the proposed state road bond issue and the motives which he sees actuating opposition to this issue on the part of the highway board.

Mr. Anderson declares that he has consistently said nothing about either roads or bonds since he resigned from the board but that he is impelled to make this statement by letters which he has received from all parts of the state asking information regarding the "road-paving situation" and a "frank opinion regarding Mr. Holder's action in desiring to defeat the bonds."

Mr. Anderson brands a recent statement issued by Mr. Holder, chairman of the highway board, opposing the bond issue and advocating a "pay-as-you-go" plan for road building, as "nothing more than a political sop for the legislators and the people opposed to progress, based upon a guess as to their being in the majority."

"Sickening Demagoguery."

He adds, "this statement is full of the most sickening demagoguery." He then points out that the plan advocated by Mr. Holder contemplates using every dollar of the counties' credit and money to build the state system of roads, leaving no resources for building and maintaining the county roads, whereas the bond issue plan will let the state build the state roads and leave county money for county roads.

It is of little value to have state highways running through a county, Mr. Anderson points out, if the tributary roads are impassable, blocking people from their use. He contends that financing of state roads which are used by the people of the entire state and by tourists should be on a state-wide basis, such as bonds, which are paid for by the gasoline tax money contributed by all motorists, while county roads, of first importance to the people of the county should be paid for and maintained by county funds and the one-cent of the gasoline tax so allocated.

"The board says it can build the state system of 7,000 miles of paved roads in Georgia with the present and prospective income within a period of seven years," Mr. Anderson declares. "Any one familiar with the state system of 7,000 miles of paved roads in Georgia with the present and prospective income within a period of seven years," Mr. Anderson declares. "Any one familiar with the state system of 7,000 miles of paved roads in Georgia with the present and prospective income within a period of seven years," Mr. Anderson declares.

Favors State Bonds.

"I am in favor," Mr. Anderson continues, "of a state bond issue in sufficient amount to take care of the state system. The suggestion of $70,000,000 seems reasonable, but it appears to me that the amount is immaterial if the bonds are properly safeguarded." He then states that he favors the plan for a state-wide bond commission composed of one member from each district and would have this commission only authorize use of the bond money for paving projects when there was no other fund available.

"The whole situation is a miserable farce," he says. "The people are floundering in mud up to their eyebrows. Their business is suspended after every rain. Their money is going out at the bung hole while they and their highway department busy themselves with the crack in the barrel."

Atlantan Fires Lifeline To Doomed Ship

Colonel C. C. Hearne, artillery expert on three months' leave from Fort McPherson, succeeded in firing the lifeline to the floundering British freighter, Antioch, after a terrific four-day battle with the elements in mid-ocean recently. Colonel Hearne, who is attached to artillery headquarters, fourth corps area, is shown above at the right, with Captain George Fried, left, at Cherbourg, France. In the former's hands is a purse of $1,500 collected from passengers for families of seamen lost from the Roosevelt. HEIR TO FORTUNE BURNED TO DEATH BY FIRE IN ROOM Blaze Is Started in Chicago Hotel by Lighted Cigarette; Companion Narrowly Escapes.

Chicago, February 20.—Frederick Beverly Pearson, 30 years old, with a $50,000 alimony settlement seven months back of him, and a $200,000 legacy five years ahead of him, burned to death this morning in a chair in his apartment at the Claridge hotel. It is presumed he dropped to sleep while smoking a cigarette.

John Howard Hogshead, son of the Rev. Luther Hogshead, pastor of the Rogers Park Evangelical Lutheran church, Pearson's companion in the room, was awakened by smoke at 7 o'clock, in time to escape with but a few burns.

Jury Returns Verdict.

Hogshead appeared as principal witness today at the inquest. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death from shock and burns.

It was 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Hogshead told the jury, when he called for Pearson at his rooms at the Ambassador hotel. They had several rounds of drinks and adjourned to the Chicago Riding club, of which Pearson is a member. Then on to dinner and back to the hotel for more drinks.

Exhilarated by this time, the pair met two girls whose names have not been revealed, and danced with them at the Rainbow Garden until half past ten. During this time, Hogshead recalls, the liquor gave out twice, and twice, he says, Pearson telephoned for immediate delivery of more drinks.

Girls Go Home.

At 10:30 o'clock the foursome jaunted on to the Vanity Fair cafe, where they lingered until 2 o'clock in the morning. The girls were ready to go home. Pearson wasn't. So the escorts put the two young women into a taxicab and sent them to their homes. They tarried some two hours longer.

About 5 o'clock this morning, not so very long after prohibition agents had raided a theatrical post-Volstead party at the Claridge, Pearson and his friend went to the Claridge. Philip Hanley, the bell-hop who showed them to their room, testified that Pearson was "pretty sober" but that he was "a little tipsy" and that he could hardly get upstairs.

"The next thing I knew," Hogshead explained, "was when I woke up creaking in the smoke and flame."

He made his way downstairs, bell boys came, firemen rushed in, and when the flames were out there, amid

Vera Planning To Play Lead In Own Play

Countess Will Take Part if Allowed To Enter United States.

New York, February 20.—(P)—The possibility that Vera, Countess of Cathcart, might not even be permitted to enter the country for the hearing of her habeas corpus petition was dispelled tonight when Federal Judge Goddard agreed, contrary to the custom of the court, to allow her to attend. His decision followed a long conference with Arthur Garfield Hays, counsel for the countess.

The countess, through Mr. Hays, yesterday obtained a writ of habeas corpus which staged her deportation, pending a court decision of her liability to exclusion for "moral turpitude."

Mr. Hays indicated that the chief point he would endeavor to make in his fight would be that admitting an act did not constitute admission of a crime, it being necessary to judge the act by the laws of the country where it occurred.

The announced purpose of the countess' attempt to enter this country appeared to be near accomplishment to night when a Broadway theatrical producer stated that he had reached an agreement for production of her play, "Ashes," and that she would play the leading role if she is admitted.

The countess, who said she came here to sell the play, denied that her present situation was planned for publicity purposes. "Would any sane woman plan a thing like this?" she demanded. "It's ridiculous."

The producer announced, after a two-hour conference with the countess, that she had agreed to all points of the contract. The plot of the play deals with the affair of a "Countess Estelle" and a "Lord Rayhaven."

STEPHENS VOTES ROAD BOND ISSUE

Funds Voted by Northeast Georgia County With Which to Pave Link of Piedmont Road.

Toccoa, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—By a vote of 1,414 to 128, citizens of Stephens county today voted a bond issue of $200,000 for highway purposes.

Tax exemption for new industries for a period of five years also was voted overwhelmingly.

The bonds are expected to be matched with state and federal funds and will be used in hard-surfacing the county's 15-mile link of the Piedmont highway, which traverses Stephens east and west, being the Atlanta-Greenville route. Other roads will be top-soiled.

4 MILLIONAIRES OF PHILADELPHIA HEAD WHISKY RING

Named by Federal Grand Jury Investigating Nation-Wide Conspiracy at Cleveland.

Cleveland, Ohio, February 20.—(P)—More than two weeks of federal grand jury investigation here into an alleged nation-wide conspiracy to violate the 18th amendment have served to show how extensive were the operations of the supposed "ring" but have not brought in sight the end of the inquiry.

As questioning of witnesses goes on from day to day, new links are forged in the chain of evidence that now reaches from San Diego to Providence and links up "ring" operations in New York, Boston, Atlantic City, Baltimore, Newark, Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and other large cities.

Indictments Sought.

Before many days, A. E. Bernstein, district attorney, hopes to have indicted between 200 and 300 persons for as many as 100 overt acts connected with the alleged conspiracy. While the grand jury is in recess until Tuesday, Bernstein is at work on the indictments.

Treasury department agents have been sent from Washington to St. Paul, Minneapolis and Philadelphia to speed up arrests on warrants issued several days ago and to help round up witnesses for whom there are outstanding unserved subpoenas.

40 Arrests Made.

Forty arrests have been made in the case and more than 100 are likely to be involved, it has been conservatively stated. Among those who are still sought are said to be four Philadelphia millionaires—"the Wall Street of the rum ring."

Among those definitely involved to date are internal revenue officers, prominent professional and business men, heads and employees of industrial alcohol companies, railroad employees, automobile transfermen, "customers," truck drivers, former policemen and bootleggers already sentenced in other cases.

Control Alcohol Business.

Some of those who testified concerning their part in the "ring" operations have told how far the alleged conspiracy had surpassed their early conception of it. Stories emanating from the district attorney's office from time to time indicate the following operation of the "rum ring":

The conspiracy was headed by four Philadelphia millionaires. Associated with the millionaires were 30 others who controlled 75 per cent of the alcohol business in the United States, regulating the price from coast to coast.

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS IN SENATE ARE SPLIT ON ITALIAN WAR DEBT

Claimants to Clark Estate Declared Not His Daughters

New York, February 20.—(P)—Attorneys for the estate of the late William A. Clark, former United States senator from Montana, issued a statement today declaring three women of Kansas City, Mo., who claimed to be his daughters are in reality the daughters of "one William A. Clark," who was a Missouri druggist and not related to the millionaire senator.

The attorneys for the $50,000,000 Clark estate said the statement was based upon an investigation by the Clark family into the parentage of the claimants, Mrs. Alma Clark Hines, Mrs. Effie Clark MacWilliams and Mrs. Addie L. Clark Miller.

They said the father of the claimants was well known as a druggist in Stewartville, Mo., where he married a local girl and lived from 1869 to 1879. In the latter year he eloped with a girl of the town.

During this 10-year period, said the attorneys, the former Senator William A. Clark was "many weeks journey away from Missouri." A part of the time he was at Helena, Mont., later was a student at Columbia university and still later was fighting the Indians in Montana.

The three women recently filed a petition in Butte, Mont., alleging that they were entitled to a share in the Clark estate as daughters of the former senator by a secret marriage.

VICE AND CRIME ARE DECREASING, SURVEY INDICATES

Murders, However, Have Doubled, and Criminality Among Young Shows Heavy Increase.

Philadelphia, February 20.—Although murders have doubled in the last 25 years, and criminality among the young is heavily on the increase, vice and crime as a whole have shown a marked decrease in the United States in the last century just passed.

These were high points of a crime survey, detailed to the American Academy of Political and Social Science by Dr. Ellen C. Potter, state director of public welfare, and other speakers, at a session here for a general discussion of crime, its prevention and means of law enforcement.

"For the United States as a whole, there has been a decrease of crime in the last 50 years of 37.7 per cent in proportion to the population," Dr. Potter declared.

"Young people between the ages of 18 and 34 constituted 51.6 per cent of the commitments for crime in the United States in the last six months for which statistics are available. There is a steady increase in the proportion of young people who are committed for crime."

Arrests and conviction for crimes have increased, Dr. Potter asserted, along with the increase of "spectacular crimes," for which an increase in the state of Pennsylvania of 48 per cent has been noted, the state meanwhile is slightly improving the national reduction average with a crime decrease of 39 per cent. Incorrigibles, Dr. Potter said, constituted one-third of the criminal element.

The abolition of capital punishment as a crime deterrent was advocated by Frederick L. Hoffman, consulting statistician of a large life insurance company who for years has made a study of homicide deaths.

"Capital punishment," he said, "proves a barrier to adequate sentences in many cases in which it is the only alternative to verdict of not guilty. States which have capital punishment do not show a lower homicide rate than those which do not execute. The evidence is convincing that homicide deaths are increasing at the rate of virtually 100 per cent in 25 years."

PROBE OF GEORGE DEATH IS RENEWED

Two Prominent Men Testify To Seeing Jailer Throw Prisoner To Floor, Breaking Skull.

Tia Juana, Mexico, February 20.—Under pressure of American influence authorities today renewed their inquiry into the death of T. M. N. George, Atlanta cotton broker. American investigators claim George was beaten to death by Tia Juana police while he was visiting the border resort.

Angel Osuna, Tia Juana jailer, has been locked up in one of his own cells pending the new investigation. His confinement was ordered by Criminal Judge S. Urias after two prominent men testified they had seen the jailer throw George to the floor of the jail with such force as to break his skull.

Captain J. M. Adamson, special investigator from Atlanta, said that George had been arrested in Tia Juana on a charge of intoxication. It is charged that George was abused and beaten at the hands of the police and that his skull was fractured when the jailer threw him into the cell.

AUTOMOBILE TRADE FAVORS BOND PLAN FOR STATE ROADS

Atlanta Association and Leaders Preparing to Work for Adoption by Legislature.

Georgia's state system of roads is a "joke," this state is getting unfavorable advertising and "cussing" in all parts of the country because of its atrocious roads; adoption of any kind of a "pay as you go" plan simply means further delay in completing trans-state highways and is fostered for political purposes, and a state bond issue is the only practical plan under which this state can build adequate road system which can be enjoyed by the people of this generation.

That is a summary of what leading automobile executives, oil company managers and automobile accessory dealers of Atlanta say about the road situation in Georgia as disclosed in interviews given The Constitution.

Emphatic statements that the time has come for action in Georgia to get a road system that will bring this state forward in transportation first and in all the beneficial effects that go with an adequate system of transportation, including enhancement of property values of all kinds, provision of ready access to markets of all kinds for farmers, easier access to good schools for the rural children of Georgia, and hundreds of other concurrent benefits.

Auto Industry Favors Bonds.

The automobile, oil and accessory men are engaged in several phases of work in behalf of the adoption of the bond issue plan for constructing roads in Georgia, and are utilizing their agencies in this work. The Atlanta Automobile association, composed of nearly 200 representative dealers of Atlanta, is taking active interest in the bond issue plan, and is preparing to work for the adoption of the bond issue plans by the legislature at its approaching session.

Woman Agent Gets Evidence On Famous Hotel Brevoort

PADLOCK SOUGHT BY GOVERNMENT

New York, February 20.—Historic hostilities of what is known as little old New York, woefully decimated by the inroads of prohibition, are threatened with the loss of still another distinguished landmark.

The Hotel Brevoort, which is more than 75 years old and has succeeded in maintaining its dignity while less worthy institutions degenerated under the ravages of time, has been pushed directly into the line of fire by United States District Attorney Emory Buckner, who wishes to padlock the entire premises on the charge that liquor has been bought in the Brevoort dining rooms within the past few weeks.

How could any gentleman refuse a drink to a lady?

How, indeed, echoes Buckner—and tells how a young woman prohibition agent bought cocktails at the Brevoort during the lunch hour. The "busts" to get the evidence, it appears, will be alleged to have been frequent.

LONG CONFERENCE ENDS IN FAILURE TO AGREE ON PLAN

As a Result of Inability To Reach Agreement Democrats Will Vote as They Please.

BORAH CALLED IN TO OFFER ADVICE

Senator Robinson Declares Debt Question Is Not Proper Subject for Political Division.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, February 20.—Senate democrats talked and argued among themselves for three hours today in an attempt to reach an agreement for a unified stand against the Italian debt settlement. The meeting adjourned with the ranks split, some favoring, some opposing the settlement. As a result, the matter will not be a party issue but democrats will vote as they please.

This disagreement is symbolic of the difficulties the democrats are encountering in congress over issues, with the congressional elections in the offing and the minority party conceding a good chance of capturing seats in the senate and making some dents in the republican house strength. Several democrats refused to stay on the reservation when the tax bill was before the house and senate.

"We Are Leaderless."

One of the prominent democratic leaders in the senate thus summed up the situation after the meeting today: "We are just leaderless, that's all. There is no man of sufficient power upon our side of the chamber to influence our members to subordinate their views to his. The republicans, of course, have the president. And, of course, there is nothing that can be done about it."

The effort to unify the party against the Italian settlement those seeing this policy called in Senator Borah, of Idaho, to use his persuasive influence, but without avail. After the meeting Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, minority leader, issued this statement:

"I have found that there is a lack of definite information as to justification of this settlement and it will unquestionably encounter a great deal of opposition in the senate. The democratic party, however, found that it was not a proper subject for political division."

Failure of the democrats to agree on a unified stand in opposition so encouraged Senator Street, of Utah, chairman of the finance committee, that he announced he would call the Italian settlement up soon for action. Because of the growing opposition to the settlement, particularly among the democrats, the republican steering committee recently declined to give the settlement a definite place on the senate calendar. Secretary Mellon

GUARD IS ORDERED FOR 2 PRISONERS

Jackson, Miss., February 20.—(AP) Company M, 155th infantry, Mississippi national guard, at Gulfport, tonight was ordered by Adjutant-General Curtis Green to immediate duty, to protect Harold Jackson and Jesse Favre, arrested as a result of the murder of W. M. Mingee and J. A. McLeMORE, whose bodies were found early Friday near Picavune.

The troops were ordered out by direction of the governor, who had been informed by the sheriffs of three counties involved in the search for and capture of the prisoners that conditions demanded this action.

Mingee and McLemore, who were employees of the federal department of agriculture, bureau of entomology, were killed while on a hunting trip last Thursday, eight miles from Pica-yune, Miss., where they made their homes. Poses were organized.

One of these posses, led by Sheriff Smith, of Pearl River county, captured Jesse Faye on Honey island today. Harold "Doc" Jackson was arrested by another posse in Nicholson, Miss., three miles from Picayune. Faye was taken to New Orleans for safe keeping and Jackson was removed to Gulfport. Other arrests are expected to be made soon.

Faye told officers that Mingee and McElmore were killed by Jackson. He admitted that he witnessed the slayings and left the scene with Jackson in a government motor truck stolen from Mingee and McLemore. Personal effects of the two men killed were found in the possession of Favre.

Women Voters Will Sponsor Series of Weekly Luncheons

Mrs. Ben Simon, chairman of luncheons of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, announces that a series of luncheons will be held at the chambers of commerce at 12:30 o'clock on Fridays, except on February 26, which is the date of the monthly educational meeting.

The first of the series was held last Friday, February 19. The topic under discussion was "Clean or Crooked Politics—Which?"

The programs for the rest of the luncheons will be as follows: On Friday, March 5, "City Bonds." A speaker both for and against the bonds will present the subject, and it is the custom of the league to hear both sides of every question. On March 12, the candidates for the county officers will be invited to present their views, and on Tuesday, March 16, the league will honor the citizenship chairman of the Parent-Teacher associations as guests, and the functioning and purpose of the league will be explained. Everyone interested in the league is urged to attend, as the luncheons are a member of not.

The luncheons are in connection with the membership drive, and to give the new members a chance to get acquainted with the league. Each luncheon will be preceded by a drive meeting at 11:30 o'clock in the morning. While new members are being taken in now, the drive is getting organized for the real drive week to be March 15 to 20.

Membership Drive.

Mrs. LaBlanc, chairman of the drive, announces that all of the squads have been fully organized, and will be announced at an early date. In all there are eighteen squads, and they cover every section of the entire city.

The regular monthly educational meeting will be held at 8:00 o'clock at the chambers of commerce on Friday, February 26. The drive workers will be at the same place just half an hour before the meeting at 7:45 o'clock, instead of at the regular morning meeting. All workers are urged to attend promptly.

The subject to be presented at the meeting is the constitution of the league. As there are far too many scribed, but the governor has not made public any reply, and it is understood he will not do so until the session is being construed as meaning that he will not amend the bill.

Size of Bond Issue.

While the size of the bond issue is left open in the governor's bill, he refers to the sum of $75,000,000 which has been generally suggested. He points out that this size could be met, both as to the interest and principal, out of the present gasoline taxes, without any increase, and in addition a fair amount of income be left each year for maintenance purposes.

The call proposes a statewide commission to supervise expenditure of the bond money after the state highway department has approved projects to be built and arranged out of actual construction. It is generally understood that this commission, if created, will consist of one member from each of the 12 congressional districts.

In the matter of a bond issue for schools, no amount is suggested, but the school reform program endorsed by the state board of education calls for a $4,000,000 issue to provide for prompt payment of teachers and to do away with the present system of annual discounting of state warrants for this purpose. It also calls for a bond issue to provide an equalization fund to assist in making county schools conform to a recognized standard in length of term and pay of teachers. This assistance would be given weaker counties after they have exhausted their own tax limitations.

Another bond issue for a bonus for consolidation of schools, buildings, etc., also is advocated.

Funds for University.

Included in any educational bond program there must also be a bond issue to provide for added equipment and modernization of the University of Georgia and its various branches of higher learning throughout the state.

The school reform program also includes a change in the fiscal year to make it extend from June 30 to June 30, instead of from January 1 to January 1, as at present; creation of the office of building supervisor to oversee construction of school buildings erected with state funds, in order that they meet standard requirements in economy, safety and sanitation; and an act to allow an independent school system to vote on a petition to abolish the independent system and merge with the county system of schools.

Need Money for Pensions.

In regard to the pension problems, provision for funds for payment of back-due pensions is the vital question facing the legislature. Last summer a bill was passed providing for issuance of two-year scrip to meet this obligation, but inasmuch as no provision for retirement of this scrip at the expiration of the two-year period was made, it was generally admitted that the scrip would be of little actual value at banks or through other sources.

Governor Walker, in his first announcement on the subject of the extra session, declared that he could not bring himself to issue such "sweep" obligations for payment of "the most sacred debt of the state."

He pointed to the urgency for proper provision for pensioners, inasmuch as they are all of advanced age and many more will have died before the session of the legislature in 1927.

How long the extra session will last is, of course, impossible to predict, but a four or five weeks' session is generally expected, and all onlookers agree that it cannot adjourn in less than three weeks if the work set out is to be done.

Governor Walker has spent the greater part of his time for the past two months in the study of the bill in support of the program he has outlined for the session.

DAVIS WOULD PROMOTE TEN ARMY CHAPLAINS

Washington, February 20.—(AP)—Ten army chaplains will be promoted during the present year if legislation requested by Secretary Davis to correct inequalities is approved by congress. As chief of chaplains, Colonel John T. Axtell would be given the rank of brigadier general, while Lieutenant Colonel E. P. Esterbrook, now stationed at Fort Monroe, Va., would become a colonel. Under existing law the highest chaplain rank is lieutenant colonel except for the chief of the corps.

The other promotions in prospect are J. M. Webb, presidio, Monterey, Calif.; W. H. Watts, Fort Sam Houston, Texas; W. A. Aiken, Madison Barracks, N. Y.; E. W. Wood, Fort Logan, Colorado; W. R. Arnold, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas; all from captain to major, and J. R. Carroll, Capt. G. L. Canale, Zone, and E. E. M. Savageau, Fort Sheridan, Illinois, first lieutenant to captain.

DAVIS WOULD PROMOTE TEN ARMY CHAPLAINS

Washington, February 20.—(AP)—Ten army chaplains will be promoted during the present year if legislation requested by Secretary Davis to correct inequalities is approved by congress. As chief of chaplains, Colonel John T. Axtell would be given the rank of brigadier general, while Lieutenant Colonel E. P. Esterbrook, now stationed at Fort Monroe, Va., would become a colonel. Under existing law the highest chaplain rank is lieutenant colonel except for the chief of the corps.

The other promotions in prospect are J. M. Webb, presidio, Monterey, Calif.; W. H. Watts, Fort Sam Houston, Texas; W. A. Aiken, Madison Barracks, N. Y.; E. W. Wood, Fort Logan, Colorado; W. R. Arnold, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas; all from captain to major, and J. R. Carroll, Capt. G. L. Canale, Zone, and E. E. M. Savageau, Fort Sheridan, Illinois, first lieutenant to captain.

BABY HEALTH CENTERS FOR WEEK ANNOUNCED

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, announces baby health centers will be held this week at the following places: Stanton school, Monday; Whiteford school, Tuesday; St. Paul's church, Wednesday; Edgewood school, Thursday; Faith school, Friday.

Whitehall Pharmaceutical Co., 222 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y., Dept. N 115 H. Mail me a Free Sample of Mentho-Sulphur.

Mentho-Sulphur is a pleasant cream, will soothe and heal skin that is itchy, irritated or broken out with eczema; that is covered with ugly rash or pimples, or not bring home to issue such "sweep" obligations for payment of "the most sacred debt of the state."

He pointed to the urgency for proper provision for pensioners, inasmuch as they are all of advanced age and many more will have died before the session of the legislature in 1927.

How long the extra session will last is, of course, impossible to predict, but a four or five weeks' session is generally expected, and all onlookers agree that it cannot adjourn in less than three weeks if the work set out is to be done.

Governor Walker has spent the greater part of his time for the past two months in the study of the bill in support of the program he has outlined for the session.

New York, February 20. (AP)—Continued evening-up of near month commitments featured the cotton market in the early trading today. March was supplied at a premium of 56 to 57 points over May. After selling up to 32, March closed at 20.25. The near month market closed barely steady, net 2 points higher to 3 points lower.

The opening was steady at an advance of one to four points despite rapid early trading. Live offerings were light. Demand from near month shorts was accompanied by reports that the stocks of certified cotton next year would be down to slightly less than 15,000 bales with further withdrawals of 1,000 bales expected today.

Spot cotton prices again were sellers of March against purchases of May at the prevailing difference, and the cotton market was more active today than any day during the current week, due to the fact that the short session was the last before the double holiday as well as the last opportunity to liquidate the March position before the first notice day for the month, which will be Tuesday. After a steady decline in the early trading, mainly on evening-up of the market rallied on the covering of shorts and on the further price shrinkage in certificated cotton here and in New York. At the highest prices showed gains of 9 to 15 points over the previous day's close, with yesterday's close.

Prices eased off in the final trading and the close showed a net loss of 1 to 2 points. The March contract net 1 point higher to 1 lower over months.

At the start first trades showed losses of 2 to 7 points, and prices were down to 17.50 to 17.55 when the call, March trading at 19.45, gradually supplied, but the strength of the near position had a sympathetic influence on the general list.

May sold up to 19.75 and October 19.50. The market then advanced to 20 points in the forenoon. The market then eased under realizing for over the holiday. There also was probably some selling in late trading on reports that the war was in St. Orleans.

May sold off to 19.50 and October 19.25. In the closing at 19.18, the market closing at the low price of the day on most positions.

Private cables reported covering of the near position by the market.

Liverpool was about as due, the market here to some extent advanced under fairly brisk trading. The market traded as high as 19.18, May 19.15 and October 17.65, or 9 to 13 points above the early lows. These were the high prices of the day.

In the final trading prices reacted under realizing and liquidation, and the March position was especially weak and dropped to the early low price of 17.65.

The market closed at 19.18, May 19.15 and October 17.65, or 9 to 13 points above the early lows. These were the high prices of the day.

been offset by hedging, but news from China was encouraging expectations of business in cotton cloths at Manchester.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 129,000 bales, against 117,000 last year.

All American markets will be closed Monday.

Tuesday is the first notice day in points of the day.

The market here will be closed Monday, Washington's birthday.

Exports for the day totaled 27,954 bales.

New York, February 20.—(AP)—A lack of a definite trend again characterized today's stock market, which was featured by another bullish demonstration in the Chicago market, carried that issue to 344 1/2, a new record high and 69 points above the low price of this year. Realizing sales of the stock back to 338 1/2 at the close.

Irregular fluctuations in the main body of stocks reflected, to a large extent, the uncertainty of the reading of speculative accounts. The announcement that the senate and Rails displayed a firm undertone. Atlantic Coast Line was run up 8 points to 238 on a small turnover and Erie common and second preferred and Pere Marquette advanced two points or more. A good demand was also apparent for Baltimore and Ohio and the Chicago and Alton issues.

Weakness of French francs reflected the budget and tax difficulties of the Briand government, and the government and municipal liens, however, received good support. A sharp advance in Japanese yen, which carried the yen to 140, was noted in the last years, and in the Scandinavian currencies, reflected the efforts of those governments to bring their exchanges nearer dollar parity.

Cotton and wheat failed to break out of the trading area within which bill apparently has without influence on the price movement.

Bear traders continued to seek out the steel spot market, and succeeded in forcing moderate recessions in some of the rods, equipments, chemicals and ordinarily inactive specialties. American Snuff broke over 5 points to 145, further reflection of the poor 1925 crop. Further electric, and net declines of 2 points were recorded by American locomotive, California Packing, Case crushing Machine, Commercial Solvent, "A" and "B," DuPont, Fox film, General Electric, South Porto can Sugar and United Fruit.

Meanwhile bullish operations took place in a few industrials and specialties whose earnings show sign of improvement. Central Leather preferred, time. Weather and consumption reports are being closely watched for indications of a definite price trend.

SOUTHERN ROAD PLANS EXPANSION

Macon, Ga., February 20.—(AP)—In connection with the expansion program of railroads operating in southern territory, the Southern Railway system in its Sunday issue that the Southern railway will expend ten million dollars on its Chattanooga-Macon division.

All sidings are to be extended, and most equivalent to double tracking, according to the story. An automatic electric block signal system, costing $300,000, will be installed, and a complete telephone system for the dispatching of trains will be built. New locomotives and other new equipment will take up the balance of the appropriation, according to the story.

For months high officials of the Southern railway have been traversing this division of the Southern railway, J. H. Stanfield, general manager of lines west, who is in Georgia tonight, is said to have informed local officials of the plans.

NEBRASKA WOMEN OPPOSE "SHIMMY" AND CHARLESTON

Omaha, Neb., February 20.—(AP)—The Charleston is the object of criticism and attack by Nebraska club women and social organizations. At a meeting held at the home of Mrs. J. H. Stanfield, general manager of lines west, who is in Georgia tonight, is said to have informed local officials of the plans.

The Lincoln City attorney has been asked to enforce the ordinance against vulgar dances. Another rap at the Charleston, it is claimed, "Shimmying" also will be taboo under the measure and unmarried persons under 21 would have to register when they went to public dances.

SUZANNE KEENER WILL BE SOLOIST OF EMORY SINGERS

Dr. H. M. Dewey, director of the Emory glee club, announced Saturday that Suzanne Keener, youthful and beautiful coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, will be the soloist in the club's farewell concert.

The concert will be given at the Biltmore hotel in Atlanta, Tuesday night, at the banquet of the organization, at which time plans for continued development of the state will be discussed.

The greater Georgia movement, Mr. Anderson stated, has the indorsement and support of the Georgia Bankers' association, the Atlanta clearing house and the Macon clearing house, besides the indorsements and subscriptions of leading business men from all parts of the state.

H. R. McKee, field representative of the Florida Chamber of Commerce, will deliver an address during the session.

Mr. Anderson said that Florida is interested in Georgia's development and stands ready to cooperate with this state to the fullest extent.

SECRETARIES ELECT ROME MAN AS HEAD

Columbus, Ga., February 20.—(AP)—W. H. Foster, of Rome, was elected president to succeed W. H. Proctor, of Dublin; Lincoln McConnell, of Macon, vice president and J. M. Ashley, of Valdosta, secretary-treasurer, at Saturday's concluding session of the semi-annual convention of the Georgia Association of Commercial Secretaries. The next meeting of the association will be held in Savannah, Ga., in August.

The two-day convention opened Friday morning. A visit to Fort Benning was followed by afternoon and evening sessions at the Hotel Raleigh. The final meeting was held at 9 a. m. and ended at noon Saturday in the auditorium of the local chamber of commerce.

The association indorsed a modern school system and paved roads for the state. Resolutions relative to the bill for disposition and operation of Muscle Shoals properties and the "pay-as-you-go" road program were tabled.

The Muscle Shoals proposal brought spirited discussion before it was finally sidetracked by members of the association. The retiring president asserted that the shoals problem had occurred the past several years and that body failing in its solution, the association would be placing itself in an embarrassing light should action favorable to the proposed bill be taken.

The two principal talks of the morning were made by Tom Wisdom, of Atlanta, state school auditor, on the program for legislation affecting public schools and by P. W. Dieberger, secretary-manager of the Albany Chamber of Commerce on "Albany's fire prevention program."

SUZANNE KEENER
concerts at the Atlanta theater April 1, 2 and 3, preparatory to the Emory organization's departure on a three-months' tour of Europe.

The decision of the glee club's officials to secure Miss Keener came after a survey of the entire field of available operatic and concert singers, according to Dr. Dewey. In the opinion of many critics, Miss Keener "has potentially the greatest coloratura soprano voice heard in years." In addition she is declared to have youth, personality, beauty, histrionic ability and all of the other attributes which go to make a soloist of real greatness.

In her joint concert with the Emory singers, Miss Keener will give several groups of her most popular operatic arias and concert songs, and also will take the solo role in a feature number with the club. The glee club itself will confine its program to numbers which have been prepared for the European concert.

FILM STARS OFFER NEW SKIN SHOES MADE OF REPTILES

Hollywood, Cal., February 20.—Reptile skin shoes were introduced on Hollywood avenue today by film stars as the last cry in women's fashions. Snakes, lizards and crocodiles were the most favored patterns.

Colleen Moore displayed shoes of crocodile skin with high heels. Dorothy Mackall laced lizard pumps, and Anna Q. Nilsson rattlesnake skin footwear, and Dolores Del Rio has a pair of bright red king snake shoes.

MUSSOLINI POSES AS MYSTERY MAN TO HIS PEOPLE

Milan, February 20.—(AP)—Mussolini is a man of mystery who takes into his confidence not even his fellow members of the cabinet.

The relation is made by the Popolo d'Italia in an article inveighing against the growing number of juvenile fascists who claim to have the "inside track" to the premier.

"Those who pose as interpreters, apostles or agents of Mussolini," says the newspaper, "are meddlers who should be handed over to the police. Whoever knows Mussolini's type of life

French Stars To Clash for U. S. Indoor Tennis Title

Jean Borotra Plays LaCoste in Finals For National Honors

New York, February 20.—Two young Frenchmen, who were mere rookies a few years ago in international tennis, will meet here next Monday morning to see which will take the national indoor tennis championship away from America for the second successive year.

Rene Lacoste, Wimbledon champion of 1925 and Jean Borotra, runner-up in the British championship, survived the 1925 American tournament by defeating Vincent Richards and William Tilden, the world's champion, in the quarter final round of the tournament and they will meet in the final round for the title.

Borotra, who sells washing machines for a French manufacturing firm, entered the final round here this afternoon when he defeated his managing teammate, Jacques Brugnon, at 7-5, 4-6 and 6-4.

Princeton Star Loses.
Lacoste also became a finalist when he eliminated the last surviving American, Johnny Van Ryn, a Princeton freshman, in straight sets at 6-2 and 6-1.

After a week of international tennis, in which Helen Wills was beaten by Mlle. Lenglen and Bill Tilden, Vincent Richards and Frank Hunter were downed by the French team, the only consolation left tonight was that an American doubles team would win the 1925 indoor title.

Vinnie Richards and Frank Hunter, the Olympic doubles champions of 1924, entered Monday's final round when they defeated Brugnon and Louis R. Dailley, former Princeton star, 6-2 and 6-2.

The victory placed Richards and Hunter in the final round on Monday morning against Bill Tilden and Fred C. Anderson, the highest standing tennis players in captivity.

Compared to the action that thrilled the gallery when three ranking American players were being beaten yesterday by the French team, there were few pulsations today.

Minus Stamina.
Borotra, showing obviously the strain of his match against Tilden, was wild on his service and his returns against Brugnon and he was minus the stamina that enabled him to outlast the world's champion.

Brugnon, however, made the mistake of playing close to the net and Borotra passed him enough times to win the match.

The greatest fight of the tournament was made by young Jack Van Ryn, the Princeton freshman, who graduated from the junior tournament to find himself in the semi-final round of a national tournament as an unranking player.

Van Ryn put up a game fight and was fortunate to win three games against Lacoste but he made the mistake of playing a baseline game against a volley assassin who, next to Vinnie Richards, is the best player at the net in the world.

The Olympic doubles champions, Hunter and Richards, drove their attack at Brugnon, the French team's mate of Dailley, the former Princeton star, and they broke through his service four times and his defense time after time for a victory.

The finals will be staged on Monday at 10 o'clock the finals of the doubles will be played between Richards and Hunter and Tilden and Anderson and at 11:30 o'clock the singles will be played between Lacoste and Borotra.

Ice hockey perhaps has established itself more rapidly than any other professional sport in years. The game has met with immediate financial success in New York, as well, to a lesser degree, in Boston, and Pittsburgh, where franchises are held, along with four Canadian teams in the national league. Another season is expected to see a second club representing New York with Detroit and Chicago also likely to obtain franchises.

Professional wrestling, after a considerable hiatus in popular favor here, has drawn capacity crowds.

Several girl swimming stars turned to professional ranks about the time Grange and Nevins jumped from college grids to the professional field.

Baseball Armies Move to Camps

New York, February 20.—The armies of baseball are on the march southward and westward, headed for training quarters where kinks will be sweated out of $100,000 arms and legs and there will be a shuffling of ivory towers as G. M. A. but one more defeat. U. S. R. has won seven games out of 10 for a percentage of .700.

Marist has divided its games, winning with 200 for a percentage. Deatur and Fulton are holding down the bottom of the ladder with no games won. Deatur has lost only nine while the Fulton High has failed 10 times out of 21 many tries.

The league dope bucket was upset last week when the Commercial High Typists defeated the strong G. M. A. team, 55 to 10.

University will journey out to Deatur Monday to play the Dekalb county boys. Tuesday Fulton High will play Tech High at Tech High. Boys' High will be entertained by the College Park cadets at G. M. A.

Commercial High will oppose the Bluebirds on the university floor, and Marist will come down to play Marist on the Marist court.

At 10 o'clock the finals of the doubles will be played between Richards and Hunter and Tilden and Anderson and at 11:30 o'clock the singles will be played between Lacoste and Borotra.

Woods and Waters

A COMFORTABLE club house, excellent guides, and board and room at less than cost are three of the outstanding features of the public shooting ground facilities which the state of Louisiana has provided at the mouth of the Mississippi river, some 90 miles below New Orleans.

A few weeks ago we visited this public rendezvous for Louisiana duck hunters, which, as far as we know, is the only one of its kind in the United States. Other states wishing to solve the problem of a combination rest ground for waterfowl and public shooting ground for free lance hunters can well pattern their projects after this one in Louisiana, which is the outgrowth of the high ideals of public service which prevail in the department of conservation of the state of Louisiana.

The state has acquired several hundred thousands of acres of marsh and swamp at the mouth of the Mississippi. On a high piece of ground at the edge of a channel a neat commodious clubhouse has been erected. The department has a manager, a Mr. George Holzhauser, to run the place, comfortable beds with real sheets and plenty of blankets are provided, and a cook is on the job to dish up wholesome grub, thus making it a real club.

A nominal charge of $9.50 a day is the toll required from each hunter. This includes board, lodging, guide, decoys and boat for a day. According to Stanley Arthur of the conservation department the charge is "less than cost."

Shotgun shells at New Orleans prices can be purchased on the grounds if the hunter has not brought ammunition along.

Any northern hunter who has the idea that duck hunting in Louisiana is a free and easy proposition or who believes that the state is a place where waterfowl are slaughtered with no thought of conservation gets a shock at the bay in the afternoon, after which they exercised the pasthorns in a game of penny ante.

Change in Personnel.
The Cardinals of this season will present a change or two over the personnel of last year. The infield will be the same with Bottomley at first, Hornsby at second, Bell at third and Thayer at shortstop. In the outfield Taylor Douthitt, who was a sensation in the American association last season, is booked for center field with Ray Blades in left and Chick Hafey in right. Jack Smith and Heine Mueller will be substitutes.

Victor Keen, obtained from the Cubs; Walter Huntzinger, snatched from the Giants, and Stryker Johnson, former member of the Tigers' staff, but in the Coast league last year, are the important pitching additions. Herman Bell and Johnny Stuchlik are right-handers recalled from Milwaukee.

Miss Palm Beach Takes Boat Race
Palm Beach, Fla., February 20.—(AP)—The Miss Palm Beach, flashing overseas, whipped by a heavy wind, roared home to win the Bradley cup race here today, covering the 25-mile course on Lake Worth in 32 minutes and 54 seconds.

The boat, owned by William J. Conners, was piloted by his son, William J. Conners, Jr.
Baby Cub, owned and driven by Howard Lyon, of New York, crossed the finishing line almost a full lap behind the winner after negotiating the 25 miles in 36:20.

The Venturesome, Harris Hammond's entry in the Bradley cup race, which crashed into a houseboat and was valued at between $15,000 and $20,000.

The boat swerved erratically while making a turn, threw the crew into the water and struck a moored houseboat. The crew was unhurt. The boat sank immediately. It was equipped with two Liberty motors and was valued at between $15,000 and $20,000.

Pairings for Teams In Conference Meet To Be Made Today

Pairings for the 1926 southern conference basketball tournament which will be played on the new city auditorium court Friday and Saturday of this week and Monday and Tuesday of next week will be made this afternoon, with A. A. Doonan, of Atlanta Athletic club; Herman J. Stegeman, of Georgia; W. A. Alexander, of Georgia Tech; and Wilbur Hutsell, of Auburn, the committee in charge of the tournament.

According to a ruling made some time ago, only 16 teams will be permitted to enter the tourney. Six of the 22 teams making up the conference will be dropped. The selection will be made on a percentage of games won and lost. Each team entered must have played at least eight conference games.

Work on the big new court to be erected in the auditorium will start Wednesday and will be completed by Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock when the first game of the tourney is slated to start. The cost of the new court will be more than $20,000.

Social Events Planned.
Atlanta Athletic club, again will sponsor the big event and will be headquarters for the tournament. Many social events have been planned for members of the visiting teams. Local alumni will entertain fraternal mates on the various teams while the tourney is in progress.

Headquarters for members of the visiting teams will be the Anson hotel. The teams will begin to arrive in Atlanta on late trains of Thursday night and early trains of Friday morning. The southern conference are Georgia Tech, Georgia, Auburn, Alabama, Kentucky, Mississippi university, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, North Carolina State, Louisiana State, Tulane, Mississippi Aggies, Vanderbilt, V. M. I., V. P. I., Clemson, Washington and Lee, Sewanee, Tennessee and Florida.

While Tech is not definitely certain just which of the 16 teams will be entered it is practically certain that Florida, Tennessee, Sewanee, Clemson and Washington and Lee will not be in the select circle.

Probable Officials.
Kentucky leads the race and bids fair to place well in the tourney. North Carolina, which has won the title three times, also is listed in on the favorite, with Mississippi university, Maryland and Georgia the other strong contenders.

Officials for the tourney have not been announced, but it has been stated that Tom Thorpe, former coach of New York university, which won the national amateur championship in Atlanta in 1919, will be back again. Ed Sutton, from Pennsylvania, a favorite with local fans for the past six years, will probably be back again and a southern official will probably be the third man.

Pennsylvania U. Plans Huge Sport Stadium

Philadelphia, February 20.—(AP)—One of the largest indoor stadiums in the country will soon be in course of construction for the University of Pennsylvania officials of the institution announced today. Preliminary plans have been drawn for a structure costing approximately $1,000,000 and having a seating capacity of more than 10,000. Percy Wilson, university engineer, said the site selected is close to Franklin field and that the stadium will give Pennsylvania indoor athletic facilities unequalled.

Hornsby Food Advocate

He preferred to neglect his stomach and increase his bank account. There was the daily saving of the meal money. Well, this pitcher did not complete his second season as a big leaguer. His stomach was empty, his arm became weak after the third or fourth inning and he was plastered all over the lot game after game.

Before Hornsby graduated to the ranks of manager he was recognized as a "big leaguer" off the field. He wore tailor-made clothes, latest fads and fancies in everything and strutted into the main dining room at all hotels. He was never found in a coffee shop warming a stool.

With this in mind Hornsby paid close attention to the habits of his ball players and he soon discovered how the stomachs were being neglected.

While he is not officially predicting the pennant for the Cardinals, Hornsby feels that he has a club that should be inside the money for good prospects of battling toe to toe with the Pirates and Giants for the world series spoils.

Change in Personnel.
The Cardinals of this season will present a change or two over the personnel of last year. The infield will be the same with Bottomley at first, Hornsby at second, Bell at third and Thayer at shortstop. In the outfield Taylor Douthitt, who was a sensation in the American association last season, is booked for center field with Ray Blades in left and Chick Hafey in right. Jack Smith and Heine Mueller will be substitutes.

Victor Keen, obtained from the Cubs; Walter Huntzinger, snatched from the Giants, and Stryker Johnson, former member of the Tigers' staff, but in the Coast league last year, are the important pitching additions. Herman Bell and Johnny Stuchlik are right-handers recalled from Milwaukee.

Miss Palm Beach Takes Boat Race
Palm Beach, Fla., February 20.—(AP)—The Miss Palm Beach, flashing overseas, whipped by a heavy wind, roared home to win the Bradley cup race here today, covering the 25-mile course on Lake Worth in 32 minutes and 54 seconds.

The boat, owned by William J. Conners, was piloted by his son, William J. Conners, Jr.
Baby Cub, owned and driven by Howard Lyon, of New York, crossed the finishing line almost a full lap behind the winner after negotiating the 25 miles in 36:20.

The Venturesome, Harris Hammond's entry in the Bradley cup race, which crashed into a houseboat and was valued at between $15,000 and $20,000.

The boat swerved erratically while making a turn, threw the crew into the water and struck a moored houseboat. The crew was unhurt. The boat sank immediately. It was equipped with two Liberty motors and was valued at between $15,000 and $20,000.

Basket Champs Still Dangerous
Topeka, Kan., February 20.—(AP)—When the select of America's amateur basketball quintets gather at Kansas City in March to fight out the annual battle for the A. A. U. championship, they will have to contend with a champion whose speedy combination of 1925 is almost unbroken.

Four of the five court stars who won the national title a year ago for Washburn college of Topeka, will defend the title. Arthur Brewster, regular guard in 1925, was graduated last June.

The "ashburn 'Ichabod' will be led by Orson ("Shorty") McLaughlin, diminutive, flashy forward, who is playing opposite Clarence Breithaupt, former captain, for the eighth consecutive year. They were forwards for four years on the Topeka high school quintet and are in the midst of their fourth season together at Washburn.

Gerald Spolin, lanky center, is at the pivot post again.
Harvard Marsh, a freshman, and Milton Parr of last year's reserve, are out for the vacant guard position, with Marsh winning the call in early season contests.

Numerical Signals Bewilder French

Paris, February 20.—(AP)—Football signal-calling in numbers is an established practice on American fields but it is an innovation in France. Adolphe Jaureguy, the "Red Grange" of French rugby, attempted it recently and with somewhat disastrous results in the match which his team lost to Scotland.

Hereafter the captain always called the plays "in clear" with the result that the opponents generally got the jump on the attacking Frenchmen, huddled or broke through the line and brought down the player with the ball.

Signaling in figures went along smoothly for a few days but in the heat of the match the halfbacks in European rugby one of the halfbacks puts the ball in play for there is no quarterback—forgot his lines. Jaureguy called out: "2-5-3-7" or some such numbers.

Bewildered, the halfback looked up at the captain, and in a tone of down-right disgust, replied: "Busy, number is busy."

Age No Handicap To Golf Champ
Chicago, February 20.—(AP)—Among the golf champions, the only one who seemingly holds a perpetual national title is Alexander H. Revell, of Chicago. He went abroad before the war and won the amateur titles of Germany and Austria. No one has taken them since.

Revell was close to 50 years of age when he showed the Germanic golfers how the Scotch game should be played. He is an excellent player for a business man, taking his share of honors at the Onwentsia and the Old Elm clubs, where such superior golfers as Bob Gardner and Ruddy Knepper hold forth.

Little Rock Pilot Hopes To Get Team Higher in Standing

BY HENRY LOESCH.

Little Rock, Ark., February 20.—"Pongo" Joe Cantillon, one of the leading pennant-winners of baseball, who has undertaken the task of getting Little Rock out of the Southern association cellar, still is looking for assistance. Until he finds some more ball players to help him out no claims are being made as to how far out of the three-year finishing spot of the Travelers he will get.

Joe is somewhere now looking for high-grade playing talent with which to complete the local line-up. With March 5 set as the date for players to report here for spring training it is expected that the new manager will give out a few names and batting averages pretty soon.

So far only two important player deals have been made by the local club toward improving its chances for next season. Bill Whaley, a former major leaguer, was bought from Los Angeles during the recent baseball jockey in California, and Paul Johnson, another outfielder, was bought from Indianapolis. Both are being advertised locally as the real goods in a baseball way. Whaley is labeled as an outfielder but it is said that he does very well on the infield. Johnson is said to be quite a slugger.

President R. C. Allen, of the local club, last fall, grabbed off the entire outfield of the Muskogee club of the Western association with the hope of transplanting it in Kavanagh field. In this trio is Max West, a youngster who was in Kid Ederfeld's 1924 opening day line-up. He is said to have improved wonderfully, although he was cut down in midseason last year when he broke a leg. "Babe" Collins, a fence wrecker, and a boy named Bennett complete the W. A. trio out of which the local club may get at least one good outfielder.

Clancy Coming Back. Little Rock is mighty well fixed at first base with the clever "Bud" Clancy coming back. "Bud" finished with the Travelers last season and while he didn't do any slugging he showed that he can field with the fanciest of first sackers.

For second base the club has only "Lena" Blackburne, the 1925 manager who still is local property. Tom Watkins wanted "Lena" to manage his Knoxville team but the deal blew up somewhere and Blackburne probably will be back with the Travelers as utility man.

Little Rock still hopes to win the argument over Ernie Smith, the flashy shortstop of last year. The Kansas City club's claim to this player is being stubbornly fought with President Martin backing the Little Rock claims. Frank Pluhin still is listed as a Traveler but the local club believes that a change at third would be advisable and that Frank would go better elsewhere. Frank played great ball toward the finish last season but a lot of fans who fail to understand him are "on" him.

Walter Mayer, who led the Southern outfielders in fielding last year, is scheduled to return. Although his defensive work was wonderful, Walter failed to hit up to his usual mark last year, but fans here like him and are pulling for him to have a big season.

"Hub" Robinson Back. The local club probably is as well off for dependable pitchers as any in the league at this time. The old reliable "Hub" Robinson was as good as ever last season and is likely to do as well another year and perhaps for years to come. Ray Caldwell is coming back and ought to have another good year in his elongated system. "Stubby" Mack, who pitched several nice games in the last of the season of 1925, has been turned over to the local club as has the youthful "Jake" Freese, regarded as a great prospect.

Allen and Cantillon expect to add several players to this collection soon and to have a formidable line-up for April 13.

The local club has gone in for the "knot hole" idea and has announced that all boys 15 years and under will be free guests of the club during the summer subject to the regulations and rules of a "Knot Hole Gang" to be organized after the players are organized at the Cardinals in St. Louis. The "gang" will have a section of the bleachers throughout the season.

Basketball Results

A. A. C. Juniors Win 33 to 28. Playing their first game this season, the Junior A. A. C. basketball team defeated the Iman Park cagers, 33 to 28. The Juniors played a good game for their first start. Williams, right forward for the winners, shot 15 points, while Brannon, speedy forward for the losers, accounted for 14 markers.

Clarkston Wins, 33 to 21. Clarkston, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—The Clarkston basketball team defeated the Duluth High quintet here, 33 to 21. By winning over Duluth, Clarkston made its total of games won go to 15 with only 2 losses. The girls' team, after playing two extra periods, ended their game with a 14-14 tie.

Covington Wins Two. Covington, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—Covington High cagers defeated the Greensboro High school, 37 to 26. The girls' team gave the Social Circle girls' basketball team 25 to 8. The Covington teams played good basketball throughout the game. The passing work was perfect.

Quitman Splits Two. Quitman, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—Quitman High girls basketball team defeated Valdosta Girls here in a fast game, 35 to 15. The Quitman boys' team lost to the Valdosta team in a hard fought game, 27 to 17.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. Then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips. By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

LAST BOXERS ON LOTZ CARD HERE MONDAY

Benny Ray will be unable to meet Hollis Sullivan here Wednesday night in one of the ten-round star bouts on Billy Lotz' boxing program. Announcement that he had received a severe cut over the eye in training was received by Lotz Saturday night from Jacksonville. A boy of equal class will replace him in plenty of time for announcement to be made.

Ray's substitute and Judge Hornung, of Savannah, welterweight, are the only two missing links in the chain of boxfighters who are scheduled to appear in the 40-round bargain entertainment at the auditorium Tuesday night, staged under the auspices of the Disabled Veterans of the World War. Billy Lotz is matchmaker.

Hornung wired Saturday that he will reach the city Monday, fighting for a 10-round showing. Hornung will attempt to settle a dispute long hanging fire with Larry Aver, of Atlanta. Ray's substitute will be here Monday if possible.

As this will be a real test for Sullivan, and as Hornung recently won by a shade from Aver, the two principal events Tuesday night loom as bouts of genuine class. Besides those, there will be three other battles involving Marvin Walker and Kid Smith, for six rounds; Dags Jordan and Kid Fane for a similar distance over the 8-round route.

Top prize has been set at $2, and women again will be admitted free, which should assure a corking good attendance, something that has been lacking at recent promotion attempts by Charlie Brownfield and John Contos.

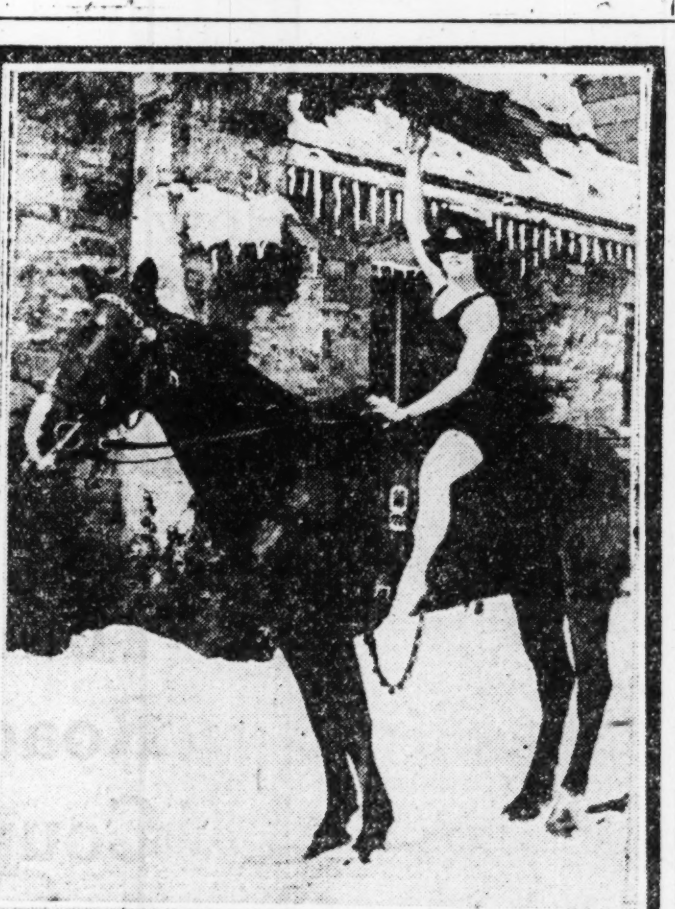

To Test Sullivan. The Sullivan bout is expected to produce its full share of the excitement, and, justly so, for Sullivan, under the able guidance of Professor W. H. Evans, has been stepping along beautifully, especially in the last few weeks, when he has run up three successive knockout victories, his last over Rip Luntzel, of Louisville, in something under two rounds.

Sullivan has rarely gone the 10-round route. He has fought nothing but preliminaries here but so convincingly has he disposed of all opposition that it was inevitable that he should be signed for a main number. If he succeeds in winning his bout he will have accomplished something really worth while and it will mean bigger and better bouts for him in the future.

This photograph, made on the dead run by I. Sickle, shows clearly why the great one can do when he gets around to it. The horse is from the McGuire stables, made famous by the marvelous riding, jumping and riding ability of McGuire himself.

"I am not too proud to reveal my identity," McGuire informed the reporter in a shrill feminine voice. "This disguise is so good that no one ever would be able to penetrate it, so I tell you off-hand that it is none other than me, myself."

The writer agreed that his form was perfect. "Sure it is," growled Malignant, forgetting himself and dropping into the fearsome rumbling tones he uses when his cakes are burned. "I just kum down from Minneapolis, where me an' das horse win

PETREL GRID TEAM TO PLAY GA. THIS WEEK

An innovation in the world of sports at the University of Georgia will be created next Friday when the Bulldogs and Oglethorpe Petrels meet in Athens on Sanford field for football.

Announcement had previously been made that the game would be played next Saturday.

This is the first football game probably having its date set in February. Much interest centers in the game and the attendance promises to be large.

Practice for the Bulldogs has gone forward rapidly for the past three weeks. After due preliminary work the coaches have gradually settled down to the hard tasks. The squad is in very good condition and during the past week scrimmages have been held. Around 60 men report for daily sessions.

The proceeds of the game will go to a benefit for Tony Pryse, star basketball player on Georgia's freshman quintet last year, who is now ill at Orlando, Fla. The game will go four full 15-minute quarters, the only change in regular rules being that substitutions can be made at any time.

The game will be a regular football affair. It had been previously announced that coaches might stop the game to correct flaws shown in either offense or defense, but this detail will not be carried out.

An added novelty of the game is the fact that neither coaches will drill their elevens in an especial defensive method of play. Members of the freshmen teams of last year at their respective institutions may play, and

We wanted to enter in this here guess at 'em contest, but I am so good it would be a runaway and the horse didn't care to wear his feed-bag while running around Atlanta. He isn't a very well known horse, anyway, and someone might get mad at him and run him off the streets, thinking he might try to get funny.

"It's going to be a little difficult to get out of this costume. I used goose-grease and a shoe horn to get into it. I understand lots of us girls have to do the same thing. However, if the worst comes to the worst a pair of shears will do the trick for me and I can borrow my sister's if I want to use one of these single track things again."

McGuire waved his hand in the air, as you can see in the picture, and skidding from the ice he had brought into a mid-February Georgia rain, galloped off.

THANKSGIVING FOOTBALL IS OPPOSED

Philadelphia, February 20.—(P)—A crusade against Thanksgiving day football by colleges was announced today by the Presbyterian Board of Christian Endeavor, of which Dr. William Chalmers Covert is general secretary. The plan, Dr. Covert said, is to educate the American public to the restoration of the "fundamental observance of Thanksgiving day as an occasion for serious thought" rather than athletic recreation.

LARGE CROWD SEES PADDOCK BREAK TAPE

BY MERCER SHERMAN.

The intuitive start as the pistol barks, the leaping, powerful strides which have carried him to world championships, and the plunging finish with which he has beaten threatening competitors so many times, were shown Atlanta track and field sports lovers by Charlie Paddock at the Emory track Saturday. Appearing in a specially arranged 100-yard dash, Paddock ran in ankle-length trousers and with a sweater about his chest, yet he broke the tape three yards in front of his nearest competitor.

He was timed in 10 seconds, flat. Others in the event were Adkins, Georgia Tech; Stockman, Emory, and Statham, Oglethorpe.

Homer Whelchel, one-time Tech trackman and former Olympic team, also showed the spectators that javelin tossing is not based only on strength, but that there also is a science in that sport. Placing his body in a position where his weight can come behind the throw, he sends the javelin high enough, Tech distance.

Coch Harold Barrow, of Georgia Tech, appeared in an exhibition over the 220-yard hurdles, an event in which he appeared in the Olympics.

It was expected that Garcia, Cuban student at Emory, would extend Paddock, but, due to a hard course he is undertaking at Emory, he had little time to train for the affair. Garcia has won many medals in Cuba, Panama and America.

The summary of events follows: 100-Yard Dash—Won by Paddock, 10 seconds; second, Stockman, Emory; third, Statham, Oglethorpe; fourth, Time, 10 seconds.

Pole Vault—Tie for first place between Natchez and Logan, of Emory; second place, Stewart, Tech. Height, 11 feet 2 inches.

High Jump—Won by Perkins, Tech; second, Emory; third, Stewart, Tech. Height, 5 feet 11 inches.

Javelin Throw—Won by G. Logan, Emory; Whelchel, Tech, second. Distance, 170 feet 2 inches.

Shot Put—Won by Paulk, Emory; Hood, Tech, second. Distance, 40 feet 1 inch.

60-Yard Hurdles—Won by Boyd, Tech; second, Roberts, Tech, third. Time, 9 and 9-10 seconds.

Georgia University Names Rifle Team

Athens, Ga., February 20.—Members of the University of Georgia rifle team have been selected and are as follows: G. B. Richard, of Fort Russell, captain; G. H. Neal, College Park, secretary; David Campbell, Athens, vice president; J. W. Bruce, Danville, Va., treasurer; and M. L. Palmer, Chocoma, Wyo., executive officer; Lee Griggs, Athens; Mill Leggett, Augusta; John Bondurant, Athens; and J. B. Williams, Auburn, and James L. Bridges, Smithville.

A University of Georgia branch of the National Rifle association which includes civilian as well as military marksmen, has been organized, and any student of the university wanting to shoot, whether in the R. O. T. C. or not, is eligible to receive this instruction.

Petersburg Awarded Franchise by League

Norfolk, Va., February 20.—(P)—Petersburg was awarded a franchise and the opening and closing dates of the playing season were fixed at a meeting here this afternoon by the directors of the Virginia league. The season will open April 15 instead of April 12 as previously decided and will close September 15, giving a full five months of baseball.

The franchise awarded Petersburg was that formerly held by Rocky Mount.

For no other reason the game should serve as a test under varsity fire. This game will close the spring training, which began the first of February. Spring practice has been in charge of Coach "Kid" Woodruff and Assistant Coach Harry Mehre and Jimmie Crowley.

PETREL NINE WILL START WORK MONDAY

BY LAMAR JACKSON.

Coch Frank Anderson will assemble his baseball candidates on Hernando field Monday afternoon for the first workout of the year. Only five of last year's varsity nine will report for practice, but persons will be bolstered by the graduates from the last year's freshman team, when the progress of formation of this year's Petrel nine will begin. With the first game only one month off the boys are to be sent through stiff past in preparation for the first game with the Georgia Bulldogs in Athens on March 29.

There will be 40 odd baseball players to report for the first instruction of the year. Due to spring football practice all the candidates will not report the first week, but after the spring game of football with Georgia on February 27, they will fall under the direction of Coach Anderson, and will deliver their wares to compete for places on the Petrel nine.

Coch Anderson is facing a great problem in an effort to keep up the splendid record made by his nine in the past. However, he pins his hopes in the excellent material from the freshman team to fill the weak spots left by last year's graduation.

The batteries for this year's nine will be taken care of by men who have never topped the Gold and Black heretofore. Thad Buchanan, pitcher and third baseman of last year, will probably do all his work on the mound. Stout Gerlington, a curve ball artist, and Alfonso York, a southpaw, will carry a greater part of the pitching burden on their shoulders with Hugh Buchanan, hold in reserve. The most promising receivers are Justus Zerk, of last year and Minibinet from the freshman team.

Captain Earl Wall will hold his old position at short, with Lindsay, a letter man of last year, the most likely for the initial sack, other promising infielders are M. Anderson, Shepherd, Chestnut, McKissick, Kent, and Boswell. Duke Terrell alternate captain will hold one position in the outer guard and the likely candidates for the other positions are Cousins, Hancock, Evans and Hudson.

Dislikes Resin, Says Waite Hoyt

New York, February 20.—(P)—Waite Hoyt, pitcher for the New York Yankees, prefers dirt to resin as an aid to baxmen.

According to Hoyt, few hurlers will profit by the little bags of the powdery substance made available by a recent ruling of the rules committee. Some pitchers have used it in the past despite the illegality, he believes, and it avails them little.

Hoyt argues that pitchers have as much right to use resin as batsmen. "The Yankees," he says, "have bags on the bench for the batters to wipe their hands on. Why not do away with that? I can't understand all this law and cry about resin. It makes a pitcher's hands sticky, anyway, and he'll throw wild."

CADILLAC OFFICIALS TO TOUR COUNTRY

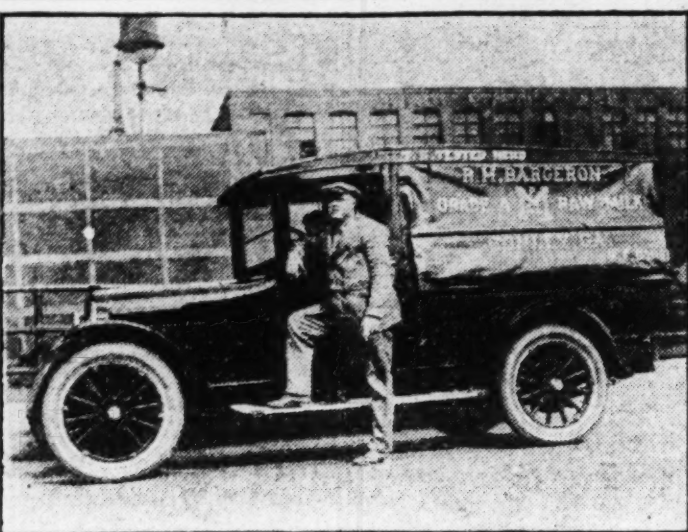

Lawrence P. Fisher, president, and Lynn McNaughton, vice president, of the Cadillac Motor Car company, will visit San Francisco, Phoenix, El Paso, San Antonio, Dallas, Houston, New Orleans, Birmingham, Jacksonville, Miami and other points.

The Cadillac officials believe that a larger proportion of owners are buying cars in the quality class every year. Cross-country touring and the large use of motor cars for interurban travel and for reaching distant points is, in their opinion, one of the factors in the new demand for cars which will travel long distances without mechanical attention and with small cost of upkeep.

"Facts regarding business conditions during the first month of 1926 confirm our predictions at the beginning of the year that 1926 business is to be highly satisfactory," Mr. Fisher states. "In our own business," he continues, "the new Cadillac car has given a great impetus to our sales, and this, added to the increased demand for quality cars, has given us new peak sales surpassing anything in our history."

"As to nation we have come to realize that the motor car is not an expense, but an actual wealth-producing factor of prime importance. It saves time, which is the greatest asset we have; and with its usefulness it couples so much of genuine enjoyment that it is a powerful stimulus to increase earning power. That we as a nation of individuals, realize this is indicated by the large percentage of cars which are bought upon sound purchase plans, the buyer realizing that the car increases his money-making capacity.

"Among Cadillac owners, we find many who are members of families owning two or more Cadillacs. This is a market which is practically undeveloped. Another field is the foreign market. Eighty-one per cent of all the cars in the world are in operation in the United States, which has but 7 per cent of the world's population. Automobile exports increased 44 per cent last year and the foreign field has been scarcely tapped."

HUDSON, ESSEX A. Y. D. SYSTEM IN FULL SWING

Hudson-Essex is backing its new a. y. d. or "at your door" system of selling cars with the greatest six-cylinder production in automobile history, according to word received from the company by the Goldsmith, Jr., Becker company, distributor.

So confident is the Hudson organization of public approval in its move—which abandons the practice of f. o. b. Detroit prices and begins the quotation of actual delivered prices to the buyer—that it has stepped its volume up to 1,800 six-cylinder cars a day. This is to be increased at once to 1,700 daily, and then to higher figures. This is a figure, says Mr. Becker, which never before has been even approached in the six-cylinder field.

"In the week since our announcement of this revolutionary new plan," declares Mr. Becker, "the motoring public has told us in no uncertain terms that it is for us. The buyers appreciate that they can read one of our quoted prices and know that it is the actual price they will have to pay for a car delivered at their home, with freight, tax and equipment all included."

"Students of the motor car business have often predicted this important change. The public has always been for it. But 'f. o. b. Detroit' was a custom built up through 25 years, and naturally was difficult to overturn. A Gordian knot of tradition grew up around it. Now Hudson-Essex distributors and dealers, with one blow, have cut that knot and brought about the improvement so often predicted."

"We consider this move in the light of a modern business practice. It is in line with the manner in which all other merchandise is sold. One price to all and that price plainly stated are the very basic factors in modern business. The automobile business has been almost the only exception to this rule."

"In the past few years Hudson-Essex has made repeated moves to put its cars in the hands of buyers on the best possible terms. That one undeviating policy has made Hudson-Essex the largest builder of sixes. Now comes the most important step in that whole plan—a plan which makes prices so easy and simple to understand that confusion is all but impossible. Watch a. y. d. replace f. o. b."

ROBERT E. RUSHTON TO BE BURIED TODAY

Robert E. Rushton, Sr., one of Atlanta's oldest native-born citizens died Saturday at 2:30 o'clock.

Mr. Rushton was born in Atlanta January 8, 1849, when Atlanta was scarcely more than a village. As a young man he took part in all the activities of the town, being a member of the volunteer fire department and military organizations.

For a number of years he was secretary and treasurer of the Winship Machine company. About 18 years ago he was stricken with paralysis at his desk, and never fully recovered. For 30 years he has been an officer in the Central Presbyterian church, being first a deacon and later becoming an elder and for a number of years clerk of the session, also taking a leading part in the mission work of the church.

He was married in 1876 to Miss Ella B. Wight, of Atlanta. Mr. Rushton is survived by four daughters, Mrs. Clyde L. King and Mrs. Hill R. Huffman, of Atlanta; Mrs. Barrington J. King, of LaGrange, Ga.; and Mrs. Marion C. Talley, of Lakeland, Fla.; and two sons, Robert E. Rushton, Jr., and W. W. Rushton, both of Atlanta.

The funeral services will be held at the Central Presbyterian church, conducted by Dr. Ben R. Lacy, Jr., at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Interment in Oakland cemetery.

The following are requested to act as pallbearers: John A. Whitener, Sr., Charles F. Whitener, W. D. Beattie, J. Bulow Campbell, James R. Thompson, J. E. Kirk, Dr. Lowe Stillman and Marion Jackson.

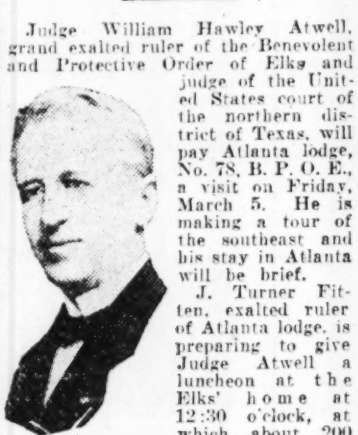

The elders and deacons of the church will act as an honorary escort.

TOLL PHONE SYSTEM WILL BE ENLARGED

Plans for enlarging and improving the long-distance telephone system in Georgia this year include construction of 2,000 miles of physical circuit and 600 miles of phantom circuit. More than 16,000 cross-arms will be used, and the total project, including extensive reconstruction work, will cost about $300,000. It was announced Saturday by the Southern Bell Telephone company.

There are now 213 circuits terminating in Atlanta, and it is proposed to add 22 new circuits during the year, making a grand total of 235. The new circuits include addition of two to Jacksonville, two to Miami, two to Tampa and two to Macon. These new circuits are expected to care for the growing volume of business to south Georgia and Florida points.

Judge Atwell, Chief of Elks, Here on March 5

Judge William Hawley Atwell, grand exalted ruler of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and of the United States court of the northern district of Texas, will be in Atlanta on Friday, March 5. He is making a tour of the southeast and his stay in Atlanta will be brief.

J. Turner Fitten, exalted ruler of Atlanta lodge, is preparing to give Judge Atwell a luncheon at the Elks' home at 12:30 o'clock, at which about 200 Elks and their wives will be present.

DAVID M. DAVIS NAME TO BE PLACED ON MEMORIAL ROLL

Wade H. Davis, a prominent business man and citizen of Atlanta, has made a founder's roll contribution of $1,000 to the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial in memory of his father, David Madison Davis, a gallant soldier of the Confederacy, who volunteered at the outbreak of the war and served until the surrender of his brigade at Greensboro, N. C., in April, 1865.

David Madison Davis was a member of company D, Phillips' legion, Georgia cavalry, the first cavalry company organized in Coweta county. They were mustered into service near Atlanta on August 2, 1861.

After the war Mr. Davis engaged in the practice of medicine, for which he had been educated prior to the war. He died in Atlanta in 1870.

Ancient Compositions By Landowska Closes Concert Series Saturday

Wanda Landowska, woman composer of Paderewski, will end the Atlanta Music club's series of concerts at Saturday afternoon with a program of historic compositions based on the harpsichord, the instrument termed as "the ancestor of the piano."

A dance by Haydn, introduced when George Washington was a young squire at Mount Vernon, will be the "most modern" selected on the program, other selections dating back to times of the Pilgrim fathers and Shakespeare.

The incidental groups on the piano will afford contrast to the harpsichord. The concert will be open to the public and seats will be on sale Friday and Saturday at the Cable Piano company.

Electrical Employees Honored by Company In Banquet at Ansley

To demonstrate its appreciation of loyalty and efficiency of employees in handling inventory and accounting problems by the closing of the Western Electric company's supply business into the new company, the Atlanta branch of Graybar Electric company entertained the workers at a dinner-dance at Hotel Ansley Tuesday.

At the opening of the dinner C. H. McFee, service manager, announced its purpose and the program was turned over to the fun committee.

Along with numerous stunts, popularity contests were conducted. Miss Ida Scruggs, of 121 Peoples street, was voted the most popular girl, and she was presented with a beautiful electric lamp.

Guy Wood, of Mayson avenue, was given an automatic cigar lighter when voted the most popular man. Mrs. Robert Flournoy, of 122 Neil street, and Robert Sheffield, of Whipple avenue, took prizes in the stunt contest. The Atlanta Melody artists furnished music.

LIBRARY TO OFFER SERIES OF COURSES

The Carnegie library has acquired for its patrons the series of courses issued by the American Library association known as "Reading with a Purpose" lists.

The course was prepared in response to demands of readers desiring guides to books on given subjects. Fourteen pamphlets have been issued and each was prepared by an authority on the subject.

The Greatest January in History!

Announcement of tremendous price reductions and vital improvements was followed by the greatest January in Dodge Brothers history.

Retail sales for the four weeks ending January 31st were 14,943, an increase of 67.4 per cent over the same period of 1925.

Mid-summer business in January!

When the drastic reductions went into effect, Dodge Brothers, Inc. said frankly that they were offering the greatest values in their history.

How well the public realizes that these really ARE the greatest values is proved in a definite and emphatic way by the remarkable record for January.

AT USED CAR MARKETS GREAT ACTIVITY NOTED

Even more authentic than the first robin as a herald of coming spring, is the start of activity in the used-car market. On used car lots and in dealers' garages all over the country, prospective owners are inspecting thousands of cars which will be seen this summer on highways and boulevards.

Used car buying, however, is on a new basis. The old order of bargaining is gone, for buyers have learned that the concern whose reputation is staked upon the kind of service it renders the public is the most reliable place to buy the "used mileage" represented in a used motor car.

Interesting in that connection is the first anniversary of the Ford guaranteed used car plan, which has not only raised to a new height public confidence in used Ford cars, but due to the fact that approximately half the cars in use are Fords, has gone a long way to stabilize this phase of the automobile industry. The plan is made simple and positive in operation by the fact that each car is guaranteed individually by one who is in the best position to know its possibilities—the Ford dealer.

By virtue of the fact that every community has its authorized Ford service, the local dealer maintains personal contact with practically all the cars handled through this agency. When the car is eventually turned in, he frequently knows just about how far it has been driven and the kind of driving to which it has been subjected. If the car needs reconditioning when turned in, the dealer is in a position to give it the needed mechanical attention at the lowest possible cost and when ready for service, can definitely determine the amount of mileage it should deliver, the price depending entirely upon this unused transportation.

Public acceptance of the Ford used car plan is clearly indicated in reports made to the company general offices in Detroit.

Other members of the board of directors are Dr. C. A. Rhodes, Dr. C. E. Rushin, Dr. H. W. Minor, Dr. L. G. Baggett and Dr. J. J. Martin.

Lipschutz Services Will Be Held Today From the Residence

Funeral services for Mrs. Rosa Lipschutz, well-known Atlanta woman, who died Friday night at a private hospital, will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon from the home, 345 Ponce de Leon avenue. Rabbi A. P. Hirmes will officiate and interment will be in Crest Lawn cemetery.

Mrs. Lipschutz was a native of Russia. She moved to Atlanta in 1908 from Savannah. She was a member of a number of Jewish benevolent organizations and was an active religious worker.

SUPPORT PLEDGED TO HOME MOVEMENT

Sam C. Crane, secretary of the southern national soldiers and sailors' home committee, announced Saturday that while in Atlanta last week, Governor Ralph O. Brewster and other members of the party from Maine assured members of the Spanish War Veterans' camp they would support the movement to have a national soldiers and sailors' home located in Atlanta.

A. W. Jones, smoke inspector, had a conference with Hiram W. Ricker and Philip R. Shorey, members of the party, and both assured Mr. Jones that the movement would be given their hearty support. Mr. Crane said. In a recent conference with John Chalmers, past commander of Fitzhugh Lee camp No. 6, Governor William M. Brannon, of Alabama, also declared himself in favor of the movement.

HAROLD A. GILBERT CRACK FIRE PILOT GOES TO NEWMAN

Harold A. Gilbert, popular member of the fire department for the last eight years, fire of which he served as crack driver for Assistant Chief William A. Butler, has been elected chief of the Newman fire department to succeed his brother-in-law, W. L. Gilbert, who died two weeks ago. Mr. Gilbert will sever his connection with the Atlanta department Tuesday and Wednesday will assume the post held by his brother for ten years. He became a member of the fire department July 5, 1917, and after serving as supernumerary a month he was given a permanent place at No. 1 engine house, remaining there eight years. Soon after he became a regular, Mr. Gilbert began to show skill as a driver and in 1919 he was selected to drive Chief W. B. Cody. He served in this capacity for one year and was transferred to drive Assistant Chief R. H. Pressley. In 1921 Assistant Chief William M. Butler acquired the services of Gilbert.

U. D. C. CHAPTERS GIVE ASSISTANCE IN CLEARING DEBT

Atlanta chapter of U. D. C. will have the cooperation of sister chapters throughout Georgia in securing funds for clearing the mortgage from its chapter house in the concert by Paul Ryman at the auditorium March 31, it was said Saturday by Mrs. John F. Perdue, local president.

"We do not believe any drive will be necessary to dispose of tickets to the concert, as Mr. Ryman is known as an entertainer of the first rank who invariably draws capacity houses wherever he appears," Mrs. Perdue said. "We appreciate the splendid feeling toward Atlanta and our organization on the part of sister chapters elsewhere, and will be only too glad to let them take whatever part they wish in aiding us to clear our home of debt."

Mr. Ryman is in New York this month singing in concert and coaching in operative roles under the American operatic artists.

TEXANS EN ROUTE TO BIG MEETING ENJOY STOPOVER

More than 150 prominent Texas educators stopped in Atlanta Saturday morning en route to Washington, D. C., to the convention of the department of superintendence, National Education association.

Practically all of the visitors were from Dallas and they will endeavor to have the convention brought to their home city in 1927. The stopover was part of the advertisement program, and they desired to get a glimpse of Atlanta. Various points of interest were visited, including Stone Mountain.

In the delegation were Dr. W. R. Crozier, superintendent of Dallas public schools; Allen Hughes, superintendent of El Paso schools, and Z. E. Black, convention manager, Dallas Chamber of Commerce.

SOUTHERN ADOPTS PLAN TO IMPROVE MILES OF TRACKS

Although extensive plans were completed in 1925 by the Southern Railway system when 929 miles of track were furnished with heavier rails, a more extensive program will be carried out in 1926, according to R. B. Pegram, Atlanta, vice president.

Included in the lines improved in 1926 were 349 miles of track furnished with new 100-pound rails, the standard section for lines of heavy traffic; 407 miles with 85-pound rails, and 102 miles with rails of other weights on branch lines. The Southern owns 1,080 miles of track with 100-pound rails.

A step forward was the adoption of 39 feet as the standard length of the new rails, instead of 33 feet, which was the standard for many years. Use of the longer rail requires a smaller number of joints, improves the riding quality of the track and gives an added factor of safety.

For laying during the first half of this year, 46,200 tons of rails were purchased.

Two Whites, 3 Negroes Bound Over Under Prohi Law Charges

Two white persons and three negroes were bound over to the state in Recorder A. W. Callaway's court Saturday on charges of liquor law violations brought by G. E. Jones and O. D. Hardy, "under-cover" members of the police force employed to detect prohibition enactment in fringements.

Dora Reid, of 24 Carnegie way, was fined $25 for operating a dive and bound over to the state on a $200 bond. Essie Lunsford, 43 East Cain street, was also bound over under a $200 bond. The negroes, Will Byers, rear of 102 Washington street; W. H. Jenkins, 21 Crumley street, and G. H. Dobbs, 85 Lena street, were held to the state under a $200 bond.

YOUTHS GIVEN GANG TERMS FOR ROBBERY

J. L. Atkinson, C. I. Haynes, Elbert Mash and E. H. Parrish, white youths, entered pleas of guilty Saturday before Judge John D. Humphries in Fulton superior court to charges of car breaking and were given straight sentences on the charge.

Atkinson was sentenced to serve from four to five years; Haynes from three to five years; Mash and Parrish from two to five years. The youths were arrested last Sunday near Ben Hill on the A. B. & A. railroad tracks. They were captured by county policemen as they approached a cache of 80,000 cigarettes discovered by the officers who had kept an all-night vigil over the loot which had been stolen from freight cars.

A. & P. TEA COMPANY DENIES SALE REPORTS

Reports that control of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea company was to pass into the hands of the National Food Products company, were emphatically refuted Saturday, when B. P. Vinson, local vice president, gave out a statement categorically denying recent published reports to this effect. The statement was given out on behalf of John A. Hartford, president of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea company.

"There is no truth whatever in the published report," says President Hartford's statement. Substantially all of the common stock and the majority of the preferred stock in the company, it continues, is owned by the management and the employees, and the statement emphatically declares, "No sale of the company or control of its stock is now or ever has been contemplated." Recent reorganization of the company, it is stated, was for the sole purpose of providing a plan whereby employees might acquire stock in the company.

PIPE SMOKERS URGE JONES TO STAY HERE

A letter asking Dr. M. Ashby Jones, pastor of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church, to decline a call to the pastorate of the Second Baptist church, St. Louis, Mo., and urging him to remain in Atlanta, was sent to the minister Saturday by the grand lodge, National Order of Pipe Smokers.

FULTON TEACHERS PLAN NEW ORGANIZATION

Teachers of 29 schools of the Fulton county system, who recently reorganized the Fulton County Public School Teachers' association, will meet at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon at Fulton High school, on Washington street, to vote on a newly drafted constitution. The association is affiliated with the American Federation of Teachers and the American Federation of Trades. J. A. Wells, present superintendent, was president of the old organization which was organized in 1921. Present officers are: President,

Boyd Taylor, of Fulton High faculty; vice president, Robert H. Lamkin, principal Hapeville school; secretary, Miss Lydia Guice, principal Cascade school; financial secretary, Mrs. Lera H. Cox, principal Grove Park school. Directors for 1926 and the schools which they represent, announced Saturday for the first time, are: Mrs. Ebbie Williams, Marion Smith; Mrs. J. P. McCleary, Liberty Hill; Mrs. W. B. Richardson, Grove Park; Mrs. R. E. L. Carroll, West Haven; Mrs. O. R. Meyer, Mount Olive; Mrs. A. S. Howell, E. P. Howell; Mrs. M. V. DR. C. L. RIDLEY HEADS STATE HEALTH BODY

Dr. C. L. Ridley, of Macon, was elected president of the Georgia State Health Officers' association at the closing session of that organization's annual convention at the state board of health Saturday. Dr. H. L. Akridge, of Brunswick, was chosen secretary. The association, including city and county health officers from all parts of the state, discussed various health problems confronting public physicians in Georgia and the means which they have found successful in combating disease and epidemics.

Hudson Is World's Largest Builders of "Sixes" and Third Largest Builder of Motor Cars

FORD'S NEW PRICES A BUSINESS STIMULANT

The Ford price cut just announced will be a strong sales stimulant for all medium-priced cars, according to Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car company.

There are several million people driving Fords now, and the cut in price will make a bigger increase this year than would ordinarily occur.

The American people have an insatiable desire to advance socially, and the greatly increased number of Ford owners will mean a much larger increase in the normal number of prospects for better cars.

Even if there were no new prospects left who had never owned an automobile, there would still be a tremendous market for medium-priced cars created by the natural desire on the part of owners of low-priced cars to drive better ones.

Of course, the Ford owner will never be a prospect for a heavy, bulky car that is expensive to operate. He will demand a lighter, more economical car because he knows by experience that traffic conditions make that type car the most useful.

This fact and three others will boost the sale of cars priced under two thousand dollars.

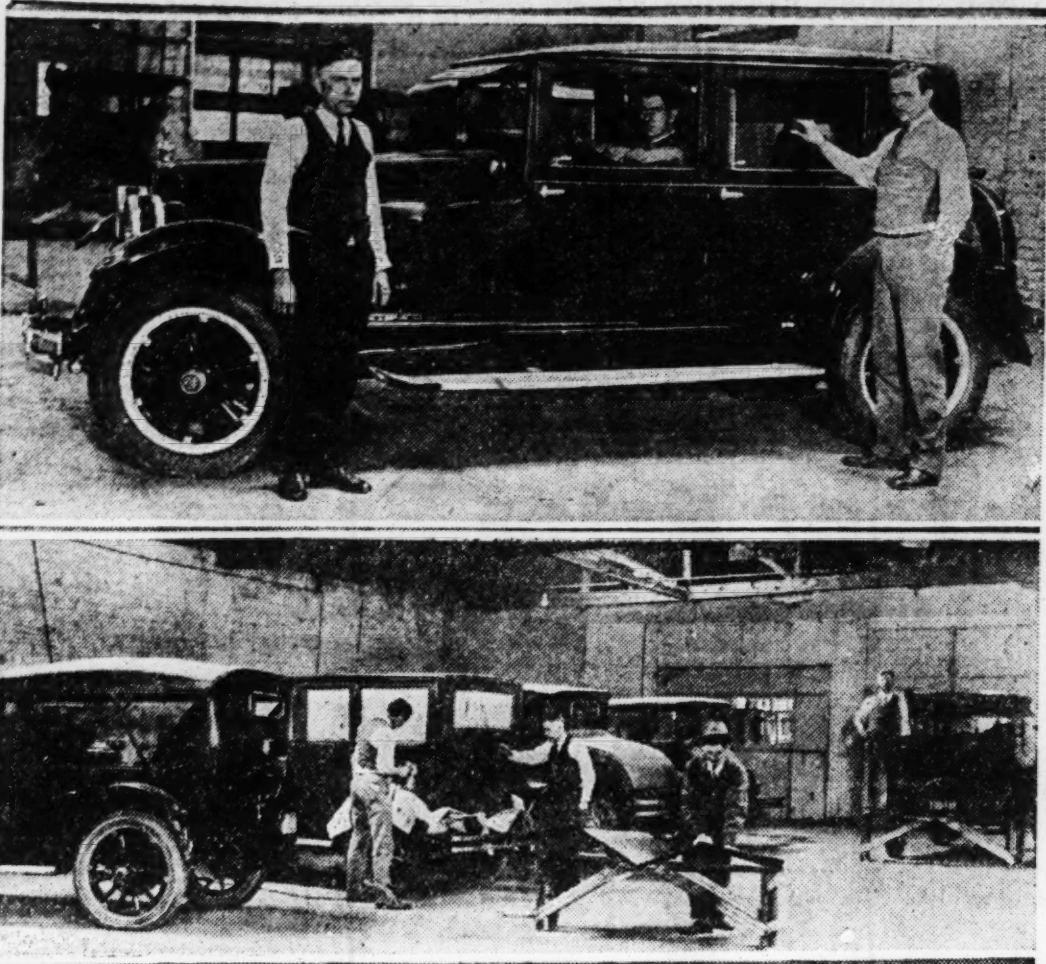

First, the increased use of motor cars by the present owners who cannot get along without them. This will hasten the necessity for replacements which naturally will come in greater volume from the medium-priced field.

Second, the demand for second, third and even fourth cars for the use of different members of the family. These cars will naturally be chosen from the medium-price field but they must have good looks, speed, reliability and economy.

Third, the farmers of the country are just beginning to buy. When the money from the next crop comes in the farmers will be back in the market in earnest. And as approximately 95 per cent of the farmer-owned cars call in the medium-price field, this will mean a big increase in sales of new cars under two thousand dollars.

Dealers have not been heavily stocked with cars this winter. Labor is well employed at good wages. Monday comparatively easy and 1926 ought to be a good year.

Atlanta's Newest Duco and Lacquer Plant

The Holbrook, Darby and Smith Company, have just opened at 661 Whitehall street, Atlanta's newest Duco and Lacquer plant. Their service for refinishing automobiles is complete, having as an associate, A. L. Quinn, one of Atlanta's oldest top makers.

This company, while new, is made up of men who are all experts in their line, having been associated with Duco and Lacquering plants for the past several years.

SHORTAGE OF BALLOON TIRES IS PREDICTED

It would not be surprising if dealers and manufacturers' stocks of balloon tires would fall short of meeting the demand during the late spring and early summer months. This is the opinion of M. J. Goldner, secretary of the Corduroy Tire company, Grand Rapids, Mich.

The thousands of balloon tires which were put into service in 1924 as regular equipment and which have continued to run up to the present time will be worn out early during the 1926 season. When the spring buying season opens up there will be a great demand for balloons to replace those original equipment tires. This drain upon stocks will be unusually heavy and it is not unreasonable to believe that the demand will be even greater than the supply.

Balloon replacements differ from high-pressure replacements inasmuch as with the high-pressure tires automobile owners usually bought only one tire at a time. When a tire failed the owner simply would replace it with a new one and give no further thought to the remaining tires of the set.

With balloons it is different and in most cases the tread rubber wears down to the carcass of the tire before the casing actually gives out, and this wearing down is practically even on all four tires. This is due to the low pressure permitting the tread to hinge over uneven road beds. The use of four-wheel brakes which have become so popular during the last year also has a tendency to wear down the tires evenly. Therefore balloon tire users will be in the market for four tires instead of one.

This is a new condition in the tire industry and it is not at all unreasonable to believe that when balloon replacements begin in the late spring that stocks will be depleted and that manufacturers will be pressed to the limit to meet the demand.

DR. R. L. BAKER HAS ACCEPTED CALL TO ATLANTA CHURCH

Dr. R. L. Baker, for the past several years pastor of the First Baptist church, Ashland, Ky., has accepted the call of the Third church, Atlanta, and will take up his work in this city about the first of March.

Dr. Baker is well known throughout the south as a Baptist minister and leader. He was with the home mission board for some years, working in Louisiana and Mississippi. He has served as pastor of the First Baptist church of Dublin, this state, and of the Riverside Baptist church, Jacksonville.

Dr. and Mrs. Baker have many friends in Atlanta who will be delighted to welcome them to this city as citizens. The Third church is planning a cordial reception for them upon their arrival in Atlanta.

Twitty Issues New Bulletin On Fresh Water Fishing Laws

Should you meet a poor fish on your way home some night, you mustn't shoot it. For it is against the law to shoot fish in Georgia with any kind of a firearm. It is a misdemeanor.

This is one of the state laws to which Peter S. Twitty, state game and fish warden, draws attention in a newly issued bulletin on the fresh water fishing laws of Georgia.

Other piscatorial crimes—all of them misdemeanors and punishable by a fine of not less than $25 and costs—except dynamiting, which may draw a fine of from $100 to $1,000—include muddying a stream or any other body of water; taking fish by basket, trap or similar device; placing such devices in any of the waters of the state for the purpose of catching fish, catching fish by seine or net; putting any poisonous substances in the water, such as walnut hulls, lime, etc.; or fishing on Sunday.

Thus it will be seen that the only lawful way to catch fresh water fish in Georgia is by hook and line. With one exception:

If you are the sole owner of a pond—that is, if it is entirely surrounded by your own land—you and your family or tenants may fish any old way you please, except dynamiting, shooting or poisoning. A lessee of such a pond, however, doesn't enjoy the same privileges—he can only use the hook and line.

Commissioner Twitty is planning a special campaign against the pollution of streams by chemicals or other poisons thrown off by cotton mills, pulp mills and other industrial plants.

The department offers a standing reward of $25 for arrest and conviction of any person violating these laws, and $50 in case of dynamiting. In addition, half the fine will go to any citizen who prosecutes a case and furnishes evidence to convict. These rewards stand good until January 1, 1927.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Ten days in the workhouse was the sentence for Patrick Curran, 50, when it was found he had been arrested 52 times on the same charge—intoxication.

FEBRUARY FURNITURE SALES

Are now in order. But this isn't a furniture sale. It's another signpost along the way directing your attention to the unusual service which is now offered to you through The Constitution's "Where-You-Can-Buy-It" department on the classified pages daily.

This department supplies the missing link between nationally advertised merchandise and the local dealers. When you turn there you will find not only furniture, but other trade-marked articles you've been wanting to find in Atlanta.

FUNERAL TODAY FOR W. BLOXHAM, LOCAL ENGINEER

Funeral services for Wandsworth Bloxham, 82, prominent Atlanta engineer, who died Thursday night at a private hospital, will be held at 9:30 o'clock today from the chapel of H. M. Patterson & Son. The Rev. Russell K. Smith will officiate and the body will be taken to Catskill, N. Y., for interment.

Mr. Bloxham was widely known in engineering circles throughout the south. He was a native of New York state and came to Atlanta more than 35 years ago to assume the position of superintendent of the Butler and Davis streets generating plant, Georgia Railway and Power company.

He left the city in 1904 to take the place of consulting engineer for the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railway, with headquarters in Virginia. He held that position for many years and later returned to Georgia as consulting engineer for a coastwise steamship line. He retired from business seven years ago.

His wife died a year ago and since that time he had resided at a local hotel. He is survived by a nephew, Howard C. Wilbur, of Catskill, N. Y.

CADETS OF MARIST WILL PARTICIPATE IN LENT SEASON

The Rev. James Horton, president of Marist college, Saturday announced that the Marist cadet corps will take part in the 40 hours' devotion which will open at Sacred Heart church today. A solemn high military mass will be the opening exercises at 11 o'clock.

Major Eugene Schmidt, commandant of the cadet corps and head of the department of military science, will be in charge of the military exercises. The mass will be followed by the procession of the blessed sacrament and chanting of litanies. The devotion of 40 hours will continue until Tuesday night, closing at 7:30 o'clock.

Special services will be held Sunday and Monday nights, starting each night at 8 o'clock. The sermons will be delivered by the Rev. Charles Dougherty, now a member of the Marist missionary board, with headquarters in Washington, but formerly assistant pastor of Sacred Heart church.

The Rev. Horton also announced that during Lent special services will be held at Sacred Heart church Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Wednesday night at 8 o'clock and the stations of the cross, twice every Friday at 12:15 p. m. and 8 p. m.

Georgia Association Will Seek Thousands Of Individual Members

Membership by individuals as well as by counties and civic organizations will be solicited this year for the Georgia association, it is announced by F. H. Abbott, secretary of the organization, who has just returned from a meeting of Georgia association directors at Tifton.

"The Georgia association, which for several years has devoted itself to building up the agricultural interests of the state and interesting farmers in other states to move to Georgia, has received so much encouragement from individual citizens that it has decided to ask for thousands of individual memberships," said Mr. Abbott. "It was voted at the Tifton meeting to arrange a conference with Governor Walker with a view to bringing about legislation which will permit counties and communities to appropriate funds for advertising and development purposes."

WISDOM APPOINTED TO COLUMBUS MEETING

Tom Wisdom, state school auditor, has been designated by State Superintendent of Schools Fort E. Land, to represent the state department of education at the convention of secretaries of the chambers of commerce of the state of Georgia at Columbus and present to them the educational program which the state board of education, together with other educators throughout the state, will ask the legislature to provide.

QUARTERLY SUPPER FOR KIRKWOOD CHURCH

Supremacy Maintained through Features which Established Ford Leadership

Left-Hand Drive—
Originally introduced by Henry Ford on the Model T car in 1908 and since adopted for most American-made cars.

Three Point Motor Suspension—
First used by Henry Ford in 1903, and a feature of the Model T power plant for eighteen years.

Dual Ignition System—
Dual ignition is provided for Ford cars, (1) the Ford magneto and (2) the generator and storage battery. This has been a great factor in establishing the Ford reputation for reliability.

Planetary Transmission—
Costs more to build than the conventional sliding gear type but gives better light car control.

Multiple Disc-in-oil Clutch—
The multiple disc clutch is generally conceded to be the best and smoothest type for any car. The Ford clutch runs in oil.

Thermo-Syphon Cooling System—
Extremely simple—always efficient.

No water pump to require packing. Circulation of water is governed entirely by engine temperature.

Simple, Dependable Lubrication—
Exceedingly simple, combining the splash principle with gravity flow. No pump required.

Torque Tube Drive—
Henry Ford originated the Torque Tube in 1908—a driving principle now embodied in many of the highest priced cars.

"We have never lowered the quality of the car to reduce the price"

JANUARY PRODUCTION RECORD, SAYS MAFFETT

Official figures just released by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce show that the automobile industry as a whole produced 323,727 passenger cars and trucks in January, 1926, a gain of 92,665 or 38 per cent over January, 1925. The same report supplies revised figures showing the industry's production for the entire year of 1925 as 4,314,633 vehicles.

"The gain in automobile production shown by these figures," says F. E. Maffett, of F. E. Maffett, Inc., local Dodge Brothers dealer, "should dispel the unpleasant thoughts of those people who are constantly anticipating 'The saturation point.' Looking back we find that the industry's production for 1925 showed a gain of 19 per cent over 1924 and 51.2 over 1923, its previous banner year.

"In making our plans for this year," business we have been greatly interested," Mr. Maffett said, "in comparing the growth of Dodge Brothers, Inc., that of the industry as a whole. Total shipments officially reported by Dodge Brothers, Inc., for 1925, showed an increase of 15 per cent over 1924 and 45 per cent over 1923. That is while the industry has gained 51.2 per cent over 1923, Dodge Brothers, Inc., have gained 45 per cent.

"Comparing the month of January for the same years we find that January, 1926, for the industry showed a gain of 38 per cent over 1925, of 3 per cent over 1924 and of 33 per cent over 1923. The corresponding figures released by Dodge Brothers, Inc., for total factory shipments of their passenger and commercial vehicles show 22,135 for January, 1926, a gain of 41 per cent over 1925.

"With the greatly increased production capacity afforded by the new buildings and the new machinery provided by the recently completed ten million dollar expansion program—giving a present capacity of over 1,500 cars a day—and with the greatly increased demand for their product which has resulted from recent improvements and price reductions Dodge Brothers, Inc., have good reason to expect 1926 to hold no 'Saturation Point' terrors for them."

ART EXHIBITION TO BE GIVEN AID OF CIVIC BODIES

Official recognition of the art exhibition of the Atlanta Woman's club March 1-4, will be given by the city administration, the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, the Atlanta Art association and other bodies. Mrs. J. R. Little, general chairman, announced Saturday.

Mayor Sims, W. D. Hoffman, president of the chamber of commerce; J. J. Haverly, president of the Art association, and Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, chairman of the art, Federation of Women's Clubs, will make short addresses at the official opening.

The exposition will be opened on the night of March 1, with an elaborate entertainment in the club auditorium, in which hundreds of Atlanta women and girls will appear. The variety of rare and artistic things secured for the event assures an extensive and interesting collection.

Knights of Pythias Grand Chancellors Meet Here March 3

Will G. Moore, grand chancellor of Georgia, Knights of Pythias, announces the grand chancellors of Alabama, Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee Knights of Pythias will meet in Atlanta, March 3 and 4. The grand vice chancellors and grand keepers of records and seals also have been invited to attend the meeting with the grand chancellors.

The session is said to be of unusual interest to the Knights of Pythias in the southeastern states, being the first meeting of its kind ever held in the United States. The grand chancellors will consider the advisability of making this a permanent organization in the southeastern district. Entertainments will be provided and committees appointed by Grand Chancellor Moore within a few days.

FRANKLIN AT SHOWS CREATE A SENSATION

A custom-built car designated as the sport coupe, and said to be the lowest closed car in over-all height ever made, has in the past four weeks created an uncommon stir among show patrons in a number of cities including New York, Chicago, Columbus and Philadelphia.

The car is barely 5 feet from roof to ground; it was styled by the international coach designer, de Causse, and is mounted on the new high-powered Franklin chassis featuring copper-radiation air cooling.

Exhibited at New York in the Hotel Plaza Salon and in the Franklin space at the automobile show, the car was the local point of general interest. At Chicago this car, as exhibited by de Causse in the Drake salon, was the center of attention.

Along with this custom creation have appeared standard Franklin types finished in striking color effects. Franklin with its salons in 1925 contributed largely to the upbuilding of widespread interest in special colors, now stated by trade authorities to be the outstanding development in 1926. Dealers in the air-cooled car are catering to this interest with exhibitions of special finishes.

Franklin factory officials state that dealers are reporting big attendance at shows practically everywhere, and that retail buying is more active than in any previous year. This is the first time that the new de Causse styled Franklin has appeared in most of the dealer shows.

RURAL CARRIERS' HEAD VISITS HERE MONDAY

W. A. Keown, president of the National Rural Letter Carriers' association, will be principal speaker at a meeting of rural carriers of the fifth district Monday at 10 o'clock at the senate chamber, state capitol.

Carriers of this district belong to a banner branch organization, much of the credit being due to F. R. Lee, of Lithonia, president; J. E. Norrheut, Fairburn, vice president, and Horace Peacock, Atlanta, secretary.

Aviators and Air-Cooling

The adoption in 1925 of air-cooled engines as the standard in aviation, appears to benefit Franklin in more ways than one. Aside from letting the world know that air is the preferred medium for cooling purposes where performance requirements are exacting, the trend to air cooling in aviation has been followed by the purchase of Franklin cars by a number of prominent men in aviation work. Above is shown Major Carlyle H. Wash, post officer, Kelly field, San Antonio, Texas, and Mrs. Wash with their new Franklin sport runabout. A large bombing plane is in the background. Major Wash has had a number of interesting aeronautical assignments. Among them was his participation in the round-the-world flight.

"Evolution and Reincarnation" will be the subject of a free lecture to be given by Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, psychologist, this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel. The public is invited to attend.

BUICK DELIVERIES REACH HIGH MARK

Actual deliveries of Buick automobiles into the hands of owners for the year 1925 showed a gain of more than 18 per cent over the previous year, according to the announcement of E. T. Strong, general sales manager of the Buick Motor company.

The 1925 figure of 200,042 actual deliveries bettered the 1924 figure of 168,920 deliveries by more than 31,000 cars, showing unusual activity in sales and manufacturing by the Buick organization, according to Strong.

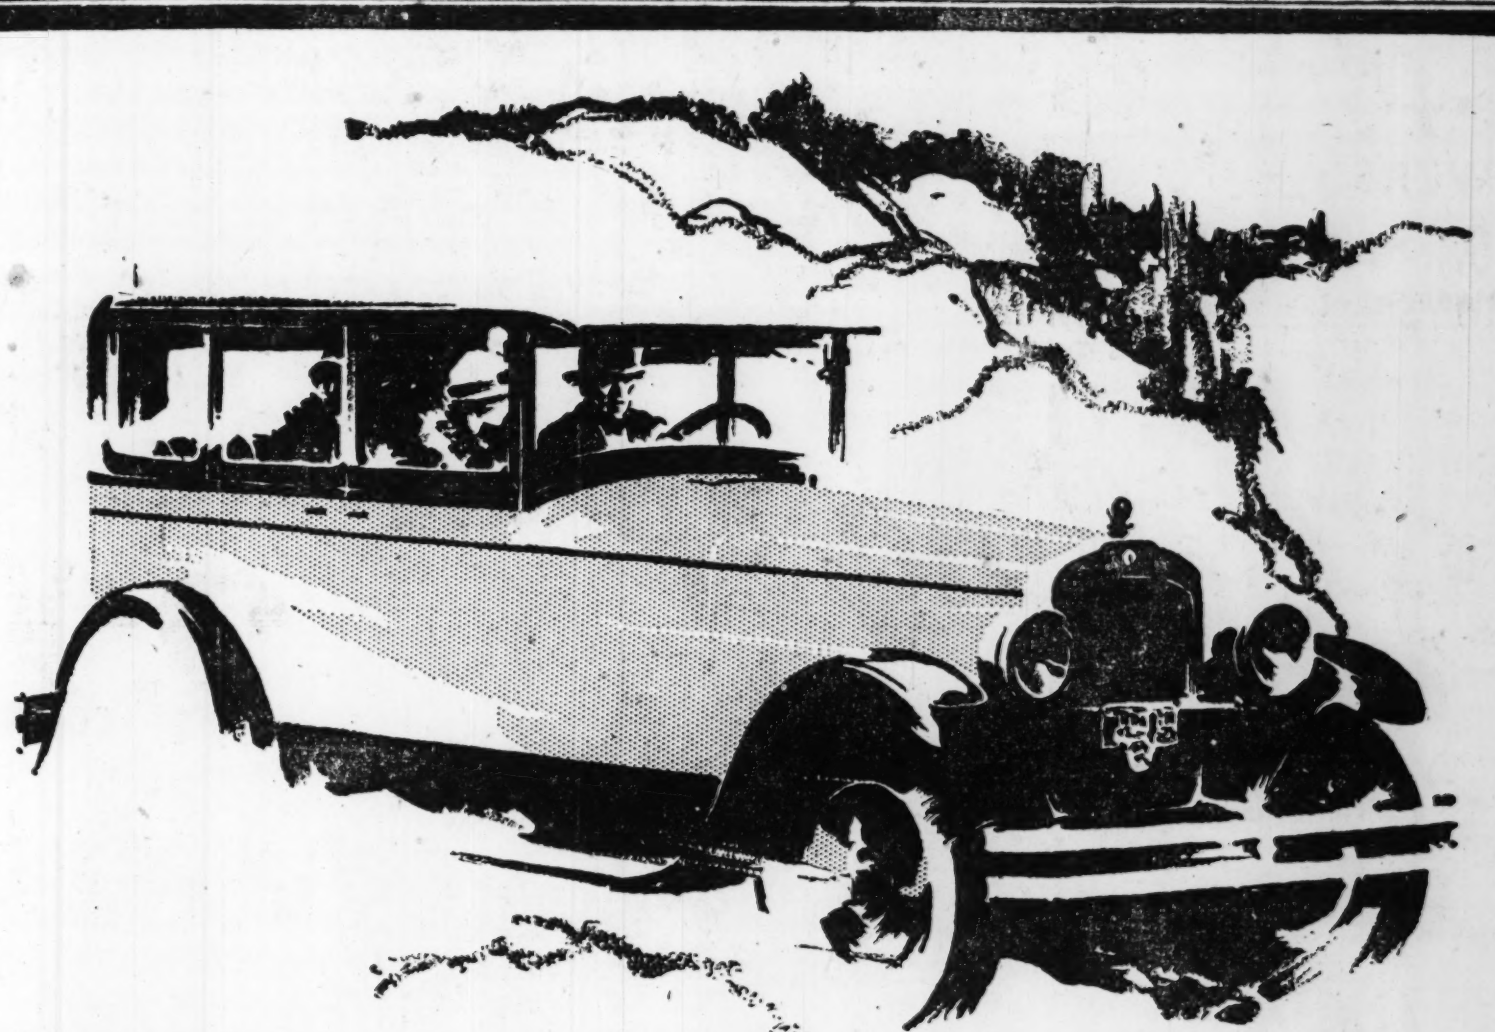

"The 1925 delivery total is a new high record for the Buick Motor company," said Strong. "It represents the result of great effort on the part of the manufacturing department to meet the heavy flood of orders which poured in during the last five months of the year, when the current models were put on the market. We are well pleased with the gain of more than 31,000 deliveries."

The All-Steel Body Has Arrived

THE all-steel, all-vision body has arrived. Dodge has proved its lasting durability. Ford has demonstrated its economy by adopting it. Rolls-Royce gave it style dominance when they endorsed the all-vision front. Jordan took it to the automobile shows in the quality light eight—And now everybody wants it. People want vision. People want safety. Engineers are busy designing to meet the demand. Manufacturers are hastening to satisfy the public. Jordan has drawn the attention of the motoring world to the new Jordan all-steel observation Sedan. It's safe because no old-fashioned pillar hides the on-coming driver just two seconds away. It's safe because everyone knows it's the splinters that kill. It's sure to be universally used because manufacturers demand lower cost, lighter weight and durability. It's a style leader because its dominant feature has been adopted by the style leaders in the motor car world. Drive it for thirty minutes and you'll know what we are talking about.

SIX TYPES OF MOTOR TRIED OUT FOR PONTIAC

Before the new Pontiac Six was placed into production by the Oakland Motor Car company, six different engines were built and tested out for thousands of miles over a period of three years in order to determine the final design of the engine to go into the car.

These six engines were not all built at once, several of them being improvements on the earlier ones. Some of the motors were radically different in design—a high speed type, for instance, being among those considered.

The fifth engine built was undoubtedly decided upon by both Oakland and General Motors engineers as being fundamentally the type of engine that should go into the new car to meet present-day requirements. This fifth engine was built more than a year and a half ago and thoroughly tested. As a result of these tests, the sixth and final engine was built, which was essentially the same as the fifth, with refinements and improvements that had been dictated by the grueling tests to which the previous designs had been put.

The various engines built had different displacements, different bore and stroke ratios, different oiling systems, different designs of cylinders, cylinder heads, manifolds and various designs of crankshaft.

Few motor car companies have ever gone to such great lengths to eliminate the element of guess work in the development of a new car as the Oakland Motor Car company, which is producing and distributing the Pontiac Six as companion to the Oakland

WOMAN THIEF SOUGHT IN WEINBERG ROBBERY

Fingerprints and footprints proved Saturday that a woman burglar worked in rapid fire manner late Friday night, obtained a platinum and diamond brooch valued at $900 from the home of Mrs. M. Weinberg, of 15 Linwood avenue.

According to a story told police by Mrs. Weinberg, the intruder jimmied a rear window, removed a screen, ran into a bedroom which had just been left by Mrs. Weinberg, secured the brooch and left, all within a span of not more than three minutes.

Mrs. Weinberg had just taken the brooch off and laid it on a dresser, went into another part of the house and returned a few minutes later to find her valuables missing. She noticed a rear window open and upon investigating found the purse and that of her maid empty just outside the window.

Captain M. J. Wright of the identification bureau was summoned and took photographs of fingerprints and muddy footprints on the floor and Saturday the prints revealed unmistakably that it was the work of a woman.

It was also the opinion of detectives that it was someone who knew of the affairs of the household and had waited the return of Mrs. Weinberg, and picked a chance to secure only valuable articles.

Six. The Pontiac is the only entirely new car introduced at the automobile shows this year, but because of its long period of careful development, it has been popularly referred to as "new—yet three years old."

Whipping of Girl Laid to ExGrady Hospital Attache

L. C. Wolf, former clerk in charge of male inmates of the social disease section of Grady hospital, was bound over Saturday to the city criminal court of Atlanta under $500 bond on charges of assault and battery. The complaint grew out of the alleged whipping of a 13-year-old girl who is said to have refused to submit to treatment.

Only corroborative testimony of Miss Gertrude Allison, graduate nurse in charge of female patients, to the effect that the younger girl was strapped caused Recorder Murphy Holloway to bind the defendant over, it was said.

Miss Allison declared that Mr. Wolf had business in the female department when his services were required and that at the time of the alleged strapping of the girl he had been summoned.

Attorney Claude Brackett defended Wolf while Attorney E. G. Bentley and Councilman Cecil Allen prosecuted the case. Councilman W. B. Saunders and Harry York also attended the trial.

The case is the outgrowth of an investigation launched by the sanitary committee of council several days ago. Wolf was dismissed from the service February 15 on account of laxity in performance of his duties but not on account of any mistreatment of patients. Dr. H. B. Warnock, in charge of the clinic, testified at the trial.

Public Acceptance Is Lawful Marriage, State Court Holds

Public acceptance and acknowledgment of the marriage relation is equivalent to lawful marriage in Georgia, according to a decision of the state supreme court handed down Saturday, after removal of disabilities which rendered temporarily illegal a ceremonial marriage that had already taken place.

The case was that of Heflinger against Heflinger, from Fulton superior court, and by the decision a judgment of $37,500 permanent alimony secured by Mrs. Celia Heflinger against Charles Heflinger was affirmed.

The testimony showed that the Heflingers were married in Maryland, but that Mrs. Heflinger later discovered that her husband could not legally marry as he had been divorced in Virginia less than six months previously. They separated but later reunited in Atlanta after Mr. Heflinger's disabilities had been removed. They separated the second time, however, and Mrs. Heflinger sued for alimony. The defense contended the marriage was not binding on the grounds set forth.

City Bond Program Heads Named To Lead Campaign

Impetus was given the proposed $8,000,000 bond issue campaign Saturday when Mayor Walter A. Sims announced the personnel of the central campaign committee for the election which will take place March 24, the same date as the Fulton county primary. Alderman William B. Hartsfield, of the third ward, who is chairman of the committee in charge of the drive, will call a meeting the early part of this week to outline plans to assure ratification of the issue.

In making the selection of the committee, Mr. Sims declared Atlanta is on the verge of an unprecedented era of prosperity and that passage of the bond issue is a sound and safe investment in the future of the city.

Perfection of the organization, which will carry the bond issue proposition into every ward in the city and cement all civic, patriotic, commercial and political organizations in a united effort to assure overwhelming passage, will be completed when members of the campaign committee meet

CAR MEN FINED AFTER CONFLICT WITH VICE SQUAD

Conductor S. M. Forrester, 24, of 46 Josephine street, and Motorman J. E. Padgett, 27, of 117 Evans drive, employees of the Georgia Railway and Power company, were fined $11 and $26, respectively, Saturday by Recorder A. W. Calloway when they answered to charges of disorderly conduct.

Attorney T. J. Lewis, who represented the defendants, gave notice of an appeal to Fulton superior court on a writ of certiorari.

The two men were arrested Wednesday night following a controversy with four members of the vice squad. E. R. Harbin, H. C. Newton, C. C. Harper and R. L. Mosley, at North Boulevard and Forrester avenue.

Detectives claimed that as they drove by a standing street car in charge of Forrester and Padgett that Padgett yelled at them, "What the—," and adding a few other expletives. The officers returned to reprimand the car men, whereupon, they say, the

HIGH RADIO PROGRAM ANNOUNCED FOR WEEK

Station WDBE, radiophone broadcasting of J. M. High company, program for Tuesday night, February 23, 7 till 8 o'clock: Decatur Junior High orchestra; Mrs. Lamar Walker, vocalist of Griffin, Ga.; Robert Earle, the songbird from the Windy City.

Friday night program, 7 to 8 o'clock: Jack Leffler, the jazz boy from Oglethorpe university; G. C. Barron, accompanying guitar; Miss Agnes Dorsch, steel guitar, and Miss Irene Stoval, ukelele.

Detectives declined to supply their names to decorate "copies of charges."

The car men claim the officers drove by their car at 30 to 35 miles an hour and that the automobile in which they were riding struck Padgett's arm and bruised it.

"The officers failed to explain their authority to demand names and Officer Mosley was the only one of the four who acted gentlemanly during the entire affair," Padgett stated.

YELLOW CHAIR COACH ATTRACTS INTEREST

The new yellow chair coach which has been appearing on the streets for the past few days and which has proven a great drawing card as a sight-seeing coach, is carrying parties daily on long and short pleasure trips. Everyone who takes these trips praise the running quality of the car and the ease with which it is handled. It will be on display in the showroom of the General Motor company, corner Harris and Ivy streets, all this week.

—yet Unmatched Smoothness

Sixty miles an hour and more is not uncommon among able motor cars. But sixty miles and more with perfect smoothness and steadiness is rare—so rare as to be virtually exclusive to the Oakland Six.

This unmatched freedom from vibration at all speeds is made possible by a new invention, The Harmonic Balancer, described by automotive engineers as the outstanding achievement of recent years.

If you have not seen The Harmonic Balancer—if you have not tested its remarkable effect upon motor car performance—drive this new Oakland Six and experience the new thrill of an unvarying smoothness.

"Home day" will be observed today at Decatur First Methodist church, and the Sunday school hour will be devoted to talks by Dr. Andrew Sled and Dr. J. L. McGhee, of Emory university, and Mrs. G. M. Eakes, teacher of the woman's Bible class. The subjects will be of interest to parents.

A sermon in keeping with the program will be delivered at 11 o'clock by the pastor, the Rev. G. M. Eakes, and a similar sermon will feature the evening service. Prayer service will be held at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday night.

High's Annual Swallow Sale

"'Tis Not in Mortals to Command Success"

"'Tis not in mortals to command success, but we'll do more—deserve it." In the days when Addison wrote these immortal words success in store-keeping was of small account. It required Americans of the twentieth century to realize that to obtain success it had to be deserved by giving service every day in the year.

This is the policy of the New High's, never more strikingly shown than in our Annual Swallow Sale, still in progress. The service we are giving the women of Atlanta is recognized by them, for never in our history have we served larger crowds or more enthusiastic shoppers. The smiles our salespeople are wearing at the big business they are doing is reflected in the smiles of our customers at the big values they are receiving.

It is not in mortals to command success, but we've done more, deserved it.

THE PRODIGAL SON PICTURED AT HOWARD

"The Wanderer" Is a Film Version of Great Bible Story.

The parable of the prodigal son, most famous of all Bible stories, has been brought to the screen in Paramount film version of "The Wanderer," showing at the Howard theater this week.

Following every detail the story told by Christ to the publicans and sinners, "The Wanderer" brings to the screen a theme that in many ways is the most tremendous and powerful ever filmed. Jether, (played by William Collier, Jr.), son of Jesse, (Tyron Power) is weary of the monotony of his shepherd life and longs to see the great city beyond the hills.

Despite the entreaties of his mother (played by Kathryn Williams) and the maiden, Naomi, (enacted by Kathryn Hill) he demands his portion and leaves for the city.

Here he meets the siren, Tisha, (portrayed by Greta Nissen). He falls in love with her and squanders his fortune in idle and luxurious living. Vexed that he is unable to buy her a trinket she craves, Tisha transfers her affection to Pharis, a wealthy sea captain (played by Wallace Beery).

Jenious and desperate, Jether yields to the temptation of Tisha, (Ennet Torrence) to play with loaded dice. He is discovered and humiliated. Breaking through the drunken crowds, he goes to Tisha whom he finds in the arms of Pharis. He reproaches her bitterly and leaves her.

But the lure of the charmer is too strong and he returns to her. Tisha demands a proof of his love, and tells him he must renounce his God of Israel and sacrifice to Ishtar, the pagan goddess.

At first he revolts, then he yields and makes oblation to the strange idol.

Before the words of apostasy to the god of his fathers are uttered, a prophet breaks through the crowd, and calls down a curse upon the people. The prophet is attacked by the mob and Jether springs to his defense.

Lightning cleaves the sky, the statue of Ishtar crashes to the ground, the pillars of the banquet hall totter, and the roof thunders in upon the appalled throng.

Because he defended the man of God, Jether is saved from death. But he is alone in the ruined city.

How, after many tribulations he re-

AUTOMOBILE COMEDY FEATURE AT RIALTO

The Rialto theater this week offers another double program for the edification and amusement of its large Atlanta patronage. "Red Hot Tires," a speed comedy; "Pike's Peak," the sixth episode in the series; "The Adventures of Mazie," Pathe News and Whitney Hubner's musical scoring will feature the program.

With Monte Blue starring, Patsy Ruth Miller in the feminine supporting lead and a brilliant supporting cast, "Red Hot Tires" includes Lincoln Steadman, Fred Emmett, Charles Conklin, Tom McGuire, William Lowery, Jimmie Quinn and Malcolm Waite.

"Red Hot Tires" is a rip-roaring, high-speeding comedy of accidents, automobiles and laughs, with a pretty impulsive girl the first half of the romance and a charming young man the other half. Their first encounter results in a rib-tickling smashup of hearts and traffic rules.

The second finds them both in jail, flitting outrageously through the bars. Scores of funny incidents with genuine suspense and thrills mark the photoplay.

The hero, injured in a wreck, gets afraid of motor cars. But when the girl he loves is in danger, he speeds to her rescue at the maddest pace he ever drove in his speed-demon days. Monte Blue plays the charming idler, who, from an overdose of racing, turns to horseback riding, and Miss Miller, the impulsive girl who races in and out of his life in her high-powered roadster. Fred Emmett is her father and Lincoln Steadman is Monte's best friend. Malcolm Waite, Tom McGuire and William Lowery play three crooks and Jimmie Quinn the owner of a gambling house.

A scarcely secondary feature is "The Adventures of Mazie," which instant provides the best comedy roles thus far in the series for Al Cooke and Kit Guard, the funny men, and Alberta Vaughn, the prettiest beauty. Larry Kent, new leading man for Miss Vaughn in this series, bids fair to advance soon into the feature field of making motion pictures, so excellent is his work in the latest of these popular short films.

The Rialto program for the week will be completed with Pathe News and Whitney Hubner's musical program to accompany "Red Hot Tires" and "Pike's Peak."

Mack Bennett has entered his prize-winning chestnut jumper, Pershing, in the Los Angeles National Horse show, February 8 to 13, at the Ambassador auditorium.

LEWIS STONE STARS METROPOLITAN FILM

"Too Much Money" Shows Favorite in a New Role.

Admirers of Lewis Stone are due for a little surprise when they see his latest photoplay, "Too Much Money," at the Metropolitan theater this week.

Instead of the faultless dinner coat and trousers in which Stone always looks as though he stepped from a handbox, they will get a glimpse of their favorite in a pair of baggy overalls and, still worse, in a delicatessen dealer's apron in several scenes.

In the overall the actor appears as an apartment house janitor, juggling ash cans and answering calls for heat. In the other unusual rig he figures in a neighborhood "run" on pickled herring. These things happen after the character he plays, signs away a fortune as a lesson to his butterfly wife and is forced to take any job he can get. Eventually it is a case of "he yourself" with Stone, but he certainly slips from sartorial perfection for a time.

Welcome Relief.
Stone declares that his new role comes as a welcome relief. For the last two years or more he has been doing the very well dressed society hero in films. He longs for a change—not exactly from the tuxedo to overalls or an apron, but to roles of wider scope and more variety than his usual parts. If worst comes to worst he says he will get out of his usual role by shaving off his mustache.

"Everyone seems to have forgotten that I was once the outdoor man in pictures," says Stone. "I recently started in the films in Marshall Neilan's 'The River's End,' and used to play the Royal Mounted policeman and other tough fellows. Then came John Stahl's 'The Dangerous Age,' and since then I've hardly been able to get out of a dinner coat. I didn't realize how sure I had become a type until Louis Mayer told me, after filming 'The Great Divide,' that he had considered me for the part taken by Conway Tearle, but that he thought it was too rough for me."

Stone's case is one of numerous identifications with types in the movies. He makes an ideal middle age romantic of the wholesome, manly variety, and his poise and gentlemanly appearance have kept him in drawing rooms for the most part. But he's an outdoor man by nature.

In "Too Much Money" Stone appears for a time in his usual dinner coat, but soon changes to his apron and then his overalls. He displays unusual ability as a comedian in this attire and will furnish many surprises for his followers in this picture, in which he is co-featured with Anna Q.

Palace Theater.

(Betty Compton.)

The lineup of features at the Palace theater, Inman Park's popular show-house, for the coming week includes a marked variety of proven favorites. Raymond Griffith and Betty Compton appear Monday and Tuesday in "Paths to Paradise." Richard Dix in "Too Many Kisses" will be featured on Wednesday. "A Kiss For Cinderella," with Betty Bronson, is billed for Thursday and Friday; and Fred Thompson in "All Around Frying Pan" is billed for Saturday.

"Paths to Paradise" is a laugh throughout—a travesty on crook dramas in which Raymond Griffith is supreme. Portraying the role of a jewel thief with Miss Compton as his accomplice, he provides a succession of thrilling incidents interspersed with laughter which is as genuine as it is spontaneous.

Richard Dix, one of the outstanding stars on the screen today, in "Too Many Kisses," has an ideal Dix role. It is a story of a young American with a decided weakness for beautiful Cameo Theater.

Belonging to the category of the greater love stories of the screen is "Cytheria," Goddess of Love, which appears at the Cameo on Monday and Tuesday.

Lewis Stone and Alma Rubens have the leading roles in the picture, which is the story of a man's dreams of his love goddess, and his infatuation with the woman he thought was his ideal of his home life, and the great love which every man believes comes to him at least once.

Dramatically powerful and subtly interesting, Cytheria can easily be classed as one of the "greater."

For three days, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the Cameo will show Marion Davies and Conrad Nagel in "Lights of Old Broadway," the story of the first lighting of the famous old street with incandescents, and of the romance of a little Irish miss, with all her wit and humor, and the son of an aristocratic family, told in a way that is impressive and delightful, powerful drama and pure comedy.

On Saturday the Cameo offers the vivacious Bebe Daniels as a thrill seeking young twentieth century daughter who liked her thrills and adventures where she found 'em—and took 'em there, and assisted by Rod LaRocque, Bebe gives one of her most delightful and picturesque portrayals.

Lars Hanson, another Swedish (acting) import, will be given the role of Reverend Dimmesdals in "The Scarlet Letter," the Hawthorne classic which Lillian Gish is to do next for M-G-M. Victor Seastrom will direct.

'OH, OH, NURSE,' HERE, THE ATLANTA THEATER

"Oh! Oh! Nurse," the musical comedy which opens at the Atlanta theater tomorrow night for four nights and Wednesday matinee, is one of those intimate affairs which originated in "Oh! Boy" and of which "No, No, Nanette" is a latter-day example. The requisites of such offerings include a first-class cast of principals, a good story, a tuneful score and a chorus both snappy and easy on the eye. All these things, we are told, are provided in "Oh! Oh! Nurse," which is making a tour of the south after a run at Ziegfeld's Cosmopolitan theater in New York.

The book or story was written by George E. Stoddard, who has to his credit many successes, including "Listen, Lester," "Jim Jam Jams," "Go, Go" and "China Rose," one of New York's last season's musical hits. Carlo and Sanders, who collaborated in the composing of that sterling success, "Tangerine," are responsible for the lyrics and music of "Oh! Oh! Nurse."

The stage and chorus directors who are superior to Walter Brooks, under whose direction this show was produced, may be counted on one hand from which three fingers have been amputated.

The story deals with a trained nurse named Miss Gay. A relative will be Miss Gay $2,000,000 with the proviso that she will not receive the money until she is a widow. This makes things difficult. She has no husband in the first place, and she is in love with a Dr. Killmore in the second place. Loving Dr. Killmore she can not marry him, for he must "shuffle off this mortal coil" before she can inherit the $2,000,000. Complications ensue, including a hired patient named Mr. I. Dye, who—do you know what these musical comedy complications are!

According to the papers, natives of Baltimore, Buffalo, New York and even staid, conservative Toronto, found these things rather to their liking. They enjoyed the music, which they speak of as "tuneful," the dancing, which they speak of as "peppy," "snappy" and "jazzy," and the funmaking of Fred Heider, a comedian, who made a remarkable success in "Listen, Lester," and many other musical shows, including a vaudeville hit named "Up a Tree."

Among the chorus are thirty sweet and snappy maidens, who knocked one of the New York critics for a couple of paragraphs. It was this same gentleman who said that "Oh! Oh! Nurse" is all very pretty and tuneful, with musical numbers that zip along in the best possible manner from the beginning to the end of things. Fred Heider, long recognized as one of the foremost comedians at present appearing in musical comedy, is the featured player, and those familiar with clever dancing and ever-bubbling good humor may well look forward to a most enjoyable entertainment.

FIVE VARIETY ACTS ON LOEW'S PROGRAM

Exceptionally high class in every respect is the new bill of vaudeville which will open Monday at Loew's Grand, according to the advance notices, and several of the acts of the new program have established reputations as headline attractions on some of the biggest circuits in the country. The headliner on the new bill will be the popular comedian, Billy Taylor, who was the chief fun-maker in "China Rose" and other big musical comedy productions. Taylor will bring an able company, which includes four pretty girl dancers in his new act, "A Musical Version of Mysticism." Several musical numbers written specially for this act will be presented.

Lon Lockett and Peggy Paige, who have filled the headline position in many big theaters, will bring their 1925 version of "Say It With Dancing," their perennially popular dancing skit. This year they will bring with them Ruby Ward, a gifted pianist, who will offer several selections during the turn.

Harmony singing and yodeling will be featured by Harry Vale and Don Grant, who rank among the very best of the country's vocalists. They have prepared several original songs which will be sung this season for the first time, and these will be included in their Atlanta program.

Selma Braatz, who has been called "the wonder woman of vaudeville," will appear with her famous juggling feats. Miss Braatz has won the title of "vaudeville's leading juggler" and those who have witnessed her astounding feats have agreed that she well deserves this title.

Some beautiful gowns are worn in the novelty skit of Polly and Os, who bring a refreshing comedy act, entitled "Sousa's Band." While some of the latest comic song hits from the Broadway musical hits.

Offered in conjunction with the wonderful picture, "The Big Parade," will be the beautiful Norma Shearer and popular Lew Cody in leading roles; the new bill promises to be one of the most enjoyable of the year.

'AL'S HERE,' HEADLINE ACT ON KEITH BILL

If there is anything that pleases a vaudeville audience as well as a comedy skit built around pre-Volsteadian antics, it hasn't been discovered yet. Such a skit is "Al's Here" that will be offered patrons of Keith's Forsyth the first three days of this week as the headline feature.

Everybody knows Al. Al has been an important character in cartoons and paragraphs for many and many a day. Then Don Marquis wrote the clever comedy, "The Old Soak," and now that that show has ceased its touring, Al, with Mr. Maddock portraying him, has come to vaudeville. Here is a highlight comedy giving a scene of bygone days. The time is 1912, or that period before the eighteenth amendment.

"Al's Here" is a bright, clever, clean comedy, pertinent, pleasing and portraying a popular imaginary character.

Cartwell, Harris and company in "Myrtle of the Movies," provide another good feature of the program. This popular team has given vaudeville a variety of skits. Their policy has been to present a new vehicle each season. While they are playing one they are preparing another, and invariably these skits are a travesty on something timely. Tom McKee and Adele Mott conceive some absurdities in their number which is entertaining from start to finish.

Ted and Al Waldman offer another fine act in "Bin-o-logies." They are billed as the world's greatest harmonica players.

In their present act they present a handpicked assortment of clever bits. Sherwin Kelly, who concludes the program, does her singing from a bicycle. She is a singing cyclist.

A Pathe newsreel and an Aesop's Fables also are features.

Tudor Theater.

(Big Laugh Hit.) "I'll Show You the Town," the Universal-Jewel feature starring Reginald Denny, which plays at the Tudor Monday and Tuesday, is a happy comedy of love and laughter. Adapted from the story of the same name from the pen of Elmer Davis, "I'll Show You the Town," is the tale of an obliging young college professor who volunteered to show three pretty women the sights of the town all at the same time, each one separately—and what befell from the paltry fibbing.

Wednesday and Thursday the Tudor will offer "Dante's Inferno," a screen sensation. Although many of the scenes representing hell described by Dante are weird and fantastic to a unique degree, the picture is not in the least revolting.

Friday and Saturday Buck Jones will come to the Tudor, riding and fighting his mightiest in "Hearts and Spurs," a story of a courageous cow-puncher with thrilling chases and several slam-bang fights.

JOHN PHILIP SOUSA'S BAND THE ATLANTA

"There is only one Sousa and he will be there rain or shine."

This statement might well be the slogan of Lieutenant Commander John Philip Sousa, who this season will make his third-of-a-century tour with his world-famous band, which will give four concerts at the Atlanta theater on Friday and Saturday of this week. Although his fame as an organizer of musical ensembles is great enough to justify the presentation of other Sousa-trained organizations, and although he frequently has been urged to do so, there never has been but one Sousa's band and Sousa was the director of that!

Sousa, knocking wood, declares the greatest good luck which ever came to any musical director has accompanied him through his years of travel. Only once in his career has he been compelled to cancel engagements and that was for a period of two weeks, about five years ago, when he was injured by a fall from a horse. But he quickly recovered and resumed his tour.

Back of the Sousa luck, of course, there is thoroughness of preparation. The Sousa itinerary is arranged months in advance. All possible emergencies of time and distance are taken into account when the tour is planned. Train service between two scheduled cities must not only suffice—there must be a margin of safety. The touring manager takes as to alternate routes in case of train service failing from any cause. The touring organization which moves the band is engaged months in advance. In each city the local transfer company must satisfy Sousa's advance representative that it has ample facilities for moving the band and that it has a working agreement with other organizations to enable it to meet unusual situations.

Much of the discipline of his military service still clings to Sousa. One of his unbreakable rules is that every concert must begin promptly at the advertised hour. It is a failing to cause the late comer to miss the first number on the program than to ask the person who arrives promptly to wait until the late comer has been seated, he says.

Concerts for all four Atlanta theaters will be placed on sale at the Atlanta theater box office on Tuesday morning.

Alamo No. 2.

(Norma Shearer.)

"Waking Up the Town" is here. It will be shown for the first time at the Alamo No. 2 Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Norma Shearer is the star. Frank Condon and James Cruze are the authors. Jack Pickford is the leading man. In the cast are Alec B. Francis, Claire McDowell, Ann May and many others. It is a vivid picture of the struggle for opportunity and the wilderness of every ambitious boy and girl vividly dramatized picturing the ups and downs and the mysteries of love. In addition to this picture there will also be shown a new Century comedy "Accidents Can Happen."

For Thursday and Friday James Oliver Wood's "The Ancient Highway" will be the main attraction, featuring Jack Holt, Billie Dove and Montagu Love. It is a rousing outdoor romance of the kind that made Curlew famous. Keyed high with action, struggle, suspense, love, interest.

Sousa baggage from railway car to concert hall is engaged months in advance. In each city the local transfer company must satisfy Sousa's advance representative that it has ample facilities for moving the band and that it has a working agreement with other organizations to enable it to meet unusual situations.

Much of the discipline of his military service still clings to Sousa. One of his unbreakable rules is that every concert must begin promptly at the advertised hour. LOEW'S FEATURE FILM STARS NORMA SHEARER

Pretty Norma Shearer in a no-nonsense role and popular Lew Cody in a comedy part are promised in "His Secretary," Hobart Henley's latest production which will come as the feature picture offering at Loew's Grand theater this week.

Norma Shearer has always been known as an especially versatile young woman, but in "His Secretary" her talents as a comedienne are brought out forcefully.

In this Hobart Henley production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Miss Shearer has given her most interesting performance. Stepping directly from a tremendous hit in an exceedingly dramatic picture, "The Tower of Lies," Miss Shearer plays the comedy scenes in "His Secretary" with all the lightness and hair-raising escapes, backgrounded against the colorful Canadian lumber camps.

'RADIO ACES' FEATURE METROPOLITAN BILL

After bringing tremendous pressure upon New York booking houses for the best theater attraction in the east, Sig Samuels, owner of the Metropolitan theater, obtained while in New York last week, the Macy-Scott duo, known to theater-goers as "The Radio Aces."

The brilliant entertaining pair, G. Underhill Macy and J. William Scott, will supplement the unusually high-class program at the Metropolitan this week which includes the movie attraction, "Too Much Money," with the ever wonderful Anna Q. Nilsson in the stellar role; Enrico Leide and his great orchestra in special musical features, News and Views and the other colorful and enjoyable features which have made the name of this playhouse synonymous with the best in movie and vaudeville.

The film feature is "made for folks with too much money and those with not quite enough," thus meeting the requirements of the usual cosmopolitan crowd.

What a dizzy pace this great movie queen sets on the screen—with fleets of motor cars, diamonds galore, yachts at her command and pearls which dazzle. But, alas, each joy is smeared with a tear and each tear is wrung from a crushed and adorable creature, a great lesson all in all, and a motion picture which has set all movie fans agog with excitement and eagerness to see it.

But back to the star young entertainers who will furnish the vaudeville—

Young Macy is from the celebrated family of operatic singers of the same name. Sophie Macy, the boy's mother, was one of the foremost coloratura sopranos of her time, while his dad was a buffo-basso of renown. So the youngster comes of a musical family, a family which has brought him acquaintance with a first attracted attention with his shrill tenor voice as a newboy in Chicago. He was educated by a western concert manager and set on a career which has brought him fame and friends wherever he has appeared.

As "The Radio Aces," the pair has an original and highly amusing offering of song, laughs and entertainment which has brought them considerably into the limelight over the period of the past few months.

Metropolitan officials are jubilant over securing them and are certain Atlanta movie fans are going to find them the "real thing" this week.

I. T. Taylor.

(New Palace Manager.)

I. T. Taylor was appointed manager of the Palace theater, popular Inman Park picture house, according to an announcement last week by Alpha Fowler, general manager of the Palace and the West End. He assumed his duties at the beginning of last week and has been busy welcoming acquaintances of the community. Mr. Taylor has been a resident of Inman Park for several years and has been identified with the business life of that section for quite a while. He is a man of agreeable personality and has a wealth of friends, all of whom are extending their best wishes to him in his new connection. The Palace is fortunate in having secured such a man to direct the activities of the theater.

SPECIAL NOTICE
The owner of the above home would like to have $6,500 in cash from the sale of this property. He has not been successful in locating the party with this amount in cash, and he later decided that he wanted at least $1,200 in cash and the place will sell on this proposition, but the owner has reached the "sell or bust" frame of mind, so here is your chance to pick up the best home proposition in Atlanta the first thing Monday morning if you will pay $400 or $500 cash and let this owner go on about his business.

PROLONGED contact with life resigns us all to compromise. Habitually we become accustomed to the "give and take" element in all our social intercourse; resignation establishes this usage as the rule, with its exceptions unfortunately few, and proportionately important. Upon this premise we base the significance of the following situation:

WE HAVE a home which, exactly and without compromise, fits your needs. What permits of criticism in the location?—all the South sanctions Peachtree. Close in, yet possessed of every advantage increased acreage could lend; on the lot, 104x400, there is an orchard, a vineyard, a steam-heated greenhouse. Its architectural features would lend an added charm to the gentle hills of the English Lake-country; yet its practical details adhere closely to the ultimate in comfort and convenience.

THE DOWNSTAIRS is unusual in the spacious dimensions of its rooms. The living room also a toilet and lavatory on this floor. Above are four bedrooms, a large sleeping porch and three tile baths. The third floor contains the servant's quarters, consisting of four rooms and bath.

THIS PLACE is being sacrificed, due to the owner's desire to concentrate his interests in Florida.

NO MATTER how far afield your search has led you; no matter the exactions of its details; that pilgrimage is at an end—this is HOME.

Carolyn Crosses The Delaware!

We don't know why, but rivers seem to play an important part in great careers. Caesar hesitated momentarily, then flung himself across the Rubicon, on to triumph. Washington, whose birthday we celebrate tomorrow, suffered untold hardship but he crossed the Delaware and won a critical battle of the Revolution. Perhaps there is a River of Doubt in all our lives that must be conquered or we fail and sink.

Printed Silks—In New Frocks and by the Yard

It's Fashion's Dictate, and Our Answer Is a Most Wonderful Display in Spring Colors and Patterns Exclusive With "Keely's, the Home of Better Silks"

Keely's Dress Department

Showing Dresses of Printed Silk That Are Correct in Every Respect

Shall we mention STYLE in telling you about these dresses—when the name Keely's is the sesame to Fashion's innermost sanctuary? And Fashion says they are correct in every respect. Its touch of beauty is portrayed in hundreds of models—models whose subtle appeal is distinctive to every discriminating taste and figure. Printed silk frocks in colors and patterns as varied as fickle fancy could favor. All are on display on our second floor on illuminated stages for your inspection and approval Monday. You are invited to see them.

Keely's Echo to Paris And Fifth Avenue Edict

Keely's Dress Department, always in the forefront of Fashion, features the Paris and Fifth Avenue modes within twenty-four hours after their appearance in the acknowledged style centers. This week we therefore feature the latest edicts of the style wizards. Paris says Prints! Fifth Avenue sponsors Prints! And Keely's is ready with Prints at the usual Keely modest prices for real values.

Nature's great Designer, in planning the scheme of things beautiful, clothes the fields and lands afar with colors of varied hues. And to color is added shape of blossom—no two of which, it is said, are alike. How applicable, therefore, that Paris, the great designer of wearables for women, should commend color for Spring, and to color add patterns of indescribable design. Fifth Avenue introduced these wonderful printed silks to New York's elite. Keely's, the home of silks of the better kind, has prepared a marvelous display for Atlanta, including frocks and yard goods of this most beautiful material. An entire window is devoted today to printed silk dresses—another to printed silk materials. On our first and second floors are displays that will gladden the heart of every woman. Printed silks from Cheney, Mallinson, Haas, Menke-Kauffmann and other well-known manufacturers. The price range is comprehensive—

Something New

An Announcement

Beginning Monday Keely will give you three times each week the fashion of the hour in women's shoes. So great is the number of designs here, and so important is it that each design be properly presented—that you may know what is correct in footwear—we shall refrain from generalities and on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays give you a true portrayal of one individual design. Watch for the "Cathrine" Monday evening.

Forrest Ave. P. T. A. Activities
Are of Widespread Interest

The regular monthly meeting of the Forrest Avenue P. T. A. was held Wednesday in the auditorium of the school, Mrs. Hubert Rawiser, presiding. After this roll call by grades was had. Four high, Miss Louise Hogan, teacher, won the prize for the largest number of mothers present, while Mrs. W. D. Kerby and Miss Sarah Sadiath, who preside over the kindergarten, were awarded one for the greatest percentage present.

Miss Kate B. King, chairman of the membership committee, reported that the association needed more members, and it was hoped every mother would enroll herself before the March 1st meeting, because Forrest Avenue sustains a reputation among other schools that must be merited. The kitchen committee reported that almost $200 had been realized from the sale of lunches.

Pre-School Report.
Pre-school chairman, Mrs. J. R. Walters, announced that the second meeting of her committee would be held the following Friday, at which time a pre-school clinic nurse, Mrs. Johnson, would be present to address the mothers. Home service committee, Mrs. King Bailey, chairman, reported that clothing and other essentials had been supplied a needy family. Mrs. J. B. Williams, council representative, stated that several important matters were decided upon, viz.: The proposed change in the fiscal year from June 30th to July 31st; also the bond issue of $100,000 to provide prompt payment of school appropriations and other important features as given publicity in the local newspapers previously. It was announced at this juncture that the safety council had voted to permit children to skate on sidewalks, but that it be strictly prohibited in the streets.

Mrs. Rawiser appealed for more help in the cafeteria. It was voted that a certain most competent woman in the school will try for one month to supervise same, buy all provisions and see to the preparation of food.

News of Interest
From Lucy Cobb.

The P. T. A. of the Mary Ann Lipscomb Elementary school of Lucy Cobb had a sale Tuesday afternoon in the Elementary building for the benefit of the endowment fund.

Dr. Winifred Sackville-Stoner, generally known as "Mother Stoner," was the guest of friends in Athens during the past week. "Genius day" was observed in the Stoner-Stall chapel Wednesday under her direction, after which she gave a lecture on "How to Raise a Child."

Friday night Mrs. Elsie Hull Graham, head of the expression department, presented three one-act plays entitled, "The Will-O-The-Wisp," "The Florist's Shop," and "Suppressed Desires." During the first intermission 16 Lucy Cobb girls put on a dancing and singing specialty under the direction of Miss Edith Clark.

Mother Stoner gave "Chio por Chai," a play in Esperanto during the second intermission. This play was given without any rehearsals, and by girls who had never studied Esperanto. Besides Mother Stoner, the cast included Sarah Brown, Evelyn Perkins, Eleanor McManan, Sarah Walton, Bertha Burman and Corinne Buchanan.

Saturday morning the varsity basketball team of Lucy Cobb played a very spirited game at the Lucy Cobb with the girls of Woodbury Hall.

Enjoy a Good Rest!

Not so very long ago, house-keeping occupied practically all of a woman's time. What with attending to the multitudinous, irritating details of household management, she had precious little chance to rest even for a few moments.

But modern science has taken many a load off the housewife's shoulders, has evolved methods which allow her to escape the drudgery of being everlastingly bound down to house-keeping duties.

The laundry's modern family wash service, which insures absolute sanitation and thorough cleanliness, has come as a boon to millions of housewives. There is no wash problem nowadays — the laundry has solved it.

Give yourself the joy of a tranquil mind, of freedom from wash-cares. Let the laundry take care of all your family wash.

Kirkwood P. T. A.
Meeting Featured
By Program

One of the most entertaining programs of the year was given by the Kirkwood P. T. A. at its regular meeting Wednesday afternoon, the president, Mrs. H. G. Parks, in the chair.

Mrs. David Hall, chairman of the schools, outlined a plan in which the schoolyard would be made more attractive, this plan to be carried out in the spring. The ways and means committee will sponsor a benefit party at an early date. Mrs. A. E. Wilson, chairman, also stated that a play would be put on within a few weeks. Mrs. C. W. Rushin, pre-school chairman, stated that Kirkwood had one of the largest pre-school circles in the city, also the ground the hundred babies were enrolled in the health center.

The citizenship chairman, Mrs. Wilkie, stressed the fact that mothers all register before February 24, so they could vote for county commissioners. She also stated that the Camp Fire Girls under their leader, Miss Nell Williams, was making splendid progress. The lunch-room committee, Mrs. J. E. Mathews, reported that for such splendid work the chairman was to be highly commended. A letter from the Cogan picture will be put on Wednesday, February 24. Mrs. W. C. Butler, who is chairman of the automobile committee for cars to be used during the state and national convention, was promised, and that she had a plan worked out to furnish a car every day of the convention.

A letter from Mrs. Fred Wessels, Jr., of Savannah, was read before the association, urging the association to give as much as it could to the Alice M. Hilburn endowment fund, and to drive for prizes offered by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

As this was Founder's day and Child Welfare day, a beautiful program was carried out celebrating Mrs. J. E. Schellinger's birthday. Children from the different grades gave plays illustrating child welfare. This little play was written by Miss Julia Brennan, Mrs. J. W. Rowlett, and Mrs. J. E. Schellinger. It was an excellent talk on the founder of P. T. A., and the history of the club. The song, "The Wings of a Dove," sung by Mrs. Bernard Owens and Miss Zula Foster. Two short talks were given by Mrs. H. C. Hastings and Mrs. Fitzpatrick, visitors from the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

The February pre-school age circle meeting was announced for Tuesday, February 23. Miss Ann Simpson, the speaker, Miss Brenner asked for old newspapers and magazines for a paper sale the teachers are planning to give. Little Leo Schellinger presented the speaker of the afternoon, the principal and the president with flowers. The next meeting will be held March 17, and health program Mr. Sutton is urging every P. T. A. to put on during the months of February and March will be featured.

Faith P. T. A. Features Patriotic Program.

At the regular meeting of the Atlanta Normal and John F. Faith Parent-Teacher association, the following patriotic program was enjoyed by a large enthusiastic group of parents and teachers: Prayer by Wallace Rogers; flag song, children of low second; play, "George Washington," children of low five; Longfellow, Mrs. J. F. Smith; talk on Georgia, Wallace Rogers; demonstration of Georgia books made by Normal students, Miss Rose Wood and Miss Alpha Daniel; Founder's day, Mrs. J. E. Schellinger; patriotic song, Rev. Wallace Rogers; music, Misses Doris and Ruth O'Steen; America, audience. Attractive souvenirs in the red, white and blue, made by the fifth grade were given each one present.

A short business session followed, with the officers and chairman giving splendid reports of the month's work. Mrs. R. D. Sherrill and Mrs. J. F. Johnson gave reports on the child welfare meeting called by Mr. Sutton on child welfare day and urged the P. T. A. to stand solidly back of the superintendent and board of education in putting forward the health program in the schools. Mrs. Sherrill also announced the meeting of the pre-school circle at her home on Tuesday, February 23, 11:30 a. m., at East Fair street. Miss Alexander, supervisor of nurses and Mrs. Richards, the school nurse will be the speakers.

Campbell's first grade, for the sixth time in succession, won the $5 picture given to the class having the highest attendance.

An apron party was announced to be given at the school on Friday afternoon, 3 o'clock, February 26. Tiny aprons with pockets will be sent to each mother and teacher. All friends and patrons of the school are cordially invited.

East Point P. T. A.
Holds Meeting.

The East Point High school P. T. A. met Thursday afternoon, directly after the school hours, with the president, Mrs. E. G. Nabbell in the chair. Just before the meeting a refreshing hot lunch was served to the teachers by the social committee.

Seventh grade A, of which Mrs. E. L. Humphreys is teacher, put on an attractive Washington program, which consisted of patriotic songs and readings.

Ground committee reported a horticulturalist had been engaged to put on a hedge round the campus, and to plant out shrubbery.

Superintendent J. T. McGee stressed the need of a plot of ground being put in order for an athletic field. Ways and means committee reported a neat sum in the treasury from sales of sandwiches, candy, etc.

The fifth district met will be held in East Point on April 1st, with the acceptance of the invitation tendered the meet.

Seventh grade A won the banner for the largest attendance of mothers.

Committees Appointed
For State P. T. A. Convention

A meeting of the executive board of the Fifth District P. T. A. was called by Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, vice president of the fifth district, Thursday, February 18, at the chamber of commerce for the purpose of discussing plans and arrangements for the participation of the state convention of the Georgia branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, which meets in Atlanta the week of March 1-5. Headquarters for the convention will be the Henry Grady hotel, the business sessions to be held in the First Baptist church, Peachtree street.

The following chairmen were named for the various committees: Credentials committee, Mrs. Hubert Rawiser; finance committee, Mrs. M. C. Moore; invitations committee, Mrs. Arthur Tufts; luncheon committee, Mrs. Charles Carter; automobile committee, Mrs. E. A. Pierce; poster committee, Mrs. Charlotte Smith; business committee, Mrs. C. Boring; prizes committee, Mrs. John De Saussure; information committee, Mrs. Byron Matthews; church meeting committee, Mrs. R. M. McFarland; breakfast committee, Mrs. A. M. Smith; hospitality committee, Mrs. N. Elmer Russell; music committee, Mrs. J. P. Walraven.

Mrs. Z. V. Peterson
Addresses Home
Park P. T. A.

Celebration of the birthday of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers was observed by the Home Park P. T. A. last Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. T. H. Smith, president, presiding.

The candle-lighting ceremony was given by Mrs. H. H. Mathews, pre-school chairman, after which she introduced Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, vice president of the fifth district, speaker for the evening. Mrs. Peterson, a resident of the city, was the founder of the great organization of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. Mrs. H. H. Smith sang "Mother March." The following recommendation was voted on by the executive board: 1.—That the association send $5 to the Alice Hilburn endowment fund, 2.—That the association extend the courtesy of membership, 3.—That the mothers who are P. T. A. members coming to Home Park P. T. A. be given a special card, 4.—That the association pay the $1 membership to the League of Women Voters, 5.—That the needy children of the city be given dental and oculist attention.

Mrs. Smith urged the ladies to register at the court house and city hall by February 24, so that they may be qualified to vote.

Mrs. H. H. Reid announced a picture show to be given Saturday, February 27, in the school auditorium. The Tom Thumb picture, "The Two Little Boys," will be given at an early date.

A health program will feature the next meeting, and it should be interesting. Tickets for the Howard and the dollar were won by Miss Jessie Carson's first grade.

Westminster P. T. A.
Reports Meeting.

The Parent-Teacher association of Westminster Sunday school met Friday morning in the church building. Mrs. Robert McFarland led the devotionary exercises and introduced Dr. Elizabeth Broach, who gave a most interesting and helpful talk.

At the next meeting in March, which will be a night meeting, the study of the book the association has adopted as a text will be resumed. It is hoped a large number of mothers, fathers and teachers can be present.

W. F. Slaton P. T. A.
Observes Founder's Day.

The P. T. A. of W. F. Slaton school observed Founder's day, and Child Welfare day, by a program of songs, plays and exercises. Rev. A. W. Reeves, pastor of the Grant Park Baptist church, led the devotionary.

Professor Floyd Fields of the Georgia School of Technology, was the principal speaker of the afternoon. His subject was the "Four Fold Development of the Child." Professor Fields possesses a most comprehensive understanding of young people and their problems and urged the parents to provide the necessary food and surroundings for the proper development of the physical, mental, social and religious life of the child.

Following Professor Fields' address the audience sang Georgia Land. Mrs. Burke paid a love tribute to Mrs. Alice McLellan Birney, one of Georgia's own women, who was the first president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers organization 29 years ago. An acoustic, represented by 29 little girls, explained just what P. T. A. stands for, its aims and results. A lovely birthday cake bearing 29 candles was baked by Mrs. B. L. Fincher and carried the color scheme of blue and gold. The candles were lighted by Ruth Mangham with a reading appropriate to the occasion. The cake was presented to Mrs. Reeves and her faculty by Mrs. Reeves as a small token of love and appreciation from the mothers.

A membership drive is now on and a prize of $10 will be given to the class having one hundred per cent of the mothers and fathers enrolled and a smaller prize will be given to the class having 75 per cent enrollment.

Williams Street P. T. A.
Features Health Program.

The P. T. A. of Williams Street school held a very interesting meeting Thursday afternoon, February 19, with Mrs. E. G. Nabbell, president, presiding. Dr. Frank Eskridge spoke on "Child Welfare and Health," and stressed that unless the child is healthy, he cannot begin school, he would be handicapped, possibly the rest of his life, and in these days of advanced science, it was an easy matter to control diseases in most children during the pre-school age.

Mrs. Arthur Tufts, fifth district program chairman, spoke along the same lines as Dr. Eskridge and stressed that the mothers should take care of themselves in order to be physically fit to care for their children.

Mrs. Ed. McDonald resigned as pre-school chairman and Mrs. Herbert Aeschbacher was appointed to fill the unexpired term. Miss Shannon's low fourth and Mrs. C. H. Kinney's kindergarten classes, won cash prizes and Miss Silvers' fifth, the tickets to the Howard. Mrs. C. R. Goza won the door prize, a beautiful hand-embroidered apron.

R. L. Hope P. T. A.
Meeting Features
Citizenship Program

A "Citizenship" program took the place of the regular meeting of the R. L. Hope P. T. A. on Tuesday. Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, Americanization chairman of the city of Atlanta, and Mrs. O. S. Stanton, legislative chairman for the state P. T. A., delivered addresses.

Mrs. Mellichamp described the duties of the parent in the home, urging parents to start at the cradle to command obedience; to set examples in truthfulness, and to be companionable and gain the confidence of the child.

Stanton outlined citizenship duties outside the home, showing how important the woman's place in the political world is, and urging the women to register. She explained how necessary it is to know one's representative, and for what he or she stands.

A Georgia day program was arranged for the meeting by the fourth grade girls. "Georgia Land" was sung by the children. Mildred Reutly sang Frank L. Stanton's "Mighty Lak a Rose." R. L. Hope school is to be landscaped. The shrubs will be planted in the next few days. Mrs. Chester Kitchens, treasurer, read her report. The cafeteria is now self-supporting. All the utensils and dishes are paid for. The ways and means chairman, Mrs. A. E. Wilson, announced that on March 20 an "old mads convention" will be held in the auditorium. Teachers and parents will participate.

Friday, February 12, a "Tom Thumb" wedding was held at the school. The bride, Miss Jeanne Carter, and Master Fred Geisler were joined together by George Brown in the "wholly bonds of make-up-money." A total of $40 was realized.

After the wedding a valentine contest was held by the older pupils. The girls dressing in attractive costumes, and the boys posing as comic valentines. Frances Smith and Evelyn Walker tied for the girls' prize. Frances was crowned queen of the contest. The boys' prize was a dress of three generations ago. Evelyn posed as a modern valentine. Hugh Lester received the boys' prize.

An athletic association has been formed. On February 2 officers were elected. The basketball team is getting into practice and will soon be in condition to compete with other schools. The fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh grades are conducted by student government. A student council has been elected to settle cases of discipline. This is proving satisfactory, according to Mrs. C. C. Julien, principal.

Each Friday morning the school has chapel exercises. Each week it is conducted by the children of different grades.

Ormewood P. T. A.
Observes Founder's Day.

The Ormewood Parent-Teacher association celebrated the twenty-ninth anniversary of the national P. T. A. its regular February meeting, a beautiful birthday cake held 29 candles. These were lighted by Mrs. Leo Suderth, the president, in loving remembrance of Alice McLellan Birney and Phoebe A. Hearst, the founders of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. Mrs. Suderth spoke of the fact that they had lighted candles for the children of our nation. She said that as each candle was lighted it represented another year of brighter childhood and more intelligent parenthood. Mrs. Irene Waters read a memorial tribute to Mrs. Birney, a native of Marietta, Ga., who was the founder of the National Association of Parents and Teachers. An alphabet of 26 statements about the National P. T. A. was given by various members of the association. The association voted to pay $5 to the national fund for child welfare offering.

Mrs. C. W. Stord, finance chairman, reported $13 made on the paper sale. She is making plans for a Tom Thumb wedding to be given in the near future.

Mrs. Dalton, chairman of juvenile protection, stressed the law prohibiting children from skating in the streets and urged the cooperation of the parents in making the children observe this law. Mrs. Cagle, pre-school age chairman, gave a report of their last meeting, and urged more mothers to join this circle. The sixth grade, Miss Martha King, teacher, won the prize for having the largest percent of parents members of the P. T. A.

The association voted to pay $10 to the Alice Hilburn endowment fund. The attendance prize and tickets to the children's matinee at the Howard was given to high list, Miss Dover, teacher.

Before the meeting a hot luncheon was served the teachers by the mothers of Miss Lucile Anderson's third grade.

Mrs. Inman Addresses
S. M. Inman P. T. A.

Mrs. Samuel M. Inman was the speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the S. M. Inman P. T. A. on Wednesday afternoon, February 19, at the Virginia Avenue Baptist church. At the close of the business meeting, she spoke very delightfully and with deep feeling on "American Citizenship."

Mrs. Snow, Miss Alice Lovett and Miss Hale, representing the higher, middle and lower grades spoke on "What Teachers Expect of Parents."

The talks were not only very entertaining and original, but were most helpful. The chairman for the carnival, Mrs. T. J. Cheshire and Mrs. J. A. Higgs, Jr., announced all arrangements for this affair, which will be held on February 26 afternoon, February 26, at the school.

Kirkwood Mothers' Study Circle.

The Kirkwood Mothers' Study circle No. 1 met at the home of Mrs. Fred T. Bridges, 203 Winter avenue, Tuesday afternoon, February 19. One of the most helpful and entertaining programs of the year was carried out. Dr. Elizabeth Broach, health chairman of the fifth district, Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke to the mothers on the mental and emotional training of the child. Stressing the fact that the mother sets the example for her child in health, in conduct, in spirit and in truth. Dr. Broach also brought out many wonderful thoughts on the "child four square." The next meeting will be the third Thursday in March.

Fifth District Vice President Issues Letter of Importance

Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, vice president of the fifth district, has issued the following letter:

"As the time for our state convention draws near, we want to push the work in the district and round up our year's plans."

"I was particularly pleased with the response which came from the observance of founders' day. More requests came for information, literature and speakers than in any previous year. We are just awakening to the fact that Georgia has something to be very proud of in the fact that a Georgia woman founded the organization, and we should give expression of our appreciation of this honor, not only by observing the day with a suitable program, but in making a substantial contribution to the child welfare fund."

"Associations are requested to forward promptly their child welfare fund contribution to the state treasurer, Mrs. Albert Ehrlich, 112 East 38th street, Savannah, Ga., stating that it is for the child welfare fund. Every association in the district could send at least $1; some can send more."

Poster Contest.
The poster contest, which is open to all affiliated associations, will close April 26, 1926. All posters must be in Atlanta on or before that date. Send posters to Miss Charlotte Smith, poster chairman, care board of education, Atlanta, Ga. The subject may be any phase of Parent-Teacher work, which includes child welfare, home and school betterment, etc. One poster on any one subject will be permitted from a school. Elimination of posters must be done by the faculty of the various schools. Posters may be vertical or horizontal, on plain or cloth-backed paper, 32x28 or 22x14. A first prize of $5 and a second prize of $3 will be awarded to senior high schools, junior high schools, elementary schools, rural schools. In addition to these four prizes will be given for illustrated posters, two for pupils above the ninth grade and two for pupils below the tenth grade. If you have not received a copy of the rules please communicate with Miss Charlotte Smith, and copy will be furnished."

Endowment Fund.
"All contributions to the endowment fund must be in by April 15 to count on the contest for the silver cups. The cup given by The Macon Telegraph is awarded to the district contributing the largest amount proportionate to its membership. The cup given by The Savannah Press is awarded to the association making the largest contribution proportionate to its membership."

"Many associations are contributing to the founders' roll, giving $100 in honor of some outstanding member of the association or the principal of the schools. Among those already recorded are Kirkwood, Lee Street, Formwalt, Gordon, William A. Bass. Life memberships may be given to some member on payment of $25; honorary membership for a year for $5."

"Associations are requested to send in programs promptly. The work of assembling and judging these programs will be done some time. Send programs to Mrs. George Russey, Sr., 97 Lincoln avenue."

Parent-Teacher Meetings

The Parent-Teacher association of the Ponce de Leon school will sponsor a concert on Friday evening, February 26, at the De Leon Junior High school. The Griffith School of Music will give this concert and has arranged an attractive program, one number to be given in Japanese costume. Mrs. Robert Mathews is chairman and tickets can be secured from the school children or members of the association.

The regular meeting of Hoke Smith Junior High Parent-Teacher association will be held Wednesday at 3 o'clock. Founder's day will be observed, and also the second anniversary of the organization, which occurs on the 27th. A social hour will follow the business session, and opportunity given for the patrons to meet all of their teachers.

Fainting Spells

"I FIRST began taking Cardui because my mother told me to," says Mrs. J. W. Dawson, Blountstown, Fla., whose picture appears above. "She had taken it a number of times and it always benefited her."

"Shortly after I was married, I suffered from general weakness. My first baby was expected and I had all the ailments women usually suffer at such a time. I was dizzy and nauseated. I had fainting spells and awful headaches."

"My mother told me to try Cardui, as it was the best tonic she knew of. I began taking it as she directed and found it a wonderful help. It was no time at all until I was able to be up. From that time on, for seven years, I have used Cardui as a tonic whenever I got run-down."

"I was dreadfully bloated," says Mrs. Dawson, telling of another time when she found relief through the use of Cardui. "I swelled all over. My feet just swelled awfully. I had a dreadful time. I got so scared I was almost wild. A friend was with me and she sent for Cardui for me. I was so ill I hardly knew what they were doing. Cardui did the work. Almost immediately the swelling began to leave me and in a few weeks I was back to normal."

Hartwell Club Issues Year Book and Makes Many Plans

The Hartwell Woman's club has issued an attractive year book which was arranged by the following committee on program and fire arts: Mrs. S. R. Patton, chairman; Mrs. A. S. Skelton, Mrs. L. L. McMullan, Mrs. C. W. Rice and Mrs. W. A. Duncan. All the standing committees have done, or will do definite work. The civic committee composed of Mrs. J. H. Skelton, Sr., as chairman, with Mrs. Fred Wilson, Mrs. A. M. Teasley and Mrs. W. Morris, will report later in the spring.

The committee on citizenship and legislation, headed by Mrs. F. T. Kidd, assisted by Mrs. T. L. Matheson, Mrs. Isham Hailey, Mrs. P. C. Brown and Mrs. Henry Hailey, have been active in urging registration and attendance upon the polls. This committee has contributed to each month's program an article of personal value. Two parliamentary drills conducted by Mrs. W. A. Duncan will be held.

Mrs. R. E. Matheson is chairman of the home economics committee. Her assistants are Miss Francis A. McLanahan, home economics agent for Hart county; Mrs. C. G. Hayes and Mrs. P. P. Harrison. This committee helped put on a girls' canning club exposition in Hartwell in December. Mrs. Matheson was in charge of an appropriate literary program for the affair, which program was put on in the county courthouse. Under the direction of this committee the club sponsored observation of thrift week, distributed literature sent out from the home economics department at Athens concerning food and health of children; made a donation of a box of clothing valued at $60 to a Hart county school ship girl at Athens; collected $18 worth of clothes and money to buy text books for a Hart county girl at Tallulah Falls school.

Child Welfare Committee

The chairman of the child welfare committee is Mrs. H. W. Bingham. Others on this committee are Mrs. W. E. McCurry, Mrs. Leon Morris, Mrs. J. H. Harrison and Mrs. J. E. Cobb. Since Mrs. Bingham is president of the Hartwell P. T. A. the work of her committee has been largely correlated with the P. T. A. work in putting on medical and dental clinics.

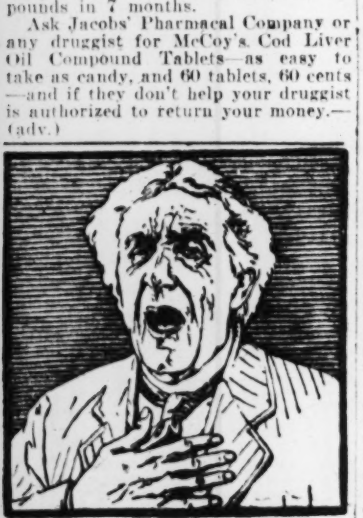

IS YOUR CHILD THIN AND WEAK?

In just a few days—quicker than you ever dreamt of—these wonderful health-building, flesh-making tablets called McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets will start to help any thin, underweight child.

After sickness and where rickets are suspected they are especially valuable. No need to give them any more nasty Cod Liver Oil—these tablets are made to take the place of that good, but evil-smelling, stomach-upsetting medicine, and they sure do it.

A very sickly child, age 9, gained 12 pounds in 7 months.

Ask Jacobs' Pharmaceutical Company or any druggist for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—as easy to take as candy, and 90 tablets, 90 cents—and if they don't help your druggist is authorized to return your money—(adv.)

How to Stop That Weakening Cough

Why let a heavy, stubborn cough wear you down when you can get speedy relief and often break it up completely in 24 hours through a remarkable new method based on the famous Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs?

Here is the method: You simply take one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. It has a double action. It not only soothes and heals irritation, but also removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. So with the cause removed the worst cough soon disappears.

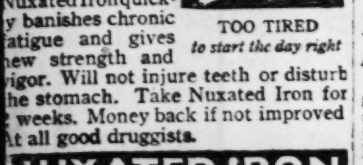

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic cough, etc. Fine for children, too—no harmful drugs. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

State Music Chairman Makes "Call To Arms"

Let's all sing "My Georgia Land."

Mrs. Brantley has made up her mind that we will never again go to a biennial convention unable to sing our state song.

She has asked your music chairman to see to this for her—and this is a call to arms!

We would suggest that each club procure enough copies of "My Georgia Land" for their own use and sing it at each meeting between this date and our state convention at Augusta on April 6.

We would also suggest that every member sing the melody—we feel that unison singing is more suited to our need.

If each one will know and sing our song when we meet at Augusta we are sure the rafters will ring as we praise our native state—and Mrs. Brantley need no longer fear the telltale silence from the Georgia delegates while "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," "My Old Kentucky Home" and song of the other states fill the air at the biennial.

Copies of our state song may be had from Phillips & Crew company, Cable Piano company, Atlanta, or from your music chairman at 95 East Lake drive, Atlanta. The price is 40 cents a copy.

MRS. HUGH HODGSON, State Music Chairman.

Brazelton Civic Club Will Beautify Town.

The Brazelton Civic club met in the auditorium, with the president, Mrs. John O. Brazelton, presiding. The club plans to plant some flower beds near the railroad and to cooperate with the mayor, W. H. Brazelton, in making a park near the new gymnasium building, which will improve the appearance of the town and mean much to the children for recreation.

The meeting was turned over to the thrift committee, of which Mrs. Royce G. Brazelton is chairman, and a program was rendered by Mrs. R. G. Brazelton, Mrs. Leita Brazelton, Mrs. A. D. McCurry and Mrs. J. C. Llewellyn.

Mrs. McCurry, state chairman of the thrift committee, talked on "Domestic Science Girls served refreshments."

Mrs. Richardson Issues Convention Information

"On to Atlantic City," is the slogan of the South Carolina Federation. Georgia will join South Carolina with the same slogan for Georgia, too, wants to have that delightful trip, to hear Mabel Dotter Baggett, of the "Home Journal"; to hear Dame Rachel Crowdy, the foremost woman in the League of Nations; Dr. John Tiger, and the many other great speakers who will address that convention.

There is only one Atlantic City, and she who misses the pleasure of this trip will miss a great deal. The president and director have suggested that as the women are so interested in hotels, that Georgia will have no headquarters hotel, but recommend the Dennis for the Board of Directors. The Dennis is a fine hotel, and the Stanton at 115 South Pennsylvania avenue, for those who wish more reasonable rates, and the quiet of the avenue. As soon as we are Manchester Club To Give Tallulah Benefit.

The Manchester Woman's club met February 5 at the home of Mrs. Ben Winslow with Mrs. G. A. Bryant, Mrs. Irvy Cook and Mrs. Harry Zarr as hostesses. Mrs. Keefer, Mrs. Perry, of Albany, in which she gave the plan used by the Albany club for raising funds for Tallulah Falls school. The tag day was used for that purpose. It was well advertised and when the day came everyone knew for what purpose the funds would be used, a very substantial sum was realized. She further said: "We plan to make it an annual event and think it would be wonderful if the club women of a great many towns would adopt the same plan. It was voted that this club give a 'tag day' for the same purpose. The ways and means committee, with Mrs. Chas. H. Smith, as chairman for the month of November, asked that the ladies give 50c each to the clubhouse fund, as any play, book party, etc., would cost as much. Mrs. J. L. Jackson gave a talk on this great book. Miss Callahan gave a reading. Two cunning little girls, Margaret Jackson and Mary Virginia Peters, sang 'A Little Bit o' Honey,' an accompaniment played by Miss Winifred Gibson. They also played a duet, 'The Golden Star.'

Miss Helen Davidson Is Honor Guest.

A party of the week-end was that given by Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Davidson at their home on Colquitt avenue, in honor of their daughter, Miss Helen Davidson. Punch and cakes were served during the evening, the punch bowl being presided over by Mrs. E. J. Norris, mother of the hostess, who assisted in entertaining. Games and dancing were enjoyed by the guests.

Acting Legislative Chairman Pleads for Registration

Mrs. Ira E. Farmer has been appointed acting legislative chairman for the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

The call for an extra session has been made by Governor Walker, and the subjects to be considered enumerated. These include bond issues for an educational system, with an arrangement for the prompt payment of school taxes, enlarged and improved plants for the higher state educational institutions, and authorizing any independent school system to vote on merging this system with its county system without having to take the matter to the legislature as now.

The Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs has repeatedly endorsed all these measures. There can be no doubt in the minds of any clubwoman as to the necessity of all these changes in our educational system. As to the subjects to be considered, the subjects are not new. They are old, but they are not new. They are old, but they are not new. They are old, but they are not new.

Your state president has sent to the district presidents a copy of a resolution adopted at the last board meeting, with request to forward at once to all clubs. If you really wish to aid in this very necessary legislation, if you wish to see every child given an equal right to an education, as we have so often claimed; if you want to keep the splendid men and women now in our higher institutions of learning, who are being called daily to other states which are not so backward as to appropriations, you will act on your president's suggestion and back up your resolutions with acts.

During the illness of Mrs. Felton Jones, I am acting in her stead as chairman of legislation. I want you to keep me advised as to what you are doing in your county, and call on me for any help I may render. It is quite useless to blame the men for inactivity and lack of the proper legislation if you are inactive also.

A letter or telegram will reach me in care of M. Rich & Bros. Co., Mrs. Ira E. Farmer, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Student Aid Committee Urges Cooperation and Support

The student aid committee is urging as never before the cooperation and support of Georgia clubwomen and friends.

1. Help us with suggestions for strong, reliable girls with a definite purpose. Loans are not granted to girls under 17 years of age. Personal endorsement and testimony count.

2. The loan granted, keep in touch with work in and out of school. Be sure she is making good.

3. The course finished and work found still, "follow up" and learn if she is doing her utmost to return the loan which brought self-support and the opportunity for usefulness. If not, learn why.

4. In June, 1925, a loan of $150 was asked for and granted. The Woman's club of the town where applicant lived soon after sent a gift of $100 for student aid. The beneficiary has already returned $60. Read between the lines and do likewise. Help us to help our own!

5. The supply by no means meets the demand. Our present assets are $28,520.10, $7,857 of which has been donated by federated clubs in 16 years. When and how can we reach the $50,000 mark?

This is emphatically and distinctively federation work. Other obligations have been assumed and generously met.

Why not student aid? We earnestly hope that 1925-26 will be our red-letter year and we joyfully claim widespread interest and larger gifts. Make your pledges and payments now.

Fifth District President Calls Meeting for Wednesday

Mrs. H. G. Hastings, president of the fifth district Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs calls a meeting for Wednesday, February 24, at the Atlanta Woman's club including the president's council, executive board and departmental chairmen.

Miss Cruse Honors Witches' Club.

Miss Jimmie Lou Cruse entertained the members of the Witches' club on Tuesday afternoon, at Rich's tea room.

An interesting hour was spent in business discussion, during which, Mrs. S. E. Ward, president, gave a report of the recent conference held with Mayor Sims in regard to a proposed plan for a badly needed convalescent receiving home at Grady hospital. Mrs. Marguerite Murphy and Mrs. H. Douglas were appointed to serve on the committee which is now working out further details of this plan.

Falls school committee was read and this beautiful cause.

Mrs. James A. Watson was appointed to represent the Witches' club in the "better homes" movement of which Mrs. Newton Wing is general chairman.

Refreshments were served by the following committee: Mrs. A. C. Vinson, Mrs. Annie Mae Berry, Mrs. W. W. Ammons, Mrs. C. B. Almond, Mrs. Emory Dendard, Mrs. Walker Combs and Mrs. G. B. Nixon.

Chattsworth Club Sponsors Library.

The chairman of press and publicity for the seventh district Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, Miss Bell Bayless, takes pleasure in making a correction in her library report in last week's issue, which she confesses was taken from an ancient newspaper clipping.

Mrs. J. Roy McGinley, librarian of the Murray county public library, writes: "We have a lovely little library of brick and stucco right in town, which is owned by the Chattsworth Woman's club and in which are 400 books. The library, of course, is operated by the club, each member keeping the clubhouse open to the public three afternoons for two weeks."

Mrs. Lee Gives Tallulah Scholarship.

Mrs. Bennett Lee, of New York, has given a memorial scholarship to Tallulah Falls Industrial school, to be called the G. J. Forester Scholarship, in memory of her father, the late G. J. Forester of Atlanta.

Mrs. Lee is giving this scholarship which she hopes will benefit some boy, expresses not only her interest in the school, but reflects the interest of her father in the mountain people, whose needs he saw and recognized in his contact with them as a pioneer railroad builder in the mountains of Georgia.

Young Matrons' Club Celebrates Birthday.

The Young Matrons Federated club of Winder celebrated the seventeenth anniversary with a Valentine tea at the home of Judge and Mrs. G. A. Johns.

The handsomely embossed cake bearing 17 wafers was placed on an artistically appointed table in the center of the dining room. This room was indeed radiant with red candles in silver candlesticks and with silver dishes holding the mints.

Many telegrams and letters of congratulations were received during the day from out-of-town friends. Loving good wishes with offerings of silver were showered upon the club by the two hundred guests present.

Baldwin County Federation Holds Georgia Day Observation

Baldwin county federation has in some school, or schools, observed Georgia day for 22 years, but never has Georgia's history been so cleverly portrayed as on this last Georgia day.

In the Midway school the pupils, with the teachers' aid, manufactured what they call the "moving pictures of Georgia." First, they made the machine, which consists of a frame for the screen, behind which frame are two rollers; and when speaker No. 1 is ready, the first scene is turned on the screen. Through 33 pictures, the pupils told Georgia's history, and a more vivid portrayal can not be imagined. The pupils made the pictures.

Part one was Georgia as a colony. They led up to it by picturing the Indians in Georgia, De Soto in Georgia, Oglethorpe in the debtors' prisons in England. Then came the landing at Savannah, the greeting of Tomochichi, the battle of Bloody Marsh, and John Wesley preaching to the Indians.

In just as interesting fashion, part two told the story of Georgia during the revolution, and pictured the Liberty boys, Nancy Hart, Eljahs were the commissioners.

Part four, the Georgia of today, was also pictured.

An interested visitor to this school was Mrs. O. M. Cone, of Atlanta. It was she, who, as regent of the Nancy Hart Chapter D. A. R., celebrated in 1904 the first Georgia day in school in Baldwin county. She beheld the miracle which 22 years have wrought.

In the Hopewell school, a little brown-eyed maiden, Evelyn Shirlee, pupil in G. S. C. W. Training school, and dressed as an Indian princess, told dramatically of the Creek Indians, the battle of Milledgeville, in 1802, when Thomas Jefferson was president of the United States. James Wilkinson, Benjamin Hawkins and Andrew Pickens were the commissioners.

The executive board and presidents' council of the fifth district of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. H. G. Hastings, president, will hold the annual midwinter meeting at the Atlanta Woman's club, Wednesday, February 24, at 10:30 a. m. The past president and presidents of affiliated organizations will, special guests. At this meeting, which always follows the board meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, recommendations and resolutions will be presented and acted upon.

Hearing particular interest is the announcement of three new chairmen:

The following: Mrs. H. G. Hastings, president; Mrs. Dan Lyle, vice president; Mrs. Murray Howard, recording secretary; Mrs. E. M. Heibig, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Joseph I. Smith, treasurer; Mrs. George Brown, auditor; Miss Rosa Woodberry, parliamentary. On the advisory board are Mrs. John K. Orlie, Mrs. J. Spole Lyons, Mrs. Albert Thornton, Mrs. A. P. Cobb, Dr. Blanche Love, Mrs. A. M. Cole, Mrs. D. Wilson and Mrs. T. T. Stevens.

Mrs. Gray Asks For Club Reports

Mrs. D. B. Gray, chairman of forestry division of the fifth district Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, requests all reports to be in her hands before February 24, in order that report of same be made at the fifth district meeting on the 24th.

Address reports to Mrs. D. B. Gray, College Park.

Dallas Woman's Club Features Juniors.

The Dallas Woman's club held a meeting at the clubhouse on Friday afternoon, February 12, at 3 o'clock. After the usual routine of business and the reports of the various committees, the meeting was featured by the Junior club at the February meeting.

Mrs. W. C. Sams is chairman of the Junior division, which is divided into two groups: the Bluebird division, with a membership of 40, and the following officers: Mary Ella Hudson, president; Bob Ledbetter, vice president; Grace Couch, treasurer. The division, which has a membership of 58, with the following officers: Alma Bulloch, president; Thelma Ragdale, secretary; Willie B. Denton, assistant secretary; Louise Bulloch, treasurer. Those taking part in the program were Mildred Johns, Jeannette McGarity, Grace Couch, Jeannette McGarity and Mrs. Mary Tribble, Alma Butler, Willie B. Denton and Louise Withrow, Louise Bulloch, Elizabeth Crew.

Rome Club Presents Literary Program.

The Rome Woman's club literary program featured many interesting subjects, including Mrs. Peter Burks' article on the Federal House-Cleaning from the book review of the "Pilgrim," the official organ of the Atlanta League of Women Voters.

Miss Lily Mitchell delivered an interesting address on Benjamin Franklin. Mrs. C. S. Sparks enlightened her paper on "Old Furniture" with the description of many fine old pieces she had seen in Tennessee and Alabama as well as in Georgia.

The president received a letter from the Passion Play committee in Atlanta, inviting the club to sponsor the picture, which will be shown at the Strand theater February 24, 25 and 26.

CAPTURED AT LAST

The Missing Link of Radio

At one stroke the world's greatest invention in radio has proven its value. It eliminates static. It makes music clear. It makes it possible to get the great volume from the air instead of getting it all from your batteries as you are now doing. It is so simple that a child can install and operate. It takes that irritating, annoying, harsh noise out before it enters your set. Simply follow instructions in the booklet and you will have at once notice what you have longed for. Full information accompanies each dealer. Dealers, send for our proposition in your district. Price $3.95 postpaid. No free samples. Wilson Station Eliminator Co., 9428 S. Building Ave., Los Angeles, Cal. (adv.)

Convert your receiver into A LIGHT SOCKET SET with Balkite Radio Power Units

Balkite Radio Power Units enable you to make a light socket set of your present receiver. The Balkite Trickle Charger converts your "A" battery into an automatic "A" power unit that furnishes "A" current from the light socket. Balkite "B" replaces "B" batteries entirely and furnishes "B" current from the light socket. As an added convenience you may purchase from your dealer an automatic switch that cuts out the charger and turns on Balkite "B" during operation.

This popular light socket installation is the last word in radio convenience—simple to install, economical, compact and composed entirely of units that have demonstrated their success over a long period of time.

Noiseless—No bulbs—Permanent

All Balkite Radio Power Units are permanent pieces of equipment, entirely noiseless, have no bulbs, no moving parts, nothing to break or get out of order. Their current consumption is very low. All operate from 110-120 volt AC current, with models for 50, 60 and other cycles. All are tested and listed as standard by the Underwriters' Laboratories. All are sold by leading radio dealers everywhere.

Opening New Radio Shop

LEFT TO RIGHT, J. T. MILLER, C. S. WHITE, W. G. BLANKSHIP

Of interest to all radio fans is the opening of the Miller-Blankship company of a new radio shop at 129-131 Peachtree Avenue. A most complete stock of radio sets and all radio supplies has been secured and the owners will maintain a service department for the repair of all radio and electric appliances.

The company is composed of W. F. Blankship and J. T. Miller. Mr.

Blankship is a radio expert of many years' experience, and is thoroughly posted on all makes of radios. Mr. Miller has been for some time connected with the Smith & Rankin company, retailers, but has been interested, as an amateur, in the intricacies of radio. Also connected with the company is C. S. Smith, who will be in the sales department. Mr. White formerly was with the F. E. Block company.

Constitution Hall

THE NEW D. A. R. AUDITORIUM

Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin, state chairman for the new D. A. R. auditorium, to be known as Constitution hall, urges that the chapters send in their pledges for bonds to her at once.

The national committee desires that payments for bonds be sent the state treasurer before April 15.

Chapters all over the state are taking bonds and chairs and the state chairman feels greatly encouraged.

Georgia is sure to have a no-bidder in this great enterprise. Please report the work of your chapter at once to the vice chairman in charge, in order that complete reports may be made to the national chairman.

Following is a letter from the national chairman, who is also treasurer-general:

Mrs. Bessie A. Lister.
Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin.
My Dear Mrs. Franklin: It gives me great pleasure to inform you that the daughters of the American Revolution, to increase its property holdings and to increase its financial resources, have decided to build a new hall and house of representatives.

There is a bond of the bonds, which we expect to be able to deliver to purchasers by June 1, 1926. It is a bond of the bonds, which we expect to be able to deliver to purchasers by June 1, 1926.

Xi Psi Phi Frat
Honors Freshmen
At Lovely Dance

Alpha Eta chapter of Xi Psi Phi fraternity of Atlanta Southern De 1 college entertained members of the freshmen class at a dance Tuesday evening.

The decorations were elaborate and in keeping with the fraternity colors, lavender and cream. One of the most attractive features of the evening was a solo dance given by Miss Frances Miss Nunnally, which acted as chapter sponsor.

Pledges who attended are: Ed Wallace, Oscar Taylor, Ollie Albritton.

"Clubbing a Husband"
To Be Presented.

"Clubbing a Husband," a humorous play, will be staged in the auditorium of Lee Street school Friday evening, February 26, at 7:45 o'clock.

The play is sponsored by Circle No. 1 of the Park Street Methodist church and will be presented by Circle No. 4 of the Calvary Methodist church.

The cast includes Mrs. J. P. Osborne, Mrs. H. B. Bankston, Martha Louise Johnston, Mrs. Eunice Luck, Mrs. J. A. O'Neal, Mrs. A. H. Miller, Mrs. N. G. Gargant, Mrs. G. C. Collier, Mrs. W. H. Pomeroy, Mrs. R. A. Walker, Mrs. M. Johnston and T. A. Slaughter.

In addition to the play the program will feature a reading by Mrs. Arthur Burdette, music by Mrs. Walter Simmons and a minstrel act presented by Melvin Eaves, Fred Volberg, Merrell Carter and John Harrell.

Admission 25 cents for adults and children.

Miss Eastlack's Recital Features Children.

Miss S. Adelle Eastlack's oratorio recital on Saturday presented a group of children and among those taking part were Agnes Chickles, Elsie Stevens, Barbara Hutchins, Ruth B. Tarkenton, Bonnie Ruth Bailey, Jeanette Linn, Marguerite Rogers, Emily Fisher, John Daugherty, Philip Manning.

Social Circle.
February 12 the John Clarke chapter, Social Circle, was entertained by James M. Gresham chapter U. D. C.

Mrs. Anderson, U. D. C. state registrar, gave a very interesting address, followed by talks by Mrs. Vascon, Mrs. J. C. chapter at Madison, and officers of the U. D. C. and D. A. R. chapters.

Joseph Habersham D. A. R.
To Give Benefit Bridge Feb. 24

The Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., will give a delightful benefit bridge February 24 at 2:30 o'clock.

Mrs. T. J. Ripley, the chairman of the "Lucy Cook Pool Memorial fund," is in charge of the affair.

This memorial fund carries to completion a very important work started by Mrs. William Lawton Peel, nee Lucy Cook, which was very dear to her heart, namely the compiling of valuable manuscripts, which has taken years to secure with accuracy. Mrs. Peel was the founder of the Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R. She passed away before this work was completed, and the chapter, in memory of her, has continued this work.

It is now ready for the printers, and when bound will be of great value to its members in looking up important data.

The funds secured from this party will be used to help defray the expense of printing, etc.

Many tables have been engaged. A number of handsome prizes have been donated, which will be drawn for; besides these each table will have individual prizes. All who have engaged tables are requested to provide playing cards and pencils.

Among those who have engaged tables are: Miss Marianne McClellan, Mesdames B. C. Ward, C. J. Sheehan, J. S. Moss, F. E. Brownell, J. E. Ripley, George Ripley, Jr., Charles W. S. Dukes, Lynn Howard, A. N. Greene, C. D. Tabo, J. N. Harper, J. C. Gentry, W. D. White, J. E. Telford, R. H. Barnes, E. T. McLaughlin, R. E. Githran, T. E. Mauldin, Homer Thompson, Charles Candler, George Spert, Miss Laura Canine, Mesdames Asa Candler, Jr., Eugene Haynes, J. M. van Harlingen, Campbell Woolridge, William Marion Camp, Scott Coleman, Frank Coleman, C. C. Coleman, James E. Coleman, James T. Williams, G. L. Berry, William A. W. Hodnett, B. H. Palmer and Mrs. Rick.

Any person desiring tables or single tickets can procure them at the door Wednesday afternoon, February 24.

Mr. Manly Host
At Dinner-Dance.

"Klevenest" on Cascade road was the scene of a lovely dinner dance Saturday evening when Harry Manly entertained for a bride-elect, Miss Marion Hooker, and the groom-to-be, Landon Setzer, formerly of Lincoln, N. C., now making his home in Atlanta.

Dr. and Mrs. Manly received the guests and were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Jones. The home was attractively decorated with daffodils, narcissi and hyacinths from Mrs. Manly's garden and the color scheme of yellow and white was effectively carried out in the dining room, where silver candlesticks held unshaded yellow and white candles.

The Washer that says—
Try me FREE

A Maytag awaits your invitation to come to your home to do a week's washing—FREE.

Thousands of women who have asked for a trial Maytag—just as you may—to learn how much easier—quicker—better—their washing could be done—have washed with the Maytag ever since.

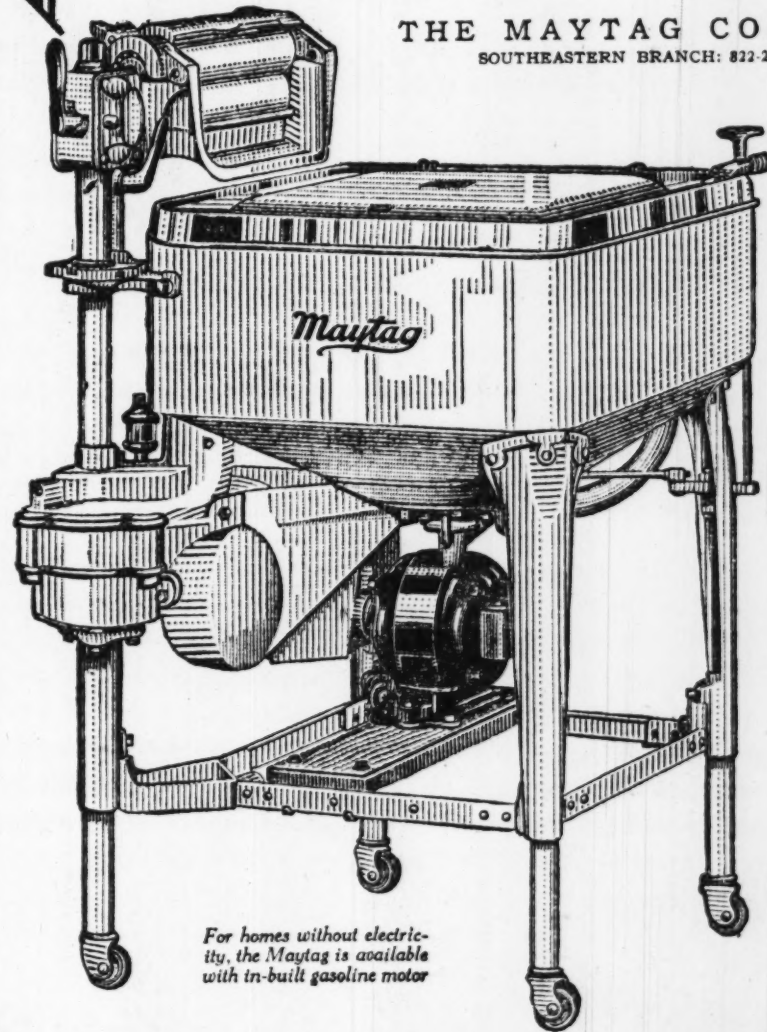

The Maytag is its own best salesman. No one can see it wash a big tubful of clothes in 3 to 7 minutes, 50 pounds of family wash in an hour—twice as much as any other washer can do—without appreciating its unusual speed.

No one can see the Maytag wash chiffons, georgettes, lace curtains—those things you wouldn't dare trust to any other washer—without appreciating Maytag's gentle handling of clothes.

No one can see the Maytag wash heavy blankets, fluffy rugs, greasy, grimy overalls—without acknowledging Maytag's unusual cleansing power.

Test the Maytag's washing ability in your own home—any dealer will gladly deliver one without expense or obligation on your part. If the Maytag does not sell itself to you, don't keep it.

THE MAYTAG COMPANY, Newton, Iowa
SOUTHEASTERN BRANCH: 822-23-24 Forsyth Bldg., ATLANTA, GEORGIA

9 Outstanding Maytag Features

- 1—Washes faster. The Gyroform Principle creates a more highly energized, turbulent and continuously effective water action. No idle water.
- 2—Washes cleaner. The Gyroform Principle mixes the soap evenly throughout the water, and forces the super-cleansing, soapier washing solution through the meshes of the clothes. No idle suds.
- 3—Largest hourly capacity in world—50 lbs. ordinary family wash per hour. Tub holds 21 gallons—4 gallons more

What W. C. T. U. Workers Are Doing

BY M. FRANCES MEADORS HURGHARD

Among the distinguished visitors to that busiest of places, the state headquarters of the Woman's Christian Temperance union in Macon, this week were Mrs. E. J. Simonds, of Havana, Cuba, former president of the Cuban W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, of Milledgeville, national W. C. T. U. lecturer and organizer and state field secretary; and Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, of Syracuse, N. Y., college and young people's branch secretary of the National W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Simonds, who has been a missionary to Cuba, has been transferred to Porto Rico, for which place she will leave within the next few weeks. She stopped in Macon en route home from the Student Volunteer conference held at the Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville.

Mrs. Simonds gave an optimistic report of the progress of the W. C. T. U. of Cuba, now led by Mrs. Mrs. H. Jones, and at the growth of temperance sentiment. She said that prominent clubwomen were active in the W. C. T. U. and were exerting a noticeable influence for total abstinence. That permission had been granted by authorities to place scientific temperance instruction in the public as well as church schools. She also related incidents showing decided progress of temperance along social lines.

Mrs. Atkins to Lecture.

Mrs. Atkins, a most attractive speaker; indeed, she measures up to the finest on the national board of lecturers; has begun a lecture itinerary in the state which will probably continue throughout the spring.

Her dates are being arranged by Mrs. W. G. Cotton, of Columbus. Mrs. Atkins spoke in Vidalia, Tifton and Baxley this week and will be in the eleventh district some days longer.

Mrs. Atkins lived in Tennessee during the prohibition struggles there and helped outlaw the legalized liquor traffic from that state. She has spoken in most states, organized the W. C. T. U. of Cuba and represented the national W. C. T. U. in world temperance gatherings in Canada.

Mrs. Atkins is to address an evening meeting at each place visited; speak at the schools the next morning, and school children everywhere like to hear her talk; then speak to the members of the W. C. T. U. about the methods and plans for carrying on the work.

Mrs. Perkins Speaks in Colleges.

Mrs. Perkins, who is a favorite among national W. C. T. U. speakers in Georgia, won new friends wherever she visited the past two weeks. She was cordially received at Piedmont college at Demorest as she came into the state from the north, and at Brenau college and Riverside academy at Gainesville; here she addressed a mass meeting in the city also; and given an enthusiastic hearing in LaGrange college at LaGrange and at the State Normal school and the young people's branch of the W. C. T. U. at the University of Georgia in Athens; also at the Georgia State College for Women in Milledgeville, where the temperance committee is so active. She spoke at Andrew college at Cuthbert, the State Woman's college at Valdosta and at Zebulon, Barnesville and Sandersville.

From there she will go to fill several weeks' engagements in Florida.

W. C. T. U. Personal.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armour visited Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins in Milledgeville last week-end. They, with Mrs. E. J. Simonds, of Havana, were the guests of Judge and Mrs. B. H. Dunnaway at a dining. Judge Dunnaway is a friend of prohibition and of the W. C. T. U. and one of the generous contributors to the state headquarters.

Mrs. W. T. Garrard, Sr., of Milledgeville, carried Mrs. Armour to Culverton, where they visited Mrs. Armour's son and daughter, Rev. and Mrs. Alton Lee Hale, Sunday afternoon and night.

Mrs. Armour entertained Mrs. Atkins and Mrs. Simonds at a luncheon in Macon Tea shop on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Seaborn Wright, of Rome, prohibition leaders for years and active in the W. C. T. U., have been in Pasadena, Cal., some weeks, where they will remain indefinitely.

Mrs. Lella A. Dillard, of Emory university, will go to New York the latter part of the month to represent the national W. C. T. U. at a national conference, as director of the department of peace. Interest in the peace department is growing all over the United States.

In reporting the recent revival services at the Eastman Methodist church, when the pastor, Rev. Robert Kerr, was assisted by Rev. Marvin Williams, pastor of Wesley Memorial church of Atlanta, the Eastman Times-Journal said: "Miss Julia Goodall, of Macon, who is a singer of wonderful ability, adds greatly to the effectiveness of the gospel message with her beautiful songs."

Rev. Marvin Williams, by the way, is a member of the W. C. T. U., and his wife, a former Wesleyan girl, is vice president of the state organization; the same is true of Rev. Robert Kerr, except that his wife has served the state W. C. T. U. several years as superintendent of the anti-narcotics department instead of being vice president.

The current issue of the Georgia W. C. T. U. bulletin contains an excellent article from the pen of Miss Goodall on "The Value of Neighborliness to Foreigners." After stating that she is making a success of the department of Americanization in the Macon W. C. T. U., teaching her classes several times each week, The Bulletin said of her: "Miss Julia Goodall may be better known as a singer, for she has been the Macon W. C. T. U. musical director for some years, and has assisted many pastors over the state as an evangelistic singer. She also writes well, both in prose and verse. Her versatility was further demonstrated by the efficient manner in which she performed the duties of chairman for assigning Kentucky Visitor Given Luncheon.

Mrs. S. J. Alexander entertained the F. D. C. club at luncheon Wednesday at the Henry Grady hotel, honoring Mrs. J. B. Wilkinson, of Louisville, Ky., the guest of Mrs. E. L. Helvin.

Covers were laid for Mrs. R. C. Blair, Mrs. Justus Killian, Mrs. A. R. Burr, Mrs. G. Frank Stewart, Mrs. DuPont Murphy, Mrs. J. B. Wilkinson, Mrs. E. L. Helvin and Mrs. S. J. Alexander.

Benefit Bridge Party on Monday.

Circle No. 2 of the G. L. A. to the B. of L. E. will sponsor a benefit card party Monday afternoon, February 22, at the Henry Grady hotel. Tickets are 50 cents.

Reservations can be made through Mrs. E. W. Liddell, Hemlock 1342-W, or Mrs. W. G. Lowell, West 0769-J. Ladies desiring to entertain bridge clubs can embrace this opportunity.

Friends throughout the state of the popular state W. C. T. U. corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. G. Cotton, of Columbus, will be pleased to know that her son, Ralph, has recently had the distinction of having two of his compositions for the violin accepted by The Violinist, a high musical authority, which publishes the compositions of artists.

Georgia State College For Women Alumnae.

The Georgia State College for Women's Alumnae club held an unusually interesting meeting February 13, at 3 o'clock, at the home of the former president, Mrs. Wilber R. Wilson, 531 South Candler street, Decatur, Ga. There were about 30 present.

The program committee were hostesses and assisted Mrs. Wilson in entertaining. The president, Mrs. James H. Bowden, presided for the usual order of business. Plans were made at this meeting to send a delegate to the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs convention which will be held in Augusta, April 6, 7, 8 and 9.

An announcement was made of the March meeting which will be a luncheon at Druid Hills Golf club, March 13, at 2 o'clock. After the business was finished the meeting was turned over to the membership committee who had charge of the program, Miss Emaline Stone presiding.

The club was honored at this meeting having Mrs. H. G. Hastings, president of the Fifth District Federation of Women's Clubs. She told of the wonderful work that is being done by the federation of women's clubs for the Tallulah Falls Industrial school. Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, past president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, was to have been present but she was unavoidably detained at Tallulah Falls Industrial school.

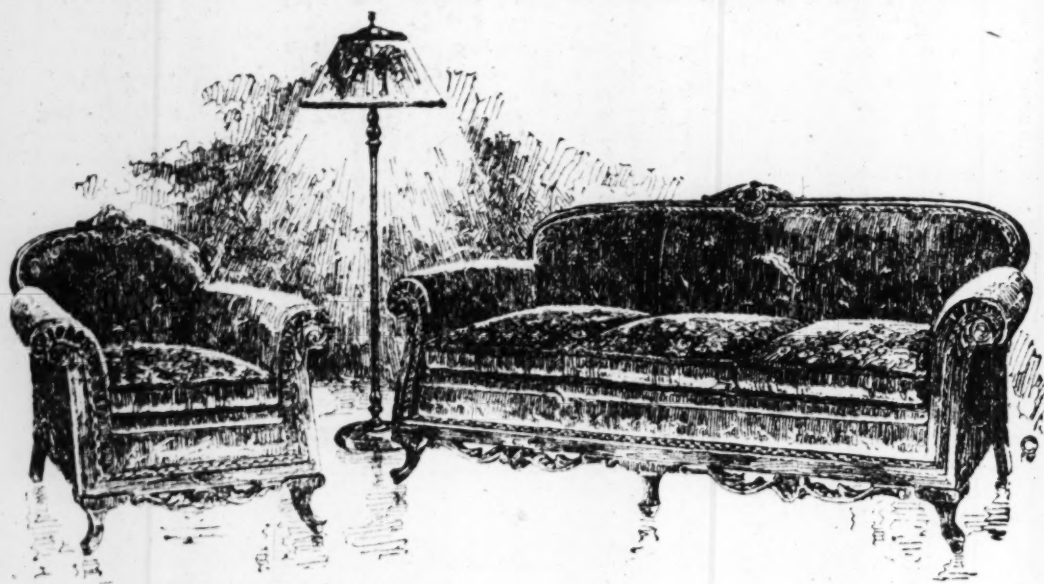

The "Study of Georgia" was taken up at this meeting. Miss Louise Enloe gave a splendid outline on the "Early History of Georgia." Mrs. S. G. Hill told of the life history of a famous Georgian, who was a poet hardly equaled in America, Sidney Lanier. She also mentioned Miss Mary Brent Whiteside as being the greatest southern poet since Sidney Lanier. We were favored with two solo dances by Miss Juanita Paschal. When the program was completed delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Sick Man Can Eat Buttered Pop Corn

Mr. J. W. Wilkinson had stomach trouble so bad he went to the hospital. This did not help and he began taking Adierka. Now he says he can even eat popcorn and enjoy it.

Adierka gives the system a REAL cleansing and brings out old metabolic poisons which may have caused trouble for a long time. Just ONE spoonful relieves GAS and takes away that full, bloated feeling so that you can sleep at night without rolling from side to side. Even if your bowels move every day, Adierka removes much additional poisonous matter which you never thought was in your system, and which caused sour stomach, nervousness, sleeplessness, headache, etc. Don't wait any longer, but let Adierka give your stomach and bowels QUICK relief. Carolyn Crosses The Delaware!

We don't know why, but rivers seem to play an important part in great careers. Caesar hesitated momentarily, then flung himself across the Rubicon, on to triumph. Washington, whose birthday we celebrate tomorrow, suffered untold hardship but he crossed the Delaware and won a critical battle of the Revolution. Perhaps there is a River of Doubt in all our lives that must be conquered or we fail and sink.

Beautiful Bride of Mid-Winter

Miss Louise Holleman Weds Col. Crockett In Dublin, Georgia

Dublin, Ga., February 20.—The marriage of Miss Louise Holleman and Colonel Charles Campbell Crockett was solemnized Tuesday evening, February 16, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Claude W. Branley, Jr., with Rev. S. R. Crockett, of Waynesville, N. C., brother of the groom, reading the marriage vows, and Rev. D. D. McIntyre, pastor of the Presbyterian church, giving the benediction.

A musical program was rendered by Miss Leah Kittrell, violinist, who played "Romance" and "Love's Old Sweet Song," and Mrs. Annette Brown, sang "Rose of My Life" and "All For You." Accompaniments for these numbers were given by Mrs. J. F. Flanders. Miss Kittrell's costume was of flesh georgette, with touches of silver. Mrs. Brown wore a lovely gown of golden georgette, hand beaded, and Mrs. Flanders' dress was of printed georgette. The Lohengrin bridal chorus was sung by Mrs. Lewis Thompson, of Cochran; Mrs. Annette Brown, Murphy Smith and J. F. Flanders.

The bridal party descended the stairs, crossed the reception room and entered the music room, where a beautiful altar of smilax and Easter lilies formed the setting for the wedding group.

The ushers were Nathan Holleman, brother of the bride, and S. V. Conyers. Little Misses Helen Hashinski and Pearl Simmons were flower girls and their costumes were dainty old-fashioned dresses of pink taffeta and they carried little old-fashioned nosegays.

Mrs. Blue Holleman, of Atlanta, matron of honor, followed. She wore an imported model of flesh georgette, beaded in pastel shades. Her bouquet was of sweet peas and valley lilies.

The bride entered with her uncle, C. W. Branley, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, A. C. Crockett, of Bradenton, Fla.

Miss Patterson Weds Claude E. Martin.

The marriage of Miss Sue Patterson and Claude E. Martin was solemnized Wednesday evening, February 3, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Anna Laney Patterson, on East Fourth street, Dr. Charles W. Daniel performing the ceremony. Only the immediate families of the contracting parties and a few close friends were present. The bride wore an early spring model of rosewood crepe with accessories to match.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Martin left for a ten-day trip to New Orleans and other points, and upon their return to the city they will be at home in the Fairmont apartments on Peachtree place.

GLASS—BERNHARDT.

Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Glass, of McDonough, announce the engagement of their daughter, Sara Gladys, of DeLand, Fla., to Guy Manning Bernhardt, of Atlanta, the marriage to be solemnized in June. No cards.

MANSON—JAMES.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Manson, of Daytona Beach, Fla., announce the engagement of their daughter, Rosalind Virginia, to John Hillsman James, formerly of Jacksonville, and now of Daytona Beach, the wedding to occur at an early date.

Adams-BostwickWedding Announced.

An interesting event of last week was the marriage of Miss Mary Adams and J. Bostwick, which took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Adams, on McLendon avenue Thursday evening, February 11. The ceremony was performed in the drawing room at 9 o'clock, before an altar banked with ferns, narcissi, hyacinths and valley lilies with cathedral candelabra by Rev. Ben Lacy and was followed by prayer by Dr. W. H. Major. The bride's gown was of oyster white satin, heavily trimmed with crystal beads. She wore a long veil with touches of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of rosebuds and valley lilies. Miss Susie Suber was maid of honor and wore yellow georgette over satin and carried an arm bouquet of pink sweet peas and rosebuds. Mrs. Walter Adams, matron of honor, wore blue georgette over satin embroidered in pastel shades. Her flowers were lavender sweet peas and pink rosebuds. Little Tootsie Dunbar was flower girl and Charles Adams carried the wedding ring on a satin pillow. The groom's best man was William Reed. The bride was given in marriage by her father, A. H. Adams.

Dr. and Mrs. Robert L. Dement sang "I Love You" and Miss Laura Bostwick, sister of the groom, sang "I Promise You," preceding the wedding march, which was played by Miss Blanche Spinks, of Montgomery, Ala. The bride's book was kept by Miss Elizabeth Johnson.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was given by the bride's mother, Mrs. A. H. Adams, assisted by Mrs. W. H. Hunt, Mrs. Robert L. Hicklin and Mrs. T. H. Robinson. Mr. and Mrs. Bostwick are at home to their friends after a short wedding trip at 87 Fairbanks avenue.

Mrs. Whitfield Is Club Hostess.

Mrs. W. C. Whitfield entertained the Lexington Avenue Sewing club at her home on Tuesday of last week. Many things of interest were discussed and plans made for the year. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess. The next meeting will be with Mrs. W. H. Alford on next Tuesday, February 22.

Like a Star on a Winter Night

DIAMONDS, to the expert, are as varied in personality as people.

Some diamonds are flawless but featureless. Others are full of the fire of character, but imperfect.

Then, there is the true blue-white diamond aglow with beauty and absolute perfection—like a star on a winter night.

Such rare and desirable gems are to be found in the Freeman collection, honestly priced.

Miss Josephs Weds Simond Mendel At Lovely Ceremony

Unusual interest is centered in the marriage of Miss Dorothy E. Josephs to Simon I. Mendel, which took place at the Progressive club Tuesday evening, February 16, Rabbi Hirmos and Rabbi Marx performing the ceremony. The hall room of the club, where the ceremony took place, was beautifully decorated throughout. The improvised altar was formed of ferns, palms, carnations and sweetpeas, intertwined with smilax. Tall silver candelabra held white burning tapers. The bridal path was marked off with white satin streamers, decorated with clusters of white sweetpeas and swainsons.

The bridal chorus from Lohengrin was used as the processional.

Harry Mendel, brother of the groom; Perry Ginsberg, cousin of the groom; Herbert Givron and Edward Shatzkin, cousins of the bride, were ushers. Nathan Mendel, cousin of the groom, acted as best man. Miss Helen Mendel, sister of the groom, was maid of honor, and she was beautifully gowned in orchid taffeta, fashioned with a basque waist and full skirt. She wore slippers and hose to match. She carried a colonial bouquet of pastel shade flowers.

Mrs. E. A. Josephs, the bride's mother, was matron of honor. She wore a becoming model of corse crepe tulle, fashioned on straight lines with gossamer at the bottom of the skirt. Her corsage was of red rosebuds. Mrs. H. Mendel, mother of the groom, was gowned in black georgette, beaded in silver, over silver metal cloth. She wore a corsage of red rosebuds.

The little flower girls were Betty Jane Oppenheim, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Oppenheim; Marion Romm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Romm, and Frances Josephs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Josephs, of Chattanooga, Tenn. They wore dainty frocks of pastel chiffon, and carried baskets of rosebuds, tied with tulle.

Miss Evelyn Levinson kept the bride's book and Miss Ida Mendel presided over the punch bowl.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, E. A. Josephs. Her blonde beauty was enhanced by her becoming bridal gown of duchess satin and chiffon, fashioned along straight lines with circular flare at the bottom, elaborately beaded in crystals and seed pearls. Her veil of misty white tulle was held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms and fell the full length of the train, which was fashioned of duchess satin and chiffon.

Let the Gown be silent that the Woman may speak!

FUSS and feathers on a gown drown out the personality of the woman who wears it. The fine lines, the hand work and the sparing decorations of a garment from Frohsin's all conspire to enhance, not to drown the charm of the woman who wears it! That is why its welcome in your wardrobe will not soon wear out. A Frohsin's model never loudly asserts itself, but does assert with unfailing good taste the charm of the woman who wears it. Evening gowns, afternoon frocks, sports apparel, coats, suits and hats.

Lovely Afternoon Ceremony Unites Miss Green and Mr. Hinds

Beauty and dignity marked the wedding of Miss Rebecca Green to Joseph Herbert Hinds, of Wollaston, Massachusetts, which took place at the bride's home on Ponce de Leon avenue at 5:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the presence of the family and intimate friends.

The home was beautifully decorated with ferns, roses and southern smilax. Mrs. Ulrich Green, sister of the bride, sang, "O Fair, O Sweet and Holy" just before the ceremony. Her accompanist was Mrs. R. A. Barry, aunt of the bride, who also played the wedding march.

An improvised altar of palms and ferns as a background with seven branched cathedral candelabra on either side alternating with pedestals of white roses formed a lovely setting for the ceremony, which was performed by Dr. D. P. McGeachy, of the First Presbyterian church.

Lovely Bride.
The bride was radiantly lovely wearing a becoming gown of tan crepe and ruffled with felt hat to match and a corsage bouquet of bride's roses.

and lilacs of the valley. She entered with her sister, Miss Margaret Green, who was her maid of honor. Miss Margaret Green wore green georgette and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and pink sweetpeas.

Miss Ruth Green as bridesmaid wore green georgette and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and pink sweetpeas.

The little ribbon bearers, Mary Lois Riley and Dorothy Ramspeck, wearing dainty pink georgette frocks, bore the tulle streamers marking a path for the bride's party.

Double Ceremony.
Ulrich Green, the bride's eldest brother, acted as best man. The double ring ceremony was used, the bride using her mother's ring and the groom his mother's ring. The bride is descended from one of the south's best known and most distinguished families and the groom also numbers among his ancestry many famous names of prominence and distinction.

After March 15 Mr. and Mrs. Hinds will be at home in Wollaston, Massachusetts.

Miss Elizabeth Nabors Weds George Johnson.

Mrs. W. H. Nabors announces the marriage of her daughter, Evelyn Elizabeth, to George W. Johnson, of this city, at home, February 20.

Miss Worthington Weds Mr. Siedelberg.

Griffin, Ga., February 20.—Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Worthington announce the marriage of their daughter, Kathleen, and A. W. Siedelberg, formerly of Lansing, Mich. The wedding took place quietly Wednesday evening, February 19, in Seal, Ala.

Immediately after the ceremony the young couple left on a short wedding trip, after which they will be at home to their friends at the Ralston hotel in Columbus.

Mrs. Siedelberg is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Worthington. Mr. Siedelberg is a native of Lansing, Mich., having been in the south only a few months. He is a representative of the National Cash Register company.

Miss Robinson Weds Mr. Craig.

Mrs. Cora Wilhoit Robinson announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Jerry Louise Robinson, of Atlanta, formerly of Warrenton, Ga., to Samuel P. Craig, of this city, formerly of Greenwood, S. C., which was solemnized in the First Baptist church, on February 13, at the Century Methodist church. The ceremony was performed by Dr. D. L. Evans, also of Chattanooga.

After visiting friends and relatives in South Carolina and Georgia Mr. and Mrs. Craig will be at home with the bride's mother at No. 239 St. Charles avenue.

City-Wide Y. W. A. Elects Officers.

The city-wide Y. W. A. of Atlanta held the first meeting of the year at the First Baptist church. Two hundred members were present.

Mrs. C. H. Terry, associational leader of Y. W. A., presided at the meeting. A feature of the program was the presentation of the standard of excellence. Each of the ten points on the standard was illustrated by a pageant, song, or playlet.

The following officers for 1926 were elected: President, Miss Lee Gordy; First Vice President, Miss Julia Mitchell; Second Vice President, Miss Johnnie Thomas; Third Vice President, Miss LaKue Johnson; Fourth Vice President, Miss Ruby Hill; Recording Secretary, Miss Minnie Byrd; Inman Park; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Dorothy Neighbors; Treasurer, Miss Mary Davis; Tabernacle; Pianiste, Miss Mary Lu Sullivan; Kirkwood; Counsellor, Miss Julia Allen, state young people's leader.

The next meeting will be in April, the exact date to be announced later.

Cordial Social Interest Centered In Schlesinger-Meyers Announcement

Mrs. Martin Meyers, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Schlesinger, whose marriage is announced today. She was formerly Miss Sarah Ella Schlesinger, a member of Atlanta's younger set of society, who is studying art at the University of Pittsburgh.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lionel Schlesinger announce the marriage of their daughter, Sarah Ella, to Martin Meyers, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Cordial social interest centers in this announcement, as the lovely bride is the youngest and very talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Schlesinger, and was graduated from Washington seminary, afterward traveling extensively in the United States. She was president at a very youthful age of the Children's D. A. R. association and did notable work in this field, having knitted several sweaters and made innumerable bags which were taken out to Fort McPherson to add to the comfort of those soldiers stationed at the fort, and she gave valuable service to her country throughout that period. Mrs. Meyers is very intellectual and charming and is a thoroughly educated. For the past two years she has been studying sculpture at the Carnegie School of Technology in the University of Pittsburgh, where she was a member of one of Atlanta's most distinguished and representative families, and is a sister of Mrs. Frank H. Neely, Mrs. Buhl

Moore, Mrs. Harrison W. Johnson of Washington, D. C., Joseph A. Schlesinger and Alexis L. Schlesinger.

Mrs. Meyers is a junior at the Medical school at the University of Pittsburgh and is a popular member of his class. He is a member of the A. T. O. fraternity, a Nu Sigma Nu and is a football and baseball star of Mount Union college, where he received his pre-medical degree. He will continue his studies at college, having taken a leading part in the activities and social life of the university. He belongs to a fine old family of Ohio and is connected with the most prominent and influential families in the state.

Atlanta Music Club Has Interesting Lecture Recital

The lecture-recital given by the Atlanta Music club on Wednesday morning at the auditorium of the Woman's club was enjoyed by a most appreciative audience. Miss Madeline Kepp, presenting the sixth of a series of lectures on the study course, "From Song to Symphony," delighted her hearers with a short history of the development of the piano and piano composition. Fine drawings of some of the various instruments developed in the evolution of the piano were shown and a brief analysis of the kinds of music written for them was given.

Particular mention was made of the numbers to be played by Mme. Wanda Landowska, Polish pianist, whose concert at the auditorium of the Woman's club, sponsored by the Music club, is an event of February 27. A part of this program will be devoted to music of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, played on the harpsichord.

The drawings shown included that of a dulcimer such as Henry Ford has recently had reproduced for old-time dances in his home; a virginal, the ornate virginal once belonging to Queen Elizabeth and around which so much of royal romance centered; a harpsichord, like the one Wanda Landowska carries with her on her concert tours, and one of the earliest pianos made by Cristofori and now one of the treasures of the Metropolitan museum.

For some of the piano illustrations Miss Kepp made use of the Duo-Art; others were furnished by David Pesetki, New York, whose appearance on the program was effected through the courtesy of Harvey Phillips.

The numbers played by Mr. Pesetki and then reproduced on the Duo-Art were "Romance" and "Impromptu," by the American composer, Zez Confrey. And as an encore, his own arrangement of an old Viennese melody, which met with warm applause. The melody is one made familiar by the violin arrangement of Kreisler, known as "Midnight Bells."

The next of the morning music program under the direction of I. M. Mayer, well-known pianist, Mr. Mayer will be assisted by Miss Maude Eberhardt, second piano; Tom Standring, first violin; F. H. Gilbreath, second violin; Herman Effel, viola, and Jose Gasca, cello.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Morgan Curtis, of Pelham, Mich., are stopping at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Miss Sara Alexander, of Augusta, is an attractive visitor in the city.

Miss Virginia Ballard and Miss Katherine Cooper, of Brenau college at Gainesville, Ga., are guests at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Thompson, of Dallas, Texas, are recent arrivals at the Biltmore hotel.

The many friends of Miss Lula Lewis will be sorry to learn of her illness at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Lewis, in Peachtree circle.

Mrs. F. A. Johnson is in Augusta for the week-end.

Mrs. William W. Brewton and Mrs. George M. Dame, of Homerville, La., are guests at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd W. Jefferson are among the New York guests who are stopping at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Col. J. W. Austin To Address West End Civic Club Members

George Washington's birthday will be appropriately observed Wednesday afternoon, February 24, at 3 o'clock, the regular meeting of the Woman's Civic club of West End takes place. Mrs. Arthur Merrill, the president, will preside.

At 2 o'clock Mr. Edward Smith, first vice president, will preside at the executive board meeting and important matters will be discussed relative to club work. Mrs. L. A. Hollingsworth, program chairman, has arranged a very unusual program in commemoration of the life of our first president. She will present Colonel J. W. Austin, whose address on "Citizenship" will be the outstanding feature of the meeting.

Other announcements for the week are: Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock the hospital committee, Mrs. C. C. Shipley in charge, will meet in the clubroom for the purpose of making bandages for Grady hospital. The advisory board with Mrs. Fred Stewart as chairman, announces on account of illness of the speaker a postponement of the Bible study class until next week.

Great interest has been manifested in the study of the twelve apostles, which is being conducted by the different ministers of our city. Mrs. Stewart states that the next discussion will be given by Father Clarke and will deal with the life of Bartholomew, the sixth disciple whom Jesus chose. Father Clarke has recently become pastor of St. Anthony church and a most cordial invitation is extended to every one who is interested in these worthwhile lectures to attend and to welcome Father Clarke to West End.

Mrs. V. L. Patton, club hostess, announces that the regular open house will be kept Tuesday evening from 8 to 10 o'clock. Games will be played and the members and their friends are invited to be present.

Mrs. J. B. Carter, the director of the Blue Birds, entertained at a lovely Valentine party on Friday afternoon, February 12, at her home on Lawton street. Games were played and the attractive Valentine motif was carried out in the decorations and refreshments. The guests included the Blue Birds which is composed of the very young members of the club.

JUNIOR LEAGUE FOLLIES IS NEXT ALLOTMENT FOR SOCIETY

Cupid's Wiles Are Contagious To Paces Ferry Road Elite With Another Wedding Predicted

BY BEVERLY BURGESS.

And now that the Galli-Curci concert last Friday night is of blessed memory—and who that was present could ever forget it or think of it in any other save a happy way?—we turn readily to the next big allotment—the Junior League Follies! No imported celebrities are these! And herein lies the appeal!

Your daughter, sister, wife, sweetheart and mine, are these performers. No press agent do they need, each personage included having her own or his own following with such devoted clientele all that is necessary to assure full houses flying the S. R. O. signals is to announce the time of performance and open the doors!

The poor (?) husbands, ladies and sweethearts (those of the former and latter who are not fortunate enough to be included in the cast) are usually the recipients of much wrongly directed commiseration. Certainly aside for the period of Ned Wayburn's dominance do they have to step. But this is a most cheerfully rendered carte blanc in favor of Mr. Wayburn and the league, per se.

In fact, similar, isn't it, to seeing one's beloved decorated with the Croix de Guerre to watching one's wife or sweetheart's name appear as headlines in this big wonderful production—and that of the elite only? Surely, when one realizes the tremendous things that are done with this tremendous fund which is raised annually by his local talent one should be willing to eat, for the time being, at restaurants or, better, not eat at all.

Mrs. Henry Newman the very capable president, assisted by her able corps of committeemen, is most actively into the spring show's details.

The names of Mrs. Eugene Harrington, Mrs. Lott Warren and others are inextricably bound up in League Follies' performances of all times and are none the less so in the one of the immediate future!

The fact of it is, Mrs. Harrington keeps so busy receiving telegrams some seven or eight of hundreds of words daily—from the big "New York producer" that she can't spare herself long enough to get down to real routine work.

Mr. Wayburn evidently knows the value of a capable henchman who is on the ground.

April 12 seems such a long, long way off, so eagerly are we awaiting this Junior League Follies—all Charlestonized after the thorough manner of all "itied" things—given under the auspices of the league and under the direction of New York's very most renowned in his line!

Cupid's Wiles Contagious. Frances Arnold and Hugh Richardson in their recent surrender to the craft and cunning of Cupid inaugurated a new precedent for Paces Ferry road's young contingent, so, from reports, it might seem!

Capitulating are some of the male actors of this fashionable rendezvous, we are told, to the attractions of some of our fairest and most beguiling young charmers.

Neighbors and friends are the young gentlemen in question, friends but not neighbors are the girls, but all are representative of Atlanta's most outstanding citizenry and figures are these centering the sincere interest and good will of hundreds of Atlanta friends and relatives. More we are afraid to tell you under the present status quo. We shall see!

The Gift of a Voice.

That Laura Candler, the second daughter of the Asa Candler, Juniors, is the real inspiration of much of the happenings and doings in the young society of this town is a well-known fact to many.

In addition to beauty, position and a gracious personality, Laura also has the gift of a beautiful voice. It is a mezzo-soprano of deep resonance and beauty.

Perhaps though, Laura's greatest personal charm lies in her vivacity! A perfectly natural, unaffected daughter of a millionaire is she!

For four years has Laura been the president of her class at the seminary. This year she heads the senior class. A bright, active Pi Pi is Laura.

Around does Laura expect to go some day in the not-too-remote future in pursuance of this wonderful talent of hers.

Another Senior.

Hortense Adams, Jr.—a beautiful replica of Hortense Adams, Sr., is she.

Verily the mantle of beauty and personality of the mother has fallen on the daughter in this case of the Hortenses.

A Pi Pi and a senior at the seminary is this charming young daughter of the Albert Adamses.

For Hortense's first year at college are tentative and we don't like to think of losing her even temporarily.

A deservedly popular figure is she at all the college parties.

The Adams' home is always the happy scene of much entertaining and hospitality.

A Creole Type of Beauty. Have you ever seen anything as glorious as the big, lustrous dark eyes and hair of Augusta Porter, Jr.?

Another mother and daughter junior and senior case, where in a passing car it is difficult to distinguish Augusta Senior from Augusta Junior.

The same beauty in both, the same sweet graciousness and charm of manner.

After being graduated from the seminary in the spring, Augusta, Jr., is planning for another year to go with her life-long chum, Sarah Foote, to Virginia for her first year in college.

How may depleted this senior class is going to leave Atlanta another year when these girls all go off to college.

Augusta is a very active member of the O. B. X. sorority and a charming figure at all the college dances.

Three Charming Brides. And now you know the names of the three brides whose identities were not allowed to divulge until this blessed moment!

Frances White, Margaret Griffin and Maude Cobb are they!

A strange coincidence is there in the announcements of these three popular Atlanta girls!

All are Atlantans, all three of them unknown to each other until the twenty-first for the announcement of their engagement and all three are to be April brides!

I wish I could say all three of them were marrying Atlanta boys, thereby assuring the loss of none, but such is not the case.

As usual Atlanta loses in this marriage deal!

A Lovely House Party. Edith Coleman, that charming Atlanta Agnes Scott girl, is entertaining at a real live house-party at her home in Inman Park.

Virginia Burt, of Opelika, Ala.; Gertrude Green, of Bradenton, Fla.; Helena Hermance, of Canada; Virginia Peeler, of Canada, and Georgia Watson, of Thompson, Ga., are the guests for the week-end.

For the pleasure of her visitors, Edith has done much.

Friday night at the Galli-Curci concert she entertained at a box party.

This afternoon, in an informal way, Edith is "At Home" to her friends in honor of these guests.

Next best to being one of Edith's house guests comes the good luck of being on her calling list.

Yesterday afternoon at a very lovely party, Mrs. Ford in Ansley Park entertained for Edith and her Agnes Scott house-party of charming girls.

Woman's Auxiliary Holds Meeting. The woman's auxiliary of the Morningside Presbyterian church met at the church home February 15, to review the mission study book, "Prayer Missions," the following ladies having charge of reviewing the different chapters: Mrs. Berry, Mrs. Jeffries, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Rusk, Mrs. Best, Mrs. Sanders. Refreshments were served after which Mrs. W. M. Everett gave a very interesting talk on the "Standard of Excellence." Mrs. Rockwell Johnston described Christian social service.

Monthly Luncheon Meeting Of Atlanta Better Films Feb. 23

The regular monthly luncheon meeting of the Atlanta better films committee to be held on Tuesday, February 23, at 12:30 o'clock, in Rich's tea room, will have as program hostess Mrs. Newton C. Wing, first vice president, and chairman of the junior matinees.

According to the plan of Mrs. Frank McCormack, president of the committee, the 1926 luncheon meeting of the organization will each be in charge of the different officers and executive board members of the committee, in turn, and much friendly rivalry has been aroused in the success of the different program features.

The guest list for the Tuesday luncheon, which attests the wide scope of the work done by the films committee, includes Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president of the board of education; Mrs. George Howson, president of the Parent-Teacher association; the district manager for Public, Montgomery S. Hill and Mrs. Hill; Rose Croix chapter, U. D., will hold its first regular meeting Wednesday evening, February 24, in the Wigwam on Central avenue.

Hapeville Social Notes of Interest. Mrs. Thomas Lewis recently entertained her Sunday school class at a Valentine party. About 40 young people were present.

Miss Ida Wells has been confined to her home with the flu.

The Business Women's league of the Methodist church held a very interesting meeting Friday, February 12. Miss Mary Poole gave a talk which was enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Claudia Amerson entertained the Book club at their last meeting at her home on Whitney avenue. Those present were Mrs. L. T. Carter, Mrs. Jesse Burke, Mrs. C. T. Greene, Mrs. P. T. Reddick, Mrs. J. R. Watkins, Mrs. J. T. Cowan, Mrs. Marvin King and others.

Mrs. Hamp Harrison, Mrs. John Webb and Mrs. George Hendricks were joint hostesses, entertaining Mrs. John F. Jones' Sunday school class, at the home of Mrs. Harrison. About 60 young matrons were invited.

Forrest F. Attaway is on a business trip to Zanesville, Ohio.

New Era Study Club Meets. Mrs. Dwight Bayley entertained the New Era Study club at her home in Decatur Wednesday, February 17.

Mrs. Edgar Craighead acted as toastmistress and responded in a delightful witty manner to the splendid original toasts made by each lady. After a most delicious luncheon, served by the hostess, the day's program was enjoyed.

Mrs. Parker was the leader, and opened the meeting by a short, interesting paper on "Georgia Day and Its Meaning." Mrs. Douglas Counts gave a most delightful talk on "The Historical Persons and Places of Georgia." Mrs. West followed with an equally good paper on "The Influence of Georgia in the Development of the Nation and Its Colleges." The program was closed by a piano solo.

St. Paul's Missionary Society Has Meeting. The regular third Monday meeting of the missionary society of St. Paul church was held at the church Monday afternoon, with Mrs. Ballenger, the president, presiding. The meeting was opened with singing and prayer.

A demonstration of a wasted life was put on by some members of the Young People's society, Mrs. J. W. Wood in charge. Those taking part were Ray Black, Marjorie Wischmeyer, Marguerite Langston and Miriam Collins. There were good reports given by the chairmen of the various circles. The meeting was closed with prayer by Mr. Crowell.

Mrs. Johnson Will Be Hostess At Costume Ball on Tuesday

Mrs. Chester Johnson will be hostess on the evening of February 22 at the costume ball to be given at the West End Woman's clubrooms, 218 1-2 Lee street.

Layton, Mrs. Waller, Mrs. Ahern, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Park, Miss Lynette Graham, Mrs. Jack Short, Mrs. E. L. Helvin and others.

Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Ahern, West 2087. Mrs. Ahern will be assisted by Mrs. Alice E. Means and Mrs. Greer.

The department of literature of the club gave a brilliant program at the club Wednesday afternoon. Judge Howard, of the superior court, gave the leading address, subject, "The United States as a World Power."

Judge Howard thinks the United States stands for international justice to the smaller nation as well as the powerful one. We have never asked indemnity and have never been given territory as the result of any of our wars. He believes America's destiny will grow greater as the years go by, and that more and more we shall stand for righteousness. Mrs. Carl Cunningham's singing of a selection from "Ave Maria" and a song in a lighter vein was much enjoyed. Imogene Trent gave a solo dance.

The next program will be given in March and will deal with "Great American Women." Mrs. Alice E. Means is chairman of this department.

Class in Cooking. A class in cooking will be conducted by Mrs. A. P. Boardman from March 1 to 5, inclusive. Mrs. Boardman is planning many interesting surprises for her pupils. One day will be given to bread, rolls and variations. Salads, pastries, meats and many other dishes to tempt the palate will be demonstrated. The hours will be from 10 to 12 o'clock each day.

Tickets will be on sale at the club tea room every day and at the Wednesday afternoon meeting of the club. The entire course will be given for the price of $1 per pupil.

The regular meeting of the club will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the clubhouse. Chairmen of committees will be asked to make reports at this meeting.

The Blue Birds will meet at the home of Mary Clare White, 1155 Gordon street. The study of the robin will be taken up at this time, in addition to which a short program on the life of George Washington will be given.

One hundred and fifty active and associate members of the College Park Music club will have as special guests at the evening meeting next Monday evening the 16 charter members of the club. This meeting is the second of a series of evening meetings featured by this club, and inasmuch as February 22 is the fourth birthday of the club a birthday party will also be featured at this meeting.

Mrs. Freeman Doss, one of the charter members and chairman of the committee that wrote the constitution and by-laws when the club was organized, will give a brief history of the club.

James de la Fuente, boy violinist, who won the contest last year at the state convention and who is a most talented pupil of Charles Fry, will appear on the program, playing the following numbers: Concerto in A minor, Accolay; Legende, Wienowski; From the Canebreak, Samuel Gardiner; waltz, Brahms—Hachstein; Swing Song, Ethel Barnes. He will be accompanied by Miss Jane Tway.

Clarence Wall, leading tenor of Atlanta and College Park, will sing a group of songs as follows: "Ashes of Roses," Woodman; "At Parting," Rogers; "Morning," Jeanne Boyd.

Mrs. Clarence Wall will preside at the piano.

Also the club chorus, under the baton of Mrs. W. W. Bateman, who so successfully performs the double duty of club president and chorus director, will make its first appearance this year in several numbers. Mrs. Harry McGowan is accompanist for the chorus.

Mrs. L. M. Love and her committee are in charge of refreshments for the occasion and Mrs. L. H. Warlick is the efficient house chairman.

Club members will please present their membership cards at the door.

REGENSTEIN'S

Miss Griffin Will Marry Mr. Williams

The announcement made today of the engagement of Miss Margaret Griffin to Lewis Williams is of unusual interest throughout the south by reason of the prominence of the two families and the popularity of the young couple.

Miss Griffin is the only daughter of Mrs. William Hamilton Griffin and the late Judge Griffin and a sister of William Abbott Griffin, of New York. The bride-elect has resided in Atlanta for six years, moving here with her family from Valdosta, Ga. Since the early days the Griffin family has occupied an important and eminent place in the civic, social and religious life of south Georgia, the father of the bride-elect serving several terms in the Georgia legislature.

Mrs. Griffin was formerly Miss Abbott, whose family was equally as distinguished in the state of Vermont. Since her residence in Atlanta Mrs. Griffin and her daughter have made hosts of friends and are active figures taking part in the cultural and civic circles of the city.

Miss Griffin graduated with the 1924 class at Agnes Scott college and is a young woman of extreme culture and gracious personality.

Mr. Williams is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Williams, of Wilmington, N. C., the Williams family being originally from Alabama. Mrs. Williams was before her marriage a Miss Longest, of Virginia, and also a member of the Lewis family of that state.

The groom-elect was a former instructor at Princeton, Massachusetts, and he served five years with the air forces, spending a long period at Mitchell field, Long Island, N. Y. He is now connected with the United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry company, of Birmingham, Ala., where he and his bride will make their home.

The marriage of Miss Griffin and Mr. Williams will take place in the spring, the exact date to be announced later.

Miss Eckford Wins Fancy Dress Prize.

What ever is more bewitching than a fancy dress ball for all and every age of society? The boys of the Phi Sigma Kappa of Georgia Tech, realizing this to be the case, did the popular thing in so announcing the annual dance as such last Friday night at the Druid Hills Golf club. The whole gamut of life from the peasant to the highest, from the bovery to the most effete was run. All countries, from Norway to Honolulu were included in feature costumes.

At midnight a grand march, led by Miss Kitty Parks and Mr. Pop Gunn, the president of this host-chapter, afforded an opportunity of seeing in one huge review the entire ensemble present. The favors and boxes of candy were presented the guests.

Kitty Parks was a charming Turkish beauty, while her partner, Pop Gunn, went as Sultan. Two most attractive and challenging figures were Helena Callaway and Lewis Hawkins. This popular Tech alumnus has gone by the nick name of "Abie" and to good account did he put this title on this occasion, for he and his attractive date went as "Abie and his Irish Rose." Another figure of remarkable appearance was Boyce Lokey, who represented a Harey beauty.

Her costume was most appealing in its white satin and long veil. Another intriguing costume was that worn by adorable little Frances Barnett. This was a genuine Norwegian costume in all of the beauty of an original—brought to this country by Jennie Hodgson on her return from abroad last year.

Miss Runa Irwin was the real original Hula Hula girl and nothing could be added into her faultless interpretation of the same. Eckford's fair loveliness lent itself to her reputation of the tulip, in its pink and yellow beauty.

Tex Barret was a Texas cowboy. From spurs to boots of his, his big sombrero hat to buckskin breeches, he was the living representative of his role. Ike Williams represented a Bovey touch. With nose painted scarlet, a black patch over his eye and customary cap and sweater coming up to the requirements of the Bovey touch, Ike fulfilled every thought herein connected with his part.

Tular Callaway was a wonderful representation of Prince Milo.

The prize for the most attractive costume was awarded Miss Florence Eckford, who dressed in her slim, girlish figure, the "Blue Boy" of Gainsborough fame. A perfect representation in blue satin, with lace blouse, buckled slippers and every detail following the lines of the famous picture were in this lovely costume. The prize was an exquisite vanity in silver and gunmetal bearing the Phi Sigma Kappa coat-of-arms. The judges were Mrs. Hugh Loker, Mrs. Frank Callaway and Mrs. Noel Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Cann Are Honored at Affairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cann, of Savannah, Ga., who are in Atlanta for a few days as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. Fitzhugh White at their apartment on East Seventh street, were honor guests at the delightful informal dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Hunt Chipley were hosts on Saturday evening at their home on Wesley Drive.

The dinner table was beautifully appointed and held as a central decoration a bowl of fragrant spring flowers. Smaller vases of these lovely flowers were placed at intervals around the central bowl. Covers were placed for Mr. and Mrs. Cann, Mr. and Mrs. White, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles Feme, C. O. Fickelhampt and Mrs. and Mrs. Chipley.

Mr. and Mrs. Cann will be honor guests at the informal mid-day dinner Sunday to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Jr., at their home.

Among other who will entertain in honor of Mrs. Cann will be Mrs. Duncan Owens, the date and nature of the party to be announced later.

Miss Barbara Farley Given Birthday Party.

A delightful event of Saturday afternoon was the Valentine party at which little Miss Barbara Farley was hostess to a number of the younger set at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Farley. The occasion celebrated her tenth birthday.

Several interesting games were enjoyed during the afternoon. A heart contest furnished much merriment in which Master Jack Sawyer was awarded the first prize, and Miss Madge Simmons the consolation.

Interpretive dancing by Miss Doris La Croix and Carlotta Alhiser was an attractive feature of the afternoon.

The small hostess was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. Farley, Miss Esther Stanley and Mrs. J. B. Stanley.

Lovely Atlanta Girls To Wed in Early Spring

"George Washington" Affairs To Feature Week

The last week of the winter season finds rather a dearth of affairs, social, cultural or otherwise, for society is more or less wearied of formal entertaining and the heavy program of undertakings with which Atlantans have been occupied.

Already there is a breath of expectancy in the air, for the sun has passed the winter solstice and somewhere in the world it is spring! With little regret do we relinquish winter, for who does not anticipate with the keenest joy the balmy days of spring in the southland?

Patriotic Affairs. With a flair always for a display of patriotism and homage to the honored father of our country, Monday will be marked by a number of "George Washington birthday" affairs. The friendly relations committee of the Atlanta Women's club will give a luncheon at the club at noon. In the evening the West End Woman's club will give a Washington costume ball, both of these events to be outstanding patriotic affairs.

Lovely Visitors. A small group of interesting visitors add charm to the informal gatherings of intimate friends each day which feature the Lenten season. Distinguished among the group are Mr. and Mrs. Chalmers Wood, of New York, who are the guests for a few days of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Inman at their home in the Biltmore. Mrs. Wood was formerly Mrs. Ruby Ross Goodnow and is well known in Atlanta, where her hosts of friends will welcome her.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cann, of Savannah, are the fete guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fitzhugh White at their home on Seventh street. Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Jr., will be hosts at an informal dinner in honor of these attractive visitors today, and Mrs. Duncan Owens will entertain for them at some later date.

Mrs. Morton Douglas, of Warrenton, Va., is the lovely guest of Mrs. J. Carroll Payne at her home on Peachtree street and will be the center of much informal social attention.

Miss Ida Joseph, of Columbus, who is always a welcome visitor in the city, is the guest of Mrs. Charles Sisson at her home on Eleventh street after having visited Mrs. Edward Barnes for a few days.

Miss Vera Layne, of New York, is another popular visitor whom Atlanta always welcomes with much pleasure. She is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Weyman at their home in the Pallas apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Haynes have as their guests at their Peachtree road home their sister, Mrs. J. Harper Erwin, of Durham, N. C., and Mr. and Mrs. William Miller will entertain for Mrs. Erwin at dinner at the Biltmore this evening.

Cultural Organizations. Two cultural organizations meeting during the week will be the Alliance Francaise, which will entertain Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Marvin Underwood, and the Atlanta Drama League, which will present Mrs. Arthur Burdette in a reading of "The Man With a Load of Mischief" Tuesday afternoon at the Atlanta Woman's club.

Among the interesting parties of the week will be the buffet supper at which Mr. and Mrs. Victor H. Krieshaber will compliment the Play Cratters this evening at their home on Springdale road.

Other hostesses of the week will be Mrs. Frank Meador, who will entertain at bridge Wednesday, and Mrs. Ralph Smith, who will be hostess at luncheon on the same date.

Two lovely honor guests of the very young social contingent who will be central figures during the week include little Miss Jane Lawless, whose fourth birthday will be celebrated Saturday at a party given by her mother, Mrs. J. J. Lawless, and little Miss Annie Hill Kenan, who will celebrate her fifth birthday at a party which her mother, Mrs. Thomas S. Kenan, Jr., will give on Monday.

College Dances. Outstanding among the affairs for the college set during the week will be the dance given by the Phi Pi sorority of Washington seminary Thursday evening at the Druid Hills Golf club.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Miller will be hosts at a beautiful dance Friday evening at the Druid Hills Golf club, complimenting the members of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity of Emory university. This affair will assemble a large and representative group of the school contingent.

Dinner-Dance at Driving Club. The dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving club on Saturday evening was one of the most enjoyable affairs of the week. Gathering a number of members, visitors and debutants, this was a delightful affair.

The tables were placed around the ballroom floor and held a central decorative vase of spring flowers. Attractive music was played throughout the evening.

Colonel William Lawson Peel was host to a party of friends, which were placed for Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Jefferson, W. H. Kiser, Dr. and Mrs. Phinney Callahan, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Maddox, Dr. and Mrs. LeRoy Childs, Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Smythe, Hugh Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Inman, Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Cowles, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Dickey, Jr., Miss Harriet Snook and Colonel Peel.

Miss Jennie Hodgson was hostess in a party given in honor of Miss Isabel Johnston, one of the season's debutants. At her table covers were placed for 15 guests.

Dr. and Mrs. Fred Hodgson entertained a party of eight friends, which were placed for Mr. and Mrs. Lott Warren, Jr., and Dr. and Mrs. Harry Vaughan.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Harrington had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Lott Warren, Jr., and Dr. and Mrs. Harry Vaughan.

Dining together were Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Stanley.

Miss Frances White, who is engaged to be married to William Jeter Weems, is shown in the top right portrait.

Miss Maude Couch, who is engaged to be married to John Westerfield Born, is shown in the bottom portrait.

White-Weems Announcement Is Of Interest

Among the list of interesting engagements which presage beautiful weddings of early spring is that made public today of Miss Frances Amorette White to William Jeter Weems. The announcement carries the cordial interest of hosts of friends throughout Georgia and Alabama, the former home of the groom, and is of much social importance.

Having graduated from Girls' High school, Miss White later attended Agnes Scott college, where she was a leader in school activities and an outstanding figure in athletics. By reason of her dainty blonde beauty and personal charm, she holds an enviable position in the younger set of society in her home city and has been an admired visitor in other cities throughout the south. She has recently returned from an extended stay with relatives in Tampa and St. Augustine, Fla., and has often visited in Washington, D. C.; Norfolk, Va., and Maryland, where she spent several summer seasons at the Sherwood Forest club.

Miss White is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Donaldson White and the sister of Mrs. Guy Norman, Miss Virginia White and Harris White. She is a descendant of the Stanley family of England and traces her relationship through her maternal grandmother to the distinguished French General Amorette, of revolutionary fame. Mrs. White, the bride-elect's mother, was before her marriage Miss Anne Harris, of Atlanta.

Mr. Weems is the son of John Andrews Weems and the late Mrs. Weems, of Union Springs, Ala. His mother was before her marriage Miss Pauline Jeter, of Columbus. He is a nephew of Mrs. W. L. Jeter, of Atlanta.

Since coming to Atlanta to reside Mr. Weems has won for himself a host of friends who will be interested to learn of his approaching marriage. He is an importer and broker of china and is a popular member in business and social circles, being a member of the Atlanta Athletic club.

The wedding will be an interesting event taking place early in April.

Mrs. Leard To Be Mah Jongg Hostess.

Mrs. Emily W. Leard will be hostess on Tuesday at her quarters, 1007 McPherson to her Mah-jongg club. The guests will include Mrs. LeRoy Ellinger, Mrs. E. P. Conley, Mrs. Melville Jarvis, Mrs. James Magee, Mrs. L. O. Matthews, Mrs. E. Williams, and Mrs. Clyde Johnston.

Miss Couch To Wed Mr. Born At April Church Ceremony

Social prominence is attached to the announcement made today of the engagement of Miss Maude Couch to John Westerfield Born, formerly of New Orleans, but now of Atlanta.

Miss Couch and Mr. Born are representatives of distinguished southern families and both are well known in New Orleans and Atlanta society.

The charming bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maxie Gregg Couch, of this city and a sister of Mrs. Carl Elkin Greene, of Montgomery, Ala., and Miss Marion Couch. Before her marriage the bride-elect's mother was Miss Mary Ella Harbuck, of South Carolina, member of the well known family in that state by that name.

Miss Couch graduated from the Girls' High school and though having never made a formal debut, she has been an admired and popular member of the younger social contingent. She has been a fete belle in a number of southern cities where she has visited and is beloved by a wide circle of friends.

Mr. Born is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Born, of New Orleans, formerly being a Miss Westerfield before her marriage. Both the Born and Westerfield families are influential in the state of Louisiana and are prominently identified with the development of that state since pioneer days. John Wood Westerfield, maternal grandfather of the groom-elect, is a well-known figure connected with the shipping board at New Orleans.

The groom-to-be attended Tulane university where he was a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity. Since a young boy he has always played an outstanding part in the gorgeous court scenes at the carnivals during Mardi Gras seasons.

During the world war he served with the United States navy. Mr. Born is connected with the Richardson company and is for the present located in Atlanta.

The marriage of Miss Couch and Mr. Born will be an interesting and beautiful event of April 17 at the Druid Hills Methodist church.

Miss May Patterson Weds Mr. Goodrum in New York

New York, February 20.—(Special.)—Accompanied by vast social importance and of particular interest was the wedding of Miss May Patterson and James J. Goodrum, both of Atlanta, which took place Saturday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the Church of the Transfiguration in New York city.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Randolph Ray, rector of the church. The bride was given in marriage by her mother, Mrs. W. E. Patterson and Thomas K. Glenn was best man.

Among the Atlantans who were present at the marriage were Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. English, Mr. and Mrs. James Goldard, Miss Agnes Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. McCrory, Mrs. A. M. Morris, Miss Mary Goodrum, the groom's sister; Ernest Woodruff, Thomas Paine, Mrs. W. Malcolm McCrory, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Goodrum, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Healey, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Goodrum, Mrs. J. Bulow Campbell, Miss Virginia Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Porter, Almon Norris, Mr. and Mrs. Candler Hobbs, Forney Wray, Thomas Paine and Henry Walker Bagley.

The bride wore a beautiful creation of beige colored chiffon with a striking satin belt to match. Her attire slippers and hose were in the same shade and she wore a shoulder spray of pink orchids.

Mrs. William J. Patterson, the bride's grandfather, the groom-elect's maternal grandfather, was the officiating minister of the ceremony. The bride wore a corsage bouquet of pink roses.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. Goodrum and his bride left for a cruise of the Mediterranean for several months.

A prenuptial affair of unusual beauty was the occasion at which Ernest Woodruff, Thomas K. Glenn, John Newton Goodard and Bulow Campbell were hosts on Friday evening, February 19, at the Biltmore, in honor of the bride and groom. The intimate friends in New York for the wedding and a group of prominent New Yorkers composed the guest list.

Atlantans To Lend Treasures Of Great Value to Art Exhibit

One of the delightful things about the art exhibit that is to be staged by the Atlanta Woman's club the week of March 1 is the number of treasures that have been unearthed in Atlanta by Mrs. James Little, the chairman for the exhibit, and her assistants.

More than one ruler and president will be represented by autographs and documents. Frederick Bull, of Peachtree street, will lend his famous collection of autographs, including one of Bismarck, the old "Iron Chancellor," Queen Victoria's signature will be lent by Mrs. Leila McKnight, who also promises an emerald cross that has been in her family since 1675.

A handkerchief of Queen Victoria, the old "Iron Chancellor," will be lent by Mrs. Emma Garrett Boyd. And there will be relics of several United States presidents.

The portrait of President Tyler owned by Mrs. Waller, of Decatur, his granddaughter, with the charming one of President Tyler's daughter, it is hoped will be seen by Atlanta people at this or some succeeding exhibition. Mrs. Henry M. Patty promises to lend generously of her George Washington relics.

Mrs. Patty is the great-great-grand-niece of George Washington, being descended from Washington's sister Betty who married Colonel Fielding Lewis. Her ancestor, Washington's favorite niece, lived with the Wash-ingtons at Mount Vernon, and Mrs. Patty's father had a rich collection of letters written to her by the great first president; most of these, however, he gave, long ago, to Smithsonian Institution.

Mrs. Aldredge Honors Kill Kare Club.

Mrs. R. G. Aldredge was hostess Thursday afternoon at a George Washington party at her home on Clifton road, complimenting the members of the Kill Kare Club.

A most interesting contest was enjoyed in which Mrs. J. W. Farley was awarded first prize, and Mrs. R. K. Almond the consolation.

The hostess was assisted in serving by Mrs. W. C. Chambers.

Knights and Lady Maccabees Dance.

The Knights and Lady Maccabees are giving a series of benefit dances at the temple, 217 1-2 Peachtree street. The first dance was given last Thursday night, and proved quite a success. Mrs. Mary A. Jordan, Mrs. Ida McCall and Mrs. Lily Burnett received the guests. Mrs. Mary E. Jones acted as hostess.

The next dance will be given Thursday night, February 25. Admission will be by card only.

Among the heavy of attractive spring brides-elect are three lovely young Atlanta girls whose engagements are announced today. At the upper left is Miss Maude Couch, beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Couch, whose marriage to John Westerfield Born will be an interesting event taking place April 17. Miss Frances White, seen at the upper right, is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. White. Her engagement is announced today to William Jeter Weems, the marriage to take place early in April. The lower photograph is Miss Margaret Griffin, whose engagement to Lewis Wilson Williams is announced by her mother, Mrs. William Hamilton Griffin. Her wedding will also take place in the early spring. All photos are by Thurston Hatcher.

Mrs. Payne Honors Miss Isabel Johnston.

Mrs. J. Carroll Payne was hostess Saturday at a buffet luncheon at her home on Peachtree street, the occasion honoring Miss Isabel Johnston, popular debutante of this season and the charming daughter of Mrs. Richard Johnston.

A plateau of pink roses and lavender sweetpeas adorned the lace-covered table in the dining room, while these same lovely flowers were arranged throughout the reception rooms.

Mrs. Payne was assisted in receiving by her house guest, Mrs. Morton Douglas, of Warrenton, Va.

Thirty guests were invited to meet the guest of honor.

Mrs. Burdette Will Give Reading.

Mrs. Arthur Burdette will read "The Man With a Load of Mischief," by Ashley Duke, before the Atlanta Drama League Tuesday afternoon, February 23, in the banquet hall of the Atlanta Woman's club.

Biltmore Tea-Dance Attracts Large Number.

A number of delightful parties assembled Saturday afternoon for the regular tea-dance at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Miss Belle Matthews, of Philadelphia, the attractive guest of Miss Jean and Neal Kendrick, at Fort McPherson, was honor guest at Mrs. Stacey Earnest Hills' table. Other members of the party were Misses Kendrick, Emmett Mitchell, Dr. Hines Roberts and Lieutenant John C. Nelson.

Miss Norville Munford, of Washington, and Miss Sara Alexander, of Augusta, were the guests of Harry Kirkland and Colonel H. C. Merriam.

Mrs. J. E. Wallace entertained in honor of Mrs. A. A. Adams, of Memphis, Tenn., and Mrs. J. J. Nowell, of Augusta. Completing the party was Mrs. C. R. Davidson.

Covers were placed for Mrs. Erwin, Mrs. George Boynton, Mrs. Frank Inman, Mrs. Elizabeth Winship Bates, Mrs. Bates Block and Mrs. Haynes.

Mr. and Mrs. William Miller will entertain at dinner this evening at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel in honor of Mrs. Erwin. Covers will be laid for a group of close friends.

Mrs. Haynes Honors North Carolina Visitor.

Mrs. Eugene Haynes was hostess at an informal luncheon Saturday at the Piedmont Driving club, inviting a group of friends to meet her guest, Mrs. J. Harper Erwin, of Durham, North Carolina.

A plateau of early spring flowers formed the center piece of the artistically appointed table, pink roses, lavender hyacinths and jonquils predominating.

Covers were placed for Mrs. Erwin, Mrs. George Boynton, Mrs. Frank Inman, Mrs. Elizabeth Winship Bates, Mrs. Bates Block and Mrs. Haynes.

Mr. and Mrs. William Miller will entertain at dinner this evening at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel in honor of Mrs. Erwin. Covers will be laid for a group of close friends.

Mrs. Inman Elected Head Of Tech Club.

Georgia Tech Woman's Auxiliary, by action of the executive committee, has elected Mrs. Samuel Inman president for the coming year. Monday afternoon, March 8, was named the date for the next regular meeting.

Other officers elected are: Mrs. Joseph Rhodes, first vice president; Mrs. George McCarty, second vice president; Mrs. Frank Neely, recording secretary; Mrs. G. M. Stout, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Robert Gregg, treasurer.

Following the regular business meeting March 8, Mrs. Inman will lead the auxiliary to Grant field, where they will be honor guests in a big review of the Georgia Tech R. O. T. C. New silk colors for the regiment will also be presented by the new auxiliary officers at that time.

Mrs. Inman heads the auxiliary the second year of its organization, Mrs. W. C. Wardlaw having been the first president.

Social Affairs Given In Chattanooga.

A representative group of Atlantans will go to Chattanooga for the grand opera productions by the Chicago Civic Opera company, the latter part of the week, at which a series of social affairs will be given.

On Friday there is to be a luncheon at the Country club, sponsored by the Junior League. In the afternoon receptions for visitors will be given at clubs, and "Aida" at 8 sharp, with Mme. Rosa Raisa in the leading part. After the opera a gala supper dance at the Parkview will be given at 10 o'clock the famous sixth cavity will offer a review adding a gay touch to all social functions. At 11:30 a breakfast will be tendered by the Writers' club, when the newspaper women of the three states, Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee, will be special guests of the newspaper women of the local fraternity and the Chattanooga Writers' club. Mary Gardien, in her inimitable role of "Carmen," will be heard at 2 o'clock, and the "Barber of Seville," at 8 o'clock.

Miss Forbes Given Birthday Party.

A delightful affair of Saturday was the birthday party at which Mrs. L. O. Burlingame was hostess.

This was a George Washington luncheon given at her home on Peachtree road in honor of her little daughter, Clara DeWitt Forbes, in celebration of her tenth birthday.

The guest list included Buell Stark, Mildred Bentley, Helen Fouché, Susie Smith, A. M. Smith, Will Thompson, Rupert Edmundson, Jr., Worth Yarker, Jr., Stafford Stark, Jr.

HAS MUSKET THAT "FIRED THE SHOT HEARD ROUND THE WORLD"

Old Gun Drew First Blood In Revolution

By Bessie S. Stafford.

THE trusty musket herewith pictured drew the first British blood in the revolutionary war. It was fired by Solomon Brown, great-grandfather of Homer W. Brown, prominent East Lake resident, and is held by his son, Van Deman Brown, into whose possession the gun has lately come.

This authenticated relic did much to uphold the honor of the American militia, when on the morning of April 19, 1775, Solomon Brown, one of the minute men living at Lexington, Mass., shouldered this firearm and marched forth to take direct aim and active part in the first armed encounter between American and British forces, which preceded the battle of Concord.

To prove the authenticity of this priceless musket and establish its historical record, reputable and prominent citizens were appointed on December 13, 1924, at a public town meeting in Lexington, to prepare and publish a record of the events of that April encounter between the Continentals and the Red Coats.

Affidavits and testimony of the men participating in the skirmish were taken with the Hon. Nathan Chandler, Rev. Charles Briggs, Elias Phinney, Abigail Harrington, Amos and John Wozzy, Benjamin Wellington and Francis Bowman, Jr., serving on the committee "to collect and place the transactions of that day before the public in their true light." The findings, straightforward evidence from those still living, were published in pamphlet form. A facsimile of this little volume was reissued in April, 1925, by a Mr. Wellington, of Lexington. From its pages comes the following statement relative to the important part played by Solomon Brown.

After describing the advance of the troops and positions occupied by American and British armies on that early April morning in 1775, the report says, "Solomon Brown and the person seen to fire from Buckman's (a tavern which stood near the scene of the skirmish) back door were on the right of the British troops as they came up and so situated as to have a clear view of them after they fired. Brown was so situated as to take aim and probably gave the wound received by the regular in the tenth regiment, as blood was seen upon the ground after the battle, a few rods south of the meeting house where the main column of the enemy stood when the Americans fired, and in the direction in which Brown was seen to aim his piece."

Last August the musket came to Mr. Brown following the passing of an old uncle in Massachusetts and that is how it has found its way into Van Deman Brown's hands, who as a student at Tech High, is busily

"God Bless the Little Church." MR. AND MRS. JAMES J. GOODRUM, in the words of Joseph Jefferson, are saying, "God bless the Little Church Around the Corner," as their marriage on Saturday was consummated in this historic church where brides and grooms from every part of America have pledged their troth. Mrs. Goodrum's name will henceforth be inscribed on the bride's altar, being erected of white marble in this little church which lies close to the heart of New York.

Every day last week a train bore Atlantans eastward for the specific purpose of being present to hear Mr. and Mrs. Goodrum's "I will," and "with all my worldly goods I thee endow." They all preferred extending congratulations and best wishes in person rather than by telegram to these popular Atlantans, and so Mr. and Mrs. Harry English, Mr. and Mrs. John Goddard, Mrs. Samuel C. Porter, Mrs. W. J. Patterson, the bride's mother, Miss Agnes Coleman, Mrs. J. C. McCreary, Mrs. E. S. Morris, Miss Mary Goodrum, Thomas Glenn and Robert Woodruff were among those witnessing the ceremony, remaining in New York until the ship Columbus sails for Europe and to wave farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Goodrum upon their wedding journey, including a wonderful Mediterranean cruise.

Influence of Music. THE influence of music on a certain eminent Atlanta surgeon is so soothing and restful that the eve before performing a delicate operation he requests his wife, a woman of brilliant musicianship, to play selections for an hour or so on the piano. Under this magic musical appeal and suggestiveness he plans the operation and smooths out the problems which might arise to hinder its success. The quieting influence embodied in his wife's music aid materially in a patient's welfare coming under the skillful touch of so great a man.

Southern Wins Award. THE southern mountains have been given to America far more than America can ever give to the mountains. Abraham Lincoln was a backwoodsman and Andrew Jackson, Henry Clay and many others whose names adorn the pages of American history were from the mountains. And in this generation the mountains have given to America Cora Wilson Stewart.

The above glorious tribute was paid by Ida Clyde Clarke, editor of Pictorial Review, in awarding the $5,000 prize to Mrs. Stewart, the Kentuckian selected by twenty judges as the woman making the greatest contribution to American civilization. Nationally heralded as the Moonlight School Lady, Mrs. Stewart began her work in 1911 in a cabin in Rowan county in the Blue Grass State, holding the schools on moonlight nights because in the dark of the moon the mountain roads were impassable. The influence of her school has been felt and heard in every state in the union and a movement started to relieve illiteracy with the result that thousands of adult and young Americans owe their ability to read and write to Mrs. Stewart, the great-hearted, far-seeing southerner, the brilliant and brave woman of the Kentucky mountains who struck a light in the darkness about her and held the torch which sent its rays to the other side of the world. She is affectionately called the Moonlight School Lady. Her work and that of the teachers was a purely volunteer service to humanity and done entirely without compensation.

Chattanooga's Opera Season. IN the days to come when the history of Chattanooga's grand opera season is written Atlanta will have taken an important part in the story. Mrs. Hugh Richardson's associate chairmanship has brought forward a large following of local music lovers leaving for the Tennessee city the latter part of this week. Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Lupton, leaders in Chattanooga society, who are wintering in Florida, have presented their opera box to Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Calhoun to use for very performance, their guests to be their sister, Mrs. Phinix Calhoun and several other intimate friends.

On a most magnificent scale are the social entertainments planned in connection with the opera. The opportunity to hear "Kosa Raisa," "Aida," "Mary Garden in 'Carmen,'" and Florence Macbeth in "The Barber of Seville," will be at two evening performances and one matinee in the Soldiers and Sailors' Memorial auditorium February 26-27. Mr. and Mrs. Cator Woodruff will be Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Andrews' guests and Miss Marion Van Dyke plans to stay with relatives in Chattanooga, while Mrs. DeLos Hill and Miss Natalie Hammond will be members of the Atlanta party attending the opera. A former resident of this city, Mrs. John Lamar Meek, whose ability has placed her among the leaders in matters musical, will receive her friendship with the Atlantans.

Wears Ancestral Finery. A CEDAR chest gave up its ancestral finery, providing the ashes of roses gown for Mrs. Delmar Robertson, when as Miss Dorothy Bartlett, she "dressed up" in her maternal grandmother's wedding gown. An old cameo pin, buried in the soft tissue at her throat also belonged to the late Mrs. George H. Prescott, a grande dame of Massachusetts, whose granddaughter had no trouble in wearing the gown without a single alteration. To add to the flavor of long, long ago, Mrs. Robertson carried a real lace fan and a thread lace rose completed the quaintness of the costume.

Maison Adolphe, Inc., a Shop Women Delight In. A woman's attractiveness is of great importance to her—it demands her care! She, more than anyone else, knows that nothing heightens her elusive charm as much as being well groomed. Maison Adolphe is the smart beauty shop at 540 Peachtree street. It will please the heart of Milady who is fastidious of her personal appearance. The clientele of this shop is most exclusive. Monsieur Adolphe is an artist, and his skill is the result of experience both in Europe and America. Take a Motor Coach—A Wonderful Convenience. We enjoy things by comparison—comparison with some things of like nature; comparison with some other phase of life. Many of us when on a visit to New York in the past have often wished that we folks who live here were so fortunate as to have motor coaches in operation in our city to ride on in our daily jaunts here and there, either to business or to shop or just for the sheer pleasure, like the ones in use there. I have always simply adored riding the Fifth Avenue coaches while there myself, and whenever the weather permitted, I just couldn't resist going up "on top" and enjoying every minute of the ride. Now we have motor coaches, too, and can have the same pleasure we had there, and should avail ourselves of the opportunity to use them whenever possible.

Miss Elizabeth Curtis Gives Bridge-Luncheon. Miss Elizabeth Curtis was hostess at a delightful bridge-luncheon on last Saturday, February 13, at her home on Lexington avenue. Top scores were made by Miss Ernestine Collins and Miss Evelyn Ponder. Miss Jennie Alexander cut consolation. Miss Curtis was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. Raymond Curtis.

Dolly Madison Society Is Reorganized.

An enthusiastic group of children met Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Thomas C. Mell to reorganize the Dolly Madison Society Children of the American Revolution. Mrs. John Sage, state director, gave an interesting talk on the "Origin and Purpose of the Society." Plans were formulated for the organization meeting to be held on March 19. Application blanks were distributed by the organization president who urged that these papers be filled out at once as they must be in Washington March 1. Others wishing application papers please communicate with Mrs. Mell.

Psi Omega Dental Fraternity Given Dance at Druid Hills

One of the largest affairs of the season was the elaborate mid-year dance given by the active chapter of Psi Omega Dental Fraternity Thursday evening at the Druid Hills Golf club, the event complementing members of alumni chapter and freshmen of college.

The entire ball room was beautifully decorated in Psi Omega colors. Extending from the four corners of the room were the fraternity streamers giving a beautiful effect.

town take a coach. You will be delighted with the comfort and pleasure of your ride, and what a convenience—no searching frantically for parking space, as is usually the case when you use your own car and find it necessary to ride around looking for a place to park, and then often have to walk a long way besides to and from it—what an inconvenience, especially in inclement weather, or if you are shopping and have packages. Just go and wait a few minutes on the corner at a coach stop. Take a coach, and your problems will be solved. You won't have to wait long, either, for the schedule of the coaches is a splendid one, and when you have been accustomed to their use you will appreciate their service more each day.

Acquire the custom and learn the pleasure of using a coach when going to and from your home, business or to shop—and some fine sunny day go up "on top" and take a ride—enjoy the fresh air—see the brightening up of the grass and shrubbery on the lawns and parks of the city—enjoy the springtime and see the passing throng—it's interesting.

At Ludden & Bates—The Brunswick Panatope A Startling Invention

What an unusual musical instrument is the Panatope! It is the first purely electrical reproducing instrument known, and is indeed an astounding invention created by the foremost laboratories in the science of acoustics. The Brunswick Panatope is entirely new in principle and totally different from all previous methods of sound production. It is truly a marvelous musical instrument, and after having it demonstrated to you at Ludden & Bates, at 80 North Pryor street, you will agree with me it is all I say of it and more—it is a class by itself. I have never heard anything like it in tone production, it is simply amazing, and mere words are incapable to describe it.

It is also a beautiful instrument, and is finished in two-tone Adam brown mahogany or walnut, and as an attractive and artistic atmosphere to any room into which it is placed. Because of its electrical features it can be used as the "Loud Speaker" for your radio, and operating as it does from the light socket it eliminates the need for "B" batteries for it, too.

Do go and have Ludden & Bates demonstrate to you this marvel of the age. You will enjoy it, and be amazed by its clarity of tone, and will want one for your very own—it will be a perfect joy in your home—giving pleasure to your loved ones and friends.

Beautiful Apparel For the Kiddies. Such an array of exquisitely lovely things to wear—a most complete assortment for children from the little infant up to five years can be obtained at the Little Folks' Shop at 5 West Alabama street.

You will be delighted with your purchases from this shop, as they have everything for the toilette of little folks, and they are dainty, unusually distinctive and beautifully made.

Everything Good to Eat at Rogers. At this season of the year the housewife is wondering what new dishes she can serve on her menus that will be appetizing and that the family will enjoy. She will be pleased I am sure when she goes to Rogers to do her marketing, for there she will find many products of the highest quality and at the lowest of prices with which to concoct delicious dishes. No matter what her tastes are a courteous salesman will assist her in her purchases, and the selection of them will be a pleasure, and he will be delighted to offer suggestions.

Guests and members were entertained by Atlanta's stellar juvenile dancer, Tootsie Dunbar.

The chaperons were Dr. and Mrs. S. W. Foster, Dr. and Mrs. DeLos Hill, Dr. and Mrs. R. L. Dement, Dr. and Mrs. M. M. Forbes, Dr. and Mrs. Claude N. Hughes, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Conner, Dr. and Mrs. R. D. Robertson, Dr. and Mrs. R. T. Simpson, Dr. and Mrs. B. K. Vann, Dr. and Mrs. M. H. Varn.

What could be more appetizing for breakfast than cereal combined with raisins? There is such a selection of cereals offered that you can have a different one each morning. Treat your family to it tomorrow using whichever cereal you prefer—it's delicious and contains all the nutritive elements for health building.

The magic of the raisin is the magic of flavor—a flavor that tempts—in fact, any recipe to which they are added is made all the better, and is an improvement to countless dishes. Not until you have eaten cereals with raisins will you realize fully just how appetizing they are.

There are special prices on raisins, too, this week at Rogers, and they are "Sun-Maid Raisins," the best ever. Puffed Sun-Maid Raisins are in packages, and Sun-Maid Raisins (plain) are sold in bulk. Get a supply and have them on hand when you have need of them—they can be utilized in many ways, and are fine for not only cereals but for salads, pies, puddings, cakes, custards, icings, etc.

Just a few suggestions—you'll like them. I know—I do. Cook the desired quantity of Cream of Wheat together with sufficient Sun-Maid Seedless Raisins to flavor in a double boiler for an hour, and serve with thick cream.

Add Puffed Sun-Maid Raisins to ready-to-eat cereals and serve with cream and sugar.

A pudding made of one quart of boiling milk with two cups of Grape Nuts that have been previously cooked, five eggs, beaten separately, one cup of sugar, one and a half cups of Puffed Sun-Maid Raisins, and one teaspoon of vanilla. Beat whites stiff and add to other ingredients, and pour into a well-buttered baking dish and bake until firm. Serve with hard sauce. Sauce—cream sugar and one cup of A. B. C. butter, beaten to a cream and flavor with nutmeg.

Celebrate Washington's birthday—serve the family a cherry pie made with Mrs. Watson's Pie Crust and filled with Zenada Soup-Pitted Cherries. These cherries make a dandy pie, their flavor is fine, and you can't possibly fail to have a crisp, flaky pie if you use Mrs. Watson's Pie Crust. Just add water and roll out. Rogers has a special price on these products, too, and be sure when you are purchasing your supplies for the household buy these and make a pie—you will enjoy it so much you will have a cherry pie on your table often—the taste will linger.

French hats for formal wear are often feathered and aigrettes are still extremely smart as are burned goose or striped ostrich. * * * * *

Cape-back dresses are becoming more and more popular and short separate capes as well as long ones will be very good this spring. * * * * *

*A Poignant Tale of a Great Love That Came

IT WAS only little by little that the true tale became known—smoked out, as it were, by Hollywood's amazement. Even those who told it, told it with lifted eyebrows and tongue in cheek. But with a wistful eye, as though they would like to believe it. But while one may accept the casting out of the seven devils without losing social caste, who can afford to admit a similar occurrence within one's own circle and remain of the sophisticate?

And still, there remained to be explained the unexplainable and unbelievable thing that had happened.

For there could be no doubt about Eric Lawson's seven devils.

They were well known in Hollywood. Reckless, fascinating, lovable Irish devils they were, too, with an irresistible smile and a bit of a swagger. But devils—of drunkenness, of adultery, of indulgence, of lawlessness; and blasphemy and speculation.

As for the rest—it can be set down now, as Hollywood knows it and tells it, and you may judge for yourself.

"Are you trying to suggest," said Eric Lawson, darkly, "that I should sit next to Sylvia Vail at your dinner party?"

The woman at the big littered desk looked at him over her shoulder. Her little, pointed chin rested upon the shoulder of a kimono that was exactly the color of a ripe persimmon. It gave her, in the patchy sunshine that filled the room, the bizarre look of a piece of batik tapestry.

"O, Eric," she said. "I am so sorry. You'll simply have to. You have no idea how difficult these things are in Hollywood. It's going to be a perfectly abominable party, anyway."

"But I can not see," said Eric Lawson, and he strolled over to stand beside her, "that putting me next to Sylvia Vail is going to add to the gaiety of nations. I am one of those men who simply can not be trusted around liquor and women. You know that, Poppy."

"But Sylvia—"

"I know all about Sylvia. She is the prize good girl of Hollywood. She is the girl to whom you all point when you have any sort of scandal and people begin to insinuate that Hollywood is not as pure as it should be. But I do not like good women. They are so dull. And besides, Poppy, there is the liquor question. Women can drive me to liquor almost as easily as liquor can drive me to women. And I have a fearful premonition that Sylvia would eventually drive me to wood alcohol."

Poppy ran the hand that held a long, black cigarette holder through her short, blonde hair, leaving a trail of ashes.

"But, Eric," she said plaintively, "you can talk. And unless I put you between Sylvia and Mrs. Kahn, that side of the table will forever disgrace me as a hostess; it really will."

"I am thinking, too," said Eric Lawson, darkly, again, "of Miss Vail. You, Poppy, have no reputation to lose, which is a convenience. So you and Bob can afford to invite me to come here and stay while I'm in Hollywood making this—cinematic venture. But I ask you to contemplate the emotions of a girl like Sylvia Vail should she find herself sitting down to meal beside me. Because it will not be news to you, Poppy, darling, that I am not the sort of a young man mothers want for their daughters. Even the most broadminded mothers shudder when my name is mentioned. I know that, dear. It may wound me, but it is true. Now, as a hostess, can you possibly ask the Hollywood virgin to put up with me?"

"But, Eric, I must put Bob at the other end next to Diane, because she simply despises these mixed parties and she isn't a bit diplomatic, and she's apt to do or say something terrible and only Bob can keep her in a good humor. That's why he's still directing her. She doesn't care a darn about Mr. Kahn, even if he does own half the industry. Besides, Sylvia isn't a bit like that. She's adorable."

Eric Lawson did not speak. Just stood looking down at her, levelly, accusingly. A tall, slim young man in very old golf knickers of mixed tweed that were in their way a masterpiece, and a very woolly blue sweater of the kind that clings to the shoulders and fits snugly at the waist, and a plain white linen shirt with one of those very loud ties that should be a social error but that are so much affected right now by certain young men of fashion. His hair was very thick, and it grew in a tight crest with just one deep wave across it, and it was unbelievably bright and golden in the sunshine. A lazy blue eye he had, too, and black brows that drew down quickly, darkly, over them.

A most delightful and unregenerate young man.

Poppy looked up again at him. "Well, she is adorable," she protested to the look in his eyes. "You annoy me, Eric. It wouldn't hurt you if you were bored, just once. You always have things too much your own way in this world. It's bad for you—getting everything you want from me the way you do."

"Are you sorry about that?" said Eric Lawson, amiably and just a little pointedly. He could be very amiable and quite gentle upon occasions.

Poppy's cheek glowed and her eyelids fluttered.

"No," she shot it at him, "I'm not. But—I do think you might help me out of this. O, these stupid, insufferable parties! They're too dreadful. I have to ask all the important people in the company—or Mr. and Mrs. Kahn would be offended. When you come right down to it, it's really a trade dinner. I have to ask Sylvia Vail—the Kahns think she's marvelous. And what do I care about Mr. and Mrs. Kahn? I ask you that. And yet I am expected to go to all this work and trouble to entertain them when they come to Hollywood, just because my husband works for him. And Bob is such an angel. I do adore Bob, you know, Eric."

"So you always said," agreed Eric Lawson, a shade too politely.

"Society is so mixed in Hollywood," said Poppy, staring at the place cards before her. "What with most of the important people in the business end not being much like us and yet having to be entertained quite nicely, if you know what I mean. I've never fussed so over a table in my life, because you know, Eric, a dinner party depends entirely upon the way you seat your guests. If you don't believe me, you can look in any book on etiquette."

"But I do believe you," said Eric Lawson, "and that's why I thought that being a hostess and all and me just being out from New York this time for a few weeks, and not having been in pictures much lately because of liking the sound of my own voice, I thought you might put me next to you. I've been looking forward to that."

"Liar; you've seen me at dinner every night for a week. I know you want to sit next to Diane. You've had an eye on Diane ever since you came."

Poppy started to be furiously angry, and faltered and failed beneath that gorgeous impudent smile. "You are impossible," she said breathlessly, "you are, really. You're conceited and utterly immoral, and you drink too much all the time lately, and I really don't know why people put up with you at all."

"That's exactly why," said Eric Lawson in his most reasonable and charming voice, "I say I shouldn't be allowed to corrupt a young girl like Sylvia Vail."

"Well, you're not going to get out of it that way," said Poppy, beginning to write place cards with dash and determination. "Just for once, you're not going to get around me and have your own way. You're going to be smacked right down between Sylvia and Mrs. Kahn, and you can just darn well make the best of it."

"Poppy," said Eric sadly, his blue eyes quite tearful, "you force me to get drunk before dinner even begins. I could not sit down to that combination cold sober. I'm sure you see that."

II.

A long, low room with a luscious quality about it—in the soft fall of the transparent draperies, in the old silver bowl heaped high with peaches, in the satin quality of the Tiffany walls that mirrored the light. A long, narrow table banked frivolously and sweetly with spring flowers—creamy hyacinths and wistful violets and defiant daffodils spreading their skirts like tiny ballet dancers. Orange candles in amber candlesticks, battling the thick shadows and compromising upon a warm luster.

At the end of the room that single great window that gave upon a hill-side garden, where white irises danced in an artificial moonlight—a window so exquisite that it seemed not to be there at all, but to bring the garden close and fling it right at your feet.

Eric Lawson, casually sipping champagne from an amethyst glass, gazed about that room with a slow smile dawning.

"That room," he said, "is the expression of Poppy's better nature."

"Yes," said a voice, "and how nice it must be to have your better nature so ornamental."

A low voice, very sweet and soft, with something of the cello notes in it.

Eric Lawson turned to it in surprise. It was the first time the girl beside him had spoken to him, the first time he had looked at her. Mrs. Kahn had been telling him about her daughter's last baby.

The girl was wearing white. The corner of Eric Lawson's right eyebrow went up skeptically in face of that whiteness. Of course, Sylvia Vail would wear white. And it was actually white; neither nude, nor flesh, nor that hint of orchid that is the color of some women's bodies.

"I mean," said Sylvia Vail, with a shy, soft smile that was like the wing of a silver moth, "that it is nice just once in a while to see that a person's better nature can be attractive. Better natures are so unpopular nowadays."

Her eyes met his, winging their way with that shy, sweet appeal. And their she went a little whiter under his stare and sat very quiet and poised, her gaze returned to the white irises in the garden, gravely allowing him to stare at her.

Eric Lawson, as it happened, had never seen Sylvia Vail before. He had never seen her upon the screen. He was not fond of motion pictures. The stage had such loyalty as he could give any sort of work—play being his main business in life. The Broadway successes had kept him in New York for a couple of years, and he was always much too busy for such respectable business as seeing motion pictures. By strange coincidence, he had never even seen her photograph.

But the legend of Sylvia Vail was very well known to him. It was, in fact, one of his pet aversions. For there was a legend about Sylvia, though she was so young. He had heard it from his friends who had gone over to the silent drama permanently. It had been repeated even at the Lambs, where men who had met her were inclined to be a little sentimental about her beauty and her purity. And once he had been intensely amused by an article he had stumbled across dealing with this girl's integrity of character, her charity, the immaculate quality of her home life—an article which presented her rather as a young Maid of Orleans, white banner unfurled.

If there was one thing more than another that Eric Lawson found monotonous it was integrity of character.

So while he was dressing for dinner in his big, comfortable room upstairs, where Bob and Poppy had so graciously installed him, he had thought of Sylvia Vail with a long sigh of self-pity. He hated being bored! While he sat by the big window, fulfilling his last sad threat to Poppy by means of a pinched black bottle and a number of tall, sparkling white bottles, he thought of her humorously and rather insultingly, if the truth must be known. Eric Lawson did not respect women. It was the last thing in the world he desired to do, holding that he had never yet met the woman who did not prefer to be loved.

To the Chinese house boy who brought him a fresh bowl of ice he said seriously, "Thank God, I shall only have to be bothered with her for one evening. But the truth is, Li, though I would prefer that you didn't mention this to anyone, I rather hate wasting even one evening. Understand, Li, I don't object to her being a good girl. It's her own silly fault. The thing I dislike is her boasting about it. I do, really. She ought to have a little pride. All this tommyrot they talk about her. It annoys me. A vestal virgin, I suppose. Well, I am not old enough yet to be interested in vestals."

That amused him, and when he looked up his audience had silently departed.

Having finished the bottle, he stood adjusting his dinner coat before the long glass—a very distinctive figure with nothing about him to mark the passing of that bottle save a certain pallor beneath his tan. A very blonde young man, with that thick, waved crest of golden hair, who had oddly enough all the provocative charm, all the strongly marked features, all the dangerous polish that belong usually to a dark man.

A subtle man.

And yet, even then, in spite of the claw marks life had left about his mouth, there was something in that face that would have made a mother's heart beat with eternal hope. Perhaps it was the unexpected sweetness of that mouth. Or the yearning of the blue eyes, naked sometimes. Or perhaps it was only the chance resemblance that was to make such an amazing difference in his life—a chance and illusive resemblance to artists' visions of the Boy who stood confounding the doctors in the temple. A chance resemblance dependent upon the strong nose, and the shape of the face, and the wide eyes.

Standing there, Eric Lawson's thoughts were very far from anything and everything that this Man had said.

From his knowledge of women, which was considerable, he was picturing Sylvia Vail—a bit incoherently by that time. A middle aged madonna, after Bougereau. An Easter poster with a pot of lilies in her hand. A chromo saint of blue and gold and pink plaster. Pretty—but Eric Lawson feared no hell as he feared the hell of loving a pretty woman who had neither wit nor pride nor passion nor laughter nor tears.

And now he sat gazing at this slim dark girl, who let him stare while she gazed at the white irises. This patrician girl, with her smooth, silken dark head and her straight, proud body that was like nothing so much as a white rosebud. She seemed to be etched in throbbing black and white. For her skin was so very white; white with a little glow upon it. But her eyes were like black velvet, and her finely arched eyebrows, and that silken cloud of hair.

For just a moment as she sat there, backgrounded by the great window with its flood of artificial moonlight, she seemed to Eric Lawson not quite of this world.

No wonder there was a tradition about Sylvia Vail. No wonder she lived, as it were, upon a pedestal.

"You are Sylvia Vail?" said Eric Lawson at last, and something in his voice made them suddenly alone in that crowded room, where there was a great deal of noise and laughter, because Poppy's dinner party was going very well, with the aid of a good deal of champagne.

She looked back at him then, and her strange little mouth quirked solemnly at the corner. "O, yes," she admitted, "I am. I wonder why people always fail to believe it when they first see me?"

Her eyebrows had just the least distressed pucker between them.

"For one thing," said Eric Lawson, leaning toward her, "you have the cutest nose. I don't know you very well yet, Sylvia, but that nose does not belong with what I have heard about you. It's a very patrician nose, of course, with those curved nostrils and that sharp point. But it's also one of the most impudent noses I ever saw. And so straight."

That was one of the subtle things about Eric Lawson. He always complimented women upon their faults—their worst points. The things other men never complimented them about. That was why they always remembered him. Sylvia Vail, for instance, had been complimented to the point of nausea upon her hair and her eyes, that were like soft black velvet, and her complexion, and her tiny hands. But she had never before been complimented upon her nose which, as a matter of fact, was not a very good nose, being quite her worst feature.

"That's very nice of you," said Sylvia Vail, "but, personally, it has given me a good deal of trouble. It is a very hard nose to photograph. I have to introduce it very specially to cameramen. And it is a very hard nose to buy hats for. Because you always, in the end, have to buy hats that your nose will put up with, if you know what I mean."

"O, I know a great deal about hats," said Eric, reasonably, "and I am very glad to find that you wear one instead of a halo. But do not let us talk about hats. Let us talk about how lovely you are, Sylvia. I had no idea you would be like this. I do not think you are beautiful. I like more color in women. But you are lovely. I have the most tremendous desire to touch the back of your neck with my fingers. O, very reverently, of course—just the same you have no business to have a neck like that, with your reputation. It isn't sporting of you, Sylvia."

Sylvia Vail picked up the corsage of violets and lilies that lay beside her plate and pressed its coolness against her cheeks. Her heart had begun to beat desperately beneath the smooth folds of white net that held her young breasts. It had begun to beat in a frightened way, as it used to beat at night when she was a child and saw and heard strange things in the dark. Her skin was dewily warm, but for all that there were little chills advancing upon her from all points.

She was very frightened. There was something lawless about this man, something she did not understand. She knew very little of black pinched bottles and she had not learned, as some women have learned in dire anguish, to count the number of times the butler fills a certain glass. But even that would not have altogether accounted for this sudden feeling she had of danger, as though some unknown force menaced her pedestal. Though Sylvia Vail did not think of it as a pedestal, but only as her own security, and ideals, and standards.

For all her poise and her breeding, she was only a girl. No man had ever spoken to her in just this fashion. She had been protected by the Sylvia Vail legend. But this man was no respecter of legends, that was plain. His voice had become mixed with the drumming in her ears. And she was conscious of things about this man that she had never noticed about men before—the way his hair grew, so short and thick. The dark, level brows. That dominant, masculine nose.

In panic she fled back to the elderly gentleman upon her right, who had gone calmly on with an endless story about how he—and his millions—had happened to get into motion pictures.

"And it was all," he said, as Sylvia's dark, soft eyes winged back to him, "it all came about through their borrowing a dog of mine to work in a movie down on Long Island. Can you believe that?"

Sylvia nodded, and the old gentleman beamed at her. He thought her quite the softest and prettiest and sweetest girl he had ever seen. And afterwards, when people questioned him about Hollywood, he used to say, "I tell you, there's one girl in Hollywood that nobody can say one word against, and that's Sylvia Vail. No drinking or smoking or carrying on about her. Not much. I bet there's not a finer, sweeter girl in these United States than Sylvia Vail."

Thus did the legend continue to grow.

But later that evening the heroine of this legend could not flee again from Eric Lawson.

There were so many people in the big drawing room. And it was before them all that Eric Lawson said to her, leaning casually upon the back of her chair, "Miss Vail, will you come out on the balcony with me? I want to show you something. I assure you it is quite safe. They can hear you easily if you should scream."

Everybody laughed at that. And there was nothing for Sylvia Vail to do but laugh and go with him. It was her secret horror that she should be called a prig.

"Shut your eyes," he said at the head of the small flight of stairs. And he took her hand. Her own small white hand that melted into his, so cold it was, and his so dry and hot. "Now open them."

Below them, for Poppy had built her house upon a hilltop, lay the strangest panorama. Purple, rounded hilltops, crashing up like islands through an ocean of fog, with here and there a faint light, like a ship at sea.

"I like that," he said. "I knew you'd like it. Besides, I wanted you alone." Then, in the silence, "Sylvia."

But he did not say it to her. He was still looking at the little pools of mist in the valley below them. And in that moment he looked young, as young as Sylvia herself, so young that it was almost impossible to believe of him all the wicked and violent stories people loved to tell about his past.

"You have a lovely name," he said, to the mists.

"It was my mother's," said Sylvia softly, "and my grandmother's, too."

Slowly he took her in his arms, all her slim, young, white rosebud body, held as a cup holds wine.

Sylvia Vail looked up at him. She did not struggle. She could not. Happiness chained her there. He knew that. She felt he knew it. Just as he knew that he, among men, might kiss her lips for the first time.

She would not deny him, and yet she felt that if she did she should all but die of it. For that is not the way that love should come to a Sylvia Vail, nor the way her first kiss should be given. Nor, for that matter, was Eric Lawson the man to whom she should give it. That lovely thing, the first kiss of a young girl, that has been held sacred and so has become priceless.

He tilted her head back until her face lay before him like a purple and white pansy upon a plate.

Made as though he would kiss her. But did not. There was a sound, half sob, half oath. A drunken sound, it may be. And Sylvia was alone upon the balcony.

Poppy saw her come back down the little staircase alone, one hand just touching the iron balustrade. She looked quite tall and rigid and young, like a queenly child.

"Where's Eric?" said Poppy, hurriedly.

She was a little concerned that Eric might have been rude to Sylvia. He could be so rude, so cruel, so contemptuous. Poppy knew that.

"I don't know," said Sylvia, gravely.

"I hope he's gone to bed," said Poppy, yawning frankly. "He carries

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a bookkeeper in an office where also works a pretty office girl. Yesterday we had an argument and she called me a "snake." Wasn't that awful? Truly yours—I. PUSHAPEN.

Answer—Don't take it to heart. It sounds worse than what she probably meant. You see, you are a bookkeeper and she called you a "snake" because you are a bookkeeper, meaning that you are on "adder."

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I notice at all the bathing resorts that in the last five years moths have almost entirely disappeared. Can you account for them staying away from beach resorts? Yours truly—C. DERCHES.

Answer:—The reason moths stay away from bathing beaches nowadays, is because of the women's bathing suits. The moths realize they would starve to death.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—According to my history teacher in school, Christopher Columbus took a couple of schooners and discovered America. Don't you think that is wonderful? Sincerely—IZZIE LYING.

Answer:—It was wonderful in those days but if Columbus lived today and took a couple of schooners of the kind of stuff they are making now, there is no telling what he would discover.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a man 33 years of age. I am a manager of the hair net department in a 5c and 10c store. I rode my bicycle way out in Dear Mr. Wynn:—I have been in America for the past six months without earning one dollar. I am an artist, having studied in France and Italy. I am an expert on portraits of women having made a specialty of painting ladies' faces. Can you tell me why I cannot get at least one job? Yours truly—MINNIE ATTURE.

Answer:—You are in the wrong country. In the United States you will find that all the ladies paint their own faces.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I bought a horse yesterday at a sale and drove him home. He kept stopping every few minutes. Today I took him out again and he did the same thing. What do you think is wrong with him? Sincerely—KEN TUCKKIE.

Answer:—He is probably deaf and is afraid he won't hear you say "whoa" so he just stops to listen.

the country last Sunday. A wild cow chased me for two miles. I found out later the cow was mad because she lost her calf, but, why did she chase me? Yours truly—I. NEVERSHAVE.

Answer:—The cow most likely took you for the calf.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am filling out an application for a job as a letter carrier. One of the questions is: "How far is it from Boston to Tucson, Arizona? What answer shall I give? —WILL I. B. WON.

Answer:—Tell the government if that is to be your route you don't want the job without an airplane.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a woman 43 years of age and the only offer of marriage I have ever had was last night. I met a fellow at a party and he was drunk. He proposed marriage to me. He seems all right but I told him to sober up and then ask me to marry him. Did I do right? Sincerely—I. M. HOMELY.

Answer:—Yes and no. He may not want you when he's sober.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a boy nine years of age. My Sunday school lesson last week was all about Adam in the Garden of Eden. I noticed that nothing was said about Adam as a baby. I spoke to mother about it and she says the reason Adam was never a baby was because there was no one to nurse him. Do you believe that? Yours truly—I. M. THINKING.

Answer:—Next week.

On Imperfect English

DOUBT if any new book, darin' criminal, sex play, or any great discovery, is discussed more by those who discuss such things, than are th' men an' women who swell around murderin' th' king's English. While they swing around in th' best sets, an' seem t' be successful ever' way they're knocked on all occasions. T' be sure they're not harmin' anybuddy, an' manage t' make 'emselves understood, an' 'll give you anything they've got, yet they should pick up a few points on grammar from those they drill with. Lots o' times folks git credit fer bein' intellectual 'cause they're quiet an' thoughtful lookin', but th' real truth is they don't know how t' express 'emselves correctly an' they take no chances. Often folks are called dull an' stupid because they refuse t' blurt out an' git knocked. "Oh, ther comes Mrs. Jones. Let's git her t' talk, I want you t' hear her," someone says, or "Now we'll have some fun, fer here comes Col. What's his name. Git his grammar when he talks," someone else 'll say. However, what Mrs. Jones an' Col. What's his name don't know about th' commonest rules o' grammar don't seem t' hold 'em back. Nothin's complete without 'em. Th' best circles are overrun with folks that say "I ain't" an' "He don't" an' "It's me" an' "You wuz" an' "Can't hardly," as it is full o' folks who try t' dance, an' pat your bare back, an' cheat at cards, an' tell stockyard stories when lit' up, however, that don't excuse you fer not knowin' how t' pass th' time o' day correctly. Ther's many a belle on th' high wave o' popularity that says et fer ale, an' there's many a handsome sheik settin' 'em wild who says "I hain't saw." I dare say ther's many finished grammarians who can't make a livin', many who can't make a rhubarb pie. But folks who are able t' own 8-miles-per-gallon cars, an' spend thousan's fer blue spruces, an' personal adornments, could take a couple hours off once a month an' learn t' express 'emselves correctly in conversations o' less than a minute. One kin contemplate a few things he's liable t' say an' drill himself on 'em. Figure out a few little pleasantries an' git 'em down pat. Most o' th' big, glarin', 10-sheet mistakes in English that are constant-fingers o' two hands, leavin' two fingers free t' hold a cigarette. They kin be corrected in two sittin's, or in five letters from any responsible correspondence school, an' th' outlay is triflin'. In long conversations lastin' th' greater part o' two hours errors o' speech are apt t' fly thick an' fast. One would really have t' go t' school agin an' begin all over t' qualify fer a long conversation. But there's no need o' allowin' yourself t' be drawn int' long, weighty, intellectual discussions. There's allus a way out if you're resourceful. It's th' silly, little, commonplace observations that we can't sidestep, an' they don't amount t' much an' are soon over with, an' we should strive t' prepare ourselves fer 'em. We all should know a few little simple rules o' grammar just t' set off our clothes an' social standin'. Some folks seem t' hide an' waylay th' king's English jest t' murder it.

Exaggeration

—BY—
PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

DISCUSSING the difference between English and American platform methods the other day with a distinguished English statesman, this man said to me, referring to an address he delivered in Albert hall, London: "There were twelve thousand people there. Of course in America you would have said that there were thirty thousand in the audience. But actually there were only twelve thousand." It was an inconsequential remark, not calculated to ridicule or jeer at us, but nevertheless it comes pretty close to classifying us as liars. And yet to the impartial observer from abroad, the man who comes here without any ax to grind, but merely to look at the manifold complexity and dizzy speed of American life, there must seem a good deal of futile and peurile exaggeration and generalizing in our statements.

For instance, whenever I see a picture in the paper with the caption: "Most Beautiful Girl in the World," or "This Young Lady Possesses the Most Perfect Back in the World," a disturbing doubt enters my mind. I will not deny that the miss in question is often of incomparable pulchritude, that her smile would melt a chunk of granite and her appearance send even King Solomon into ecstasies of delight. But "the most beautiful" is a broad statement. How do they know she has the most perfect back? Have they seen them all? Isn't there many a rose blushing unseen? May there not be a little girl teaching school on a backwood concession, who has Venus, Helen of Troy and Cleopatra backed off the map for looks? Who knows?

Or take the statement of the sporting columns that such and such a bruiser is the strongest guy in the world. He may be and again he may not be. Perhaps way over in the lumber camps of Montana there is an uncouth, lumbering giant, who lugs around logs with the brute strength of a horse, who could make putty out of the bruiser if the rules were dispensed with.

The other day New York was swept by the worst blizzard in eight years. That is what the papers tell us. Look back at the files of the papers and you'll see that last year round the end of January Gotham had the worst blizzard in ten years. Perhaps the two statements are not so contradictory when analyzed and they may seem quite in the order of possibility. Still it looks as if we want to go from strength to strength and from achievement to achievement.

"Fifty Thousand People Suffered With the Cold," said the headlines. Fifty thousand? Nobody asked me if I were cold. Had I been asked I would have answered, yes. Would that make fifty thousand and one or was I included in the original estimate? I think it would have been closer to the truth if it had been said that 100,000 had been suffering with the cold.

We say we have the tallest buildings in the world and we have. We say we have the greatest per capita wealth of any people on earth, and there is no doubt we have. Though I am not speaking for myself in this matter. The silliest word in the language is this per capita, anyway. The wealth possessed by two individuals, let us say, amounts to one million. But one actually has $25 in the bank and the other has nine hundred, ninety-nine thousand nine hundred and seventy-five safely locked away in gold-bearing securities. Yet their per capita wealth is $500,000.

We have the fastest railways, the finest automobiles, the biggest theaters. Our girls have the loveliest legs, according to the physical culturists, and the noisiest merry-go-rounds. We have the best-equipped hospitals are indeed a fortunate people.

There are, of course, a number of things that we haven't got. And sometimes the suspicion may enter one's mind, if we do not so glibly enumerate all our possessions just to gloss over the absence of other more vital things. At least a stranger may think so.

We are, it seems to me, intoxicated with our material predominance. Sometimes we are told that we are worshippers of Mammon and the all mighty dollar. Still gradually we are beginning to realize that the dollar cannot buy everything. Look what our wealthiest people are doing. There comes a stage in their lives when they turn their minds and energy to spiritual and cultural values.

They have come to realize that life and the enjoyment of life means something more than smoothly-sliding lockers in steel vaults. How often do we not hear a millionaire bewail the fact that he only went to school till he was sixteen, that he did not learn French or German or Latin.

Surfeited with the world's goods we develop a spiritual hunger. And that spiritual hunger is really inherent in every human being, but we feed it so often with unwholesome sweetmeats, with false notions and false creeds. A spiritual hunger manifests itself with an intense desire for knowledge. Not of machines and cement and electricity, but of nature and the world and God.

Glimpses of Hollywood

—BY—
ROSALIND SHAFFER

VALENTINO brought with him on his return to Hollywood a prize horse which was due to arrive here the day following Rudy's arrival. The United Artists office in New York wired Valentino's press agent here: "Horse will arrive nine thirty via Santa Fe—have pictures taken in all poses."

Valentino's local "exploiter" wired back:

"Horse refuses to pose—what to do."

Meanwhile the Santa Fe wired Rudy:

"Horse arrived nine thirty. Advise as to disposition."

Rudy wired the Santa Fe:

"Disposition is terrible."

Santa Fe wired back:

"What shall we do?"

Rudy wired:

"Give him a bag of oats and tell him to sit down and wait."

Santa Fe wired:

"Horse has run away—what shall we do?"

Rudy wired:

"Imagine yourself a runaway horse in a strange city, then go there and get him."

Santa Fe: "Have found him."

Rudy: "Thanks. Will send for horse to be my guest at dinner. Thanks for the buggy ride."

As all this wiring took place between the hours of nine and ten, the excitement was terrific both at the Valentino mansion, the railroad station and the publicity office. Before it was all over most of the United lot was in an uproar of laughter.

THE preceding evening twenty guests attended Pola Negri's party for Valentino, welcoming him home to Hollywood. With Valentino at the party were his brother and his brother's wife who accompanied him home from Europe. Mr. and Mrs. George Ullman, business manager for Valentino, also were among the guests as were Agnes Ayres, George Fitzmaurice, Sidney Olcott and Manuel Reachi.

It is freely reported about that Pola seized her party as an opportunity to mention an engagement to Rudy, but neither would make any statement about it on the morning after. Before Valentino's departure for Europe accounts of the attraction between them were general.

Valentino has not returned to the Whitley Heights home with the terraced gardens, the aviary, the purple and gold bedroom and scarlet and black living room designed by Natacha Rambova as an exotic background for their married life. He has gone to the new home in Beverly Hills where there is little to remind him of the romance that has gone.

SIX thousand people struggled through the mob at the doors of the new Shrine auditorium here on Thursday night and paid ten dollars a struggle for downstairs seats to attend the largest and most gorgeous of the now famous yearly Wampas ball.

Sid Grauman, showman extraordinary, was in charge of a long and spectacular program in the theater which featured the presentation of this year's crop of Wampas stars. Charlie Murray acted as master of comedy, Bert Lytell as master of drama and Lew Cody as master of hearts.

Walter Pidgeon, Norma Talmadge's last leading man, recruited from musical comedy, sang some selections with much effect. Doraldina, in five thousand dollars worth of extra selected and sun cured hay designed by Claire West, offered her original and fame claiming dance, "La Rumba," which first made her famous.

FLASHES from new pictures were shown, including bits from "Ben Hur," some of Norma Talmadge's "Kiki," a spectacular bit from Buchowetzki's "The Midnight Sun," with a group of Muscovite singers, dancers and musicians used in the film; the fashion show from Colleen Moore's last picture, "Irene," and an episode from Lasky's "The Wanderer."

The actual presentation of the Wampas stars for 1926 was unique. The setting was Colleen Moore's drawing room with Colleen herself acting as hostess at tea, greeting the stars as they entered.

A gold cup "for screen achievement" to be awarded to the Wampas star who accomplishes most in the year was to be formally presented to Eleanor Boardman, but as Eleanor was not able to be present due to her trip east the cup was received for her by Sally O'Neil and John Crawford, from the M.-G.-M. studio where Eleanor is under contract.

The baby stars for this year are: Dolores Costello, Janet Gaynor, Dolores Del Rio, Vera Reynolds, Mary Brian, Fay Wray, Sally O'Neil, Joan Crawford, Mary Astor, Sally Long, Joyce Compton, Marceline Day and Edna Marion. These girls were selected by the Wampas as the girls most likely judging from past performances to become stars during 1926.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, with three friends, played a game of Badminton on the stage as one of the features of the ball. Doug has slightly changed the game to an American version.

Clyde Cook, as a slouching, sly-stepping sailor, had much applause for his eccentric dancing act which was replete with mechanical squeaks and slips.

Stars of the cinema world were introduced from the stage in the most natural possible setting. An "opening night" at the Hollywood Egyptian theater was shown, the scene being the street and entrance to the famous Egyptian lobby which was built right on the stage.

Lew Cody stood at the curb of the stage street and called out the names of the stars as they alighted in turn from their limousines which drove up on the wide stage and deposited them where the footlights cast full effulgence on their wonderful gowns and wraps.

The stars bowed and disappeared into the theater entrance at the back of the stage. Even the Arab with his long musket who paces the roof of the show house, was shown on the stage pacing in his place along the roof.

Cecil DeMille offered the crowning spectacle of the program in his "Night on the River Volga" from his new picture "The Volga Boatman." The famous song was sung by a chorus of two hundred and fifty voices as the actors from the picture slowly struggled under the burden of the heavy boat they were dragging upstream.

Three thousand persons remained to dance in the enormous ballroom and to dine on the serpentine and confetti strewn balconies. Five orchestras supplied music for the dancers and at 3 o'clock a weary crowd climbed into the taxis, Rolls-Royces and Fords of Hollywood and went home to snatch a bit of sleep or to attend several breakfast parties held afterwards.

IN GRIM contrast to the evening's festivities at the Wampas ball the funeral of Barbara LaMarr was held the following noon from a funeral chapel with the same faces that had graced the party the night before conspicuous among an enormous throng that came for a last tribute to the "too beautiful girl."

In a bower of roses and orchids the silvery coffin lay open for all to get a last glimpse of the rare beauty contained therein. At her head were pale yellow roses from Paul Bern and beside them lay red roses from Ramon Novarro. A basket of orchids from Douglas and Mary stood nearby. In the chapel were a profusion of jonquils, white lilies, roses of all sorts, violets from a 12-year-old child with a last "fan letter," lilies of the valley from a carpenter, violets from a shop girl and a single red rosebud from a child which she carried in her hand.

The crowd broke the ropes and police officers on horseback were needed to restore order. Pallbearers were Bert Lytell, Al Green, Tom Gallery, Henry Hathaway, Henry Victor and R. D. Knickerbocker. Honorary pallbearers were Paul Bern, John McCormick, Colleen Moore, Zasu Pitts, Bessie Love, Gladys Brockwell, Marshall Neilan, Blanche Sweet, Milton Cohen, Gloria Swanson and Pola Negri.

By coincidence none of the men whose names had been linked with Barbara's as admirers or husband were in Hollywood for her last hours or for her funeral.

INSTALLMENT IV.

Mr. Crayton's "Personal."

FOR several days after Mr. Crayton's shocking disappearance and unrepentant return from an unexplained absence of six days in Paris, a frigid formality prevailed in the family circle.

Whenever he looked up suddenly he was certain to catch his wife's hurt, accusing eye fixed upon him. He affected not to notice that it was accusing and hummed merrily, as though all was well. Then she would sigh heavily and leave the room.

For the first few days Count Pierre de Barsac was wisely kept in the background, but gradually he was allowed to ooze in from time to time until at last Mr. Crayton found him as much a daily fixture as the furniture.

"I tell you, Virginia, this has got to stop," he announced. "If you are thinking of marrying this—this parasite, you've got another think coming. I won't have it. He's after your money."

"Father, you may not realize it, but every time you speak that way you are insulting me. Am I so homely and unattractive that you can imagine no one marrying me except for money?"

"These birds don't marry Americans except for money," he exploded. "Just intimate to him that I will disinherit you the minute you marry him, and you'll see how long he continues to clutter up your vicinity."

"Nonsense. He's a charming gentleman and he seems to think I am charming. I'm convinced he would marry me if I didn't have a cent."

"All right, try it. Tell him you'll be disinherited—or, better still, I'll tell him."

She started.

"Father! You'll do nothing of the sort. You wouldn't dare!"

"All right. Just keep on and you'll see what I'll dare. The question is, have I any say in this family or not? Neither your mother nor yourself pays the slightest attention to my wishes." He paused for breath. "As long as I put up all the cash, I'm going to have something to say."

"You are making yourself ridiculous, father. What is our family?—middle class Americans suddenly grown rich. Count de Barsac comes from an old family. His ancestors were gentlemen when ours were paupers. Why should he wish to marry into the Crayton family unless it is for real love?"

"Ha, ha!" laughed Mr. Crayton. "Ha, ha, and then some!" He was most provocative, and Virginia, tears in her eyes and too angry to trust her voice, rushed from the room.

"You'll drive the girl to do something desperate, William, warned Mrs. Crayton.

"She'll drive me to do something desperate," retorted her husband angrily.

"I can't understand your unreasoning hostility to Count de Barsac. He's the most courteous gentleman I've ever met—no wonder Virginia is interested. His manners make our youths at home seem positive bores."

"Of course he has manners! That's his stock in trade. Tell me what else you know about him."

"Why, he seems to be very well known here. We met him at the American ambassador's reception. Why will you persist in being so suspicious?"

He arose.

"I'm going down to change our steamer reservations. We'll leave next Saturday if I can get accommodations!"

"We'll do nothing of the sort. We haven't half finished the things we've come over to see and do. If you'd only take a little interest in the art galleries and such you would enjoy yourself more. But no; rather than throw away your cigar you wait outside while Virginia and I go in. No wonder you're peevish!"

"I tell you, I'm not peevish. I'm mad; mad clear through, that's what I am." And as he strode toward the door she called after him, "Don't you dare change our sailing date. We won't leave Paris until the time we planned, six weeks from now."

He looked back with a strange expression in his eyes. She had never seen it before, and she was disturbed.

Mr. Crayton's course led directly to a newspaper office, where he inserted this "personal:"

"Will the American gentleman who recently disappeared for six days communicate at once with"—he thought for a moment, started to sign it "Madeline," but, uncertain as to the spelling, changed it to "Marie."

This "personal" was called to the attention of Mrs. Crayton the next day by a thoughtful friend, and when she reached the hotel in a towering frame of mind, Mr. Crayton had again disappeared.

Mr. Crayton's second disappearance did not alarm his wife. Alarm is not the word. It was a far different emotion that seethed within her ample outlines.

Here was a disgusting "personal" in the paper, and close upon this shameful communication came his second disappearance. It was time something was done.

"I think father is behaving in this outrageous way just to make you want to start home. He is determined to break off my—well, affair, or whatever it is, with Pierre. He's trying to force us to leave Paris."

"But this 'personal'! It evidently means him—and this Marie. Who is she?" Mrs. Crayton began to weep hysterically. "To think that after all these years—" she sobbed.

"Don't fret, mother. If he wants to make himself a ridiculous dupe of some designing creature, it serves him right. He'll wake up to the fact that it's his money she's after."

This remark precipitated a fresh outburst of tears from her mother strangely out of harmony with the dark frown that began to gather on her brow.

"Do you really think he'd be so—so utterly conscienceless as to do such things—just to force us to leave before we're ready?"

"I certainly do. Father's a resourceful party. If he can't gain his ends by one way, he'll try another."

Mrs. Crayton walked back and forth. Then she reached a decision.

"Well, I suppose he's safe wherever he is. We'll let him stay until he gets ready to come back, and when he does return"—her voice became taut

Mr. Crayton's course led directly to a newspaper office.

"Tell him you'll be disinherited—or, better still, I'll tell him."

"I think I'll have a plan that will put an end to these outrageous goings on."

Denied Even the Isadora Duncan's Poet Husband Kills Himself Just as He Said but Fails to Write With His Blood That Promised Masterpiece.

The late Serge Yessenin and his dancing bride photographed on arriving on their honeymoon visit to America

IN A STUDIO in New York's Greenwich Village not so very long ago a young man sat perched on a table reciting a poem to a group of men and women who were sprawled about him in the unconventional attitudes which people are wont to assume when such a bohemian party as this has progressed until nearly dawn.

The young man's face was flushed with wine and stronger drink, his speech was rather thick, but still he was able to make his voice ring out through the smoke-filled air. And the dramatic fire he put into his words, the impassioned gestures with which he emphasized them showed how intensely he felt the ideas they conveyed.

He was a very boyish looking person, smooth of face and towseled of hair. He wore an extraordinarily loose, flowing coat and his trousers were baggier than any of the "balloons" which some of the college boys now wear.

This young man was Serge Yessenin, the Russian husband of Isadora Duncan, who had recently arrived from Europe with his bride for a honeymoon visit to America. The poem he was reciting was of his own composition—one that had never been published and that he never repeated except when he was sure of such a sympathetic audience as he had here.

The last line of the poem was spoken. The poet reached for the full glass he liked to have always at his elbow, drained it at a swallow and held it out to be filled again. His hearers burst into enthusiastic applause.

"Your masterpiece!" cried someone. "You have never done anything better. You will never produce a greater poem if you live to be a thousand. It is a superb, an incomparable specimen of the poet's art."

"But no, brother," said Serge Yessenin, "you are wrong. My masterpiece is yet to be written. It is locked in my heart—and death holds the key. Only as life is leaving me, only as I am breathing my last can I give it to the world. But that will be time enough, for it will be something lovers of wisdom and beauty will never forget, something that will make my name live forever."

And then Serge Yessenin proceeded to tell how he planned some day to kill himself as Petronius, the famous dandy and wit of ancient Rome, did.

Petronius, as students of Roman history will recall, slit gashes in his wrists and let some blood out. Then he bound them up, went out into the streets and jested merrily with his friends. Presently he let more blood run out, and again he reset the bandages and told more sparkling anecdotes.

Finally, he retired to his luxurious marble bath, called all his best friends about him and, again removing the bandages from his gashed wrists, immersed himself in the water.

As the water grew pink he entertained his friends with the most fascinating monologue they had ever heard, even from his eloquent lips. As it turned red his fancy became more wonderful, his satire more cutting, the flash of his wit more brilliant.

At last, when the water was a deep crimson, Petronius faltered in the middle of one of his exquisitely phrased thoughts, gave a little gasp and was dead.

Now Serge Yessenin planned, as he explained to his friends that evening, to go Petronius one better—to improve on his novel method of self-destruction. The wit and wisdom Petronius uttered as his life blood ebbed away remained only in the and could be released only at the approach of death.

It was four years ago that Yessenin sat in the Greenwich Village studio and described his grim plan for ending his life and at the same time attaining immortal literary fame. After that he repeated it many times to friends here and in Europe. The discussion of his self-destruction and the great poem which was to be born as he died became his monomania.

"It is my promise to the world," he would say over and over again. "I shall keep it—you will see."

But, as the cable dispatches from Leningrad the other day revealed, unhappy Serge Yessenin was finally able to keep his promise only in part. He committed suicide there by cutting his wrists as Petronius had done in Rome centuries ago. He failed, however, to achieve the literary triumph he coveted and which would have gone far to atone for his ill-spent life. He disappointed the expectations of his friends in death just as he always had while he lived.

After he had been locked in his room in the Hotel England in Leningrad for forty-eight hours the hotel manager broke in the door. There lay Yessenin, dead in the pool of blood that had flowed from his gashed wrists.

The first police reports had it that no poem, no farewell message of any kind was found in the suicide's room. Later on, however, some acquaintances of the dead man came forward with a crumpled bit of paper containing a few halting lines of incoherent verse scrawled in what appeared to be blood. They insisted that this had been found by the side of the corpse and that it must be the "masterpiece" which Yessenin had promised the world and which he penned as he lay dying.

These verses are a wild, rambling farewell to some woman the writer had loved and it was argued that they were Yessenin's good-by to Isadora Duncan. In spite of their bitter quarrels and their separation the poet and the dancer remained very fond of each other.

But those who know Yessenin and memory of his friends and, being never written down, were soon lost to the world.

As Serge Yessenin's life flowed from his wrists he planned to dip his pen in his blood and put on paper the triumphant masterpiece of which he had just spoken—the poem which must remain hidden in his heart as long as more of life lay ahead of him his work best doubt very much if he ever wrote this jargon. If he did they say he must have been so crazed by vodka or the delirium of disease that he did not know what he was doing.

The verses are of no literary value, and in no way do they suggest even the least creditable of Yessenin's previous poetic efforts. To claim that this tawdry fragment of verse is the "masterpiece" the poet had promised

Triumph He Sought By Death

Isadora Duncan and her late husband, the Russian who committed suicide by slashing his wrists just as the famous Petronius did in Rome centuries ago the world—the great poem that was to be released from his heart at the approach of death—is, according to many of his best friends, to make his tragedy an even more sordid bit of mockery than it already is.

Not in recent years has the world seen a more pitiable waste of human talents of the highest order than in the case of Serge Yessenin. Eminent critics pronounce some of the verses he managed to produce in his rare moments of sober sanity real masterpieces of the poetic art. Had he been able to conquer the drunkenness and other vices which enslaved him he could undoubtedly have won fame not only as a poet but as a painter, a sculptor and a musician.

But Serge Yessenin lacked the strength of character to attain the great honors that might have been his. Even in his death he was cheated of the weird triumph his drugged brain had planned.

When the poet fell in love with Isadora Duncan and married her, his friends hoped and believed that this would prove the salvation of his genius. But, as they soon saw, love and marriage were as powerless as other influences had been to free him from the appetites that enslaved him and that frequently transformed him into a raging beast.

Had it not been for Isadora Duncan's growing stoutness very probably she and Yessenin would never have met and he might have died quite unknown to the world outside of Russia. When her increasing avoirdupois robbed her of much of her old-time popularity in Paris and London, the dancer went to Russia to dance and conduct a dancing school which the soviet government helped her establish.

The Russian people had long been mourning the loss of all their famous ballet dancers whom the revolution had swept away. They were therefore quite ready to overlook Isadora's stoutness and welcomed her with open arms.

At one of the numerous parties given in her honor she met Serge Yessenin, called the "poet laureate of the revolution." He was hardly more than a schoolboy and badly nourished, as so many Russians were just then. He indulged in terrible drunken sprees and suffered from epileptic fits. It was hard to say which affected him the more unpleasantly.

But middle-aged Isadora Duncan, with all her romantic and cultured background, feel deeply in love with this dissipated and diseased young poet, and he with her. They were quickly married in the easy way the new regime in Russia had made possible and, when the soviet authorities failed to supply Isadora with the money they had promised to keep her school going, they left Russia together.

They came to America for what was perhaps the stormiest visit any pair of newlyweds ever paid this country. When Serge was sober he was completely under the domination of his masterful wife, obeying her orders like a dutiful schoolboy. But when he was full of vodka or brandy or champagne—as he was most of the time, even in prohibition America—he was entirely beyond her control.

On one or two occasions the dancer was obliged to cancel dancing engagements because of black eyes which her husband was said to have given her during one of his insane sprees. In New York one night he smashed all the furniture in his hotel room and hurled it out of the window. Before he was subdued and the panic started by his outbreak was quieted the police reserves had been called out and an alarm of fire turned in.

Serge Yessenin in his studio where he busied himself with painting, sculpture and music when he was not writing poetry and drinking vodka

Yessenin was always penitent after these sprees and his wife indulgently forgave him. But when, after their return to Paris he behaved so insanely that none of her friends and patrons dared visit her studio, Isadora Duncan reluctantly decided that the limit had been reached and hired a half-dozen husky guards to escort her husband back to Russia.

"He is another Edgar Allan Poe," said the dancer sadly, "but I can't have him around any longer. There is too much of the devil in him."

Since the parting of this strangely matched pair of lovers there were repeated rumors of their divorce, but this was not the case. Isadora Duncan continued to love her "mad child of genius" and to sing his praises as the greatest poet of all time. If he had lived and managed to stay sober for any reasonable length of time, it is very probable they would have been reunited.

The tragic end of the man she pronounced "the one grand passion of my life" is the latest of a long series of misfortunes that have overtaken the dancer who revolutionized the dancing art and made her bare legs and twinkling toes famous in all the great capitals of the world.

Her children—the boy and girl whose fatherhood has never been revealed—were drowned in the Seine. Her wealth is gone and there remains to her only a pitiful little remnant of the fame she once had.

What might have been one of the most brilliant careers any woman ever knew has been wrecked by bad luck and bad management and, perhaps most of all, by the persistent attacks on the institution of marriage, which turned so many people everywhere bitterly against her.

The drowning of Isadora Duncan's children aroused great sympathy for her in spite of her attacks on an institution which is held in great respect in this country. Her fellow countrymen were willing to forgive her and give her the financial support she needed if she would change her views about marriage, but this she stubbornly refused to do.

She would probably never have gone through a marriage ceremony with Yessenin had she not feared that unless she did she would be refused admission to this country. And her need of money just then made a visit to America imperative.

Among Us Georgians

—BY—
W. C. WOODALL

WITH the ancient Greeks the love of proportion was such a passion that they even laid off the city of Athens according to an exact geometrical design. In this respect the city of Athens reminds one of Atlanta—it is so different.

The problem at the recent convention of the American Ceramic society in Georgia was to find a high official of the Central of Georgia railway.

In its vast kaolin deposits Georgia has a wealth of "white gold" that will make its gold mining returns of the old, gone days resemble the thirty cents now so celebrated in circles of vivid metaphor.

And Georgia was once a gold miner of quite respectable proportions, too. The city of "Auraria," up in the Gainesville section, had a population of 15,000 at the height of the excitement. Mostly transients—but population, just the same.

Like the death of Mark Twain, the number of Atlantans now "somewhere south of Jacksonville" is considerably exaggerated.

Ivan Allen, of Atlanta, will get to be a globe trotter if he doesn't look out. When we called at his office in January he was in Washington. When we gave him an encore early in February he was in Panama.

Woodrow Wilson's law office was in the Ivan Allen-Marshall building, by the way—a commodious, comfortable office on the second floor, in the corner where Marietta and North Forsyth meet. For years Mr. Allen occupied this historic room as his own private office.

Arthur E. Ittner, of Albany, is the "Little Arthur" of the South Georgia contracting fraternity. He's six-feetsome, and is built latitudinally in proportion to his longitude, so that it takes a good pair of scales to transact business with him.

Classic architecture, an expert at the recent ceramic convention solemnly assured his audience, was strictly on the square.

Atlanta needed more hotels and so Biltmore is the explanation of the great public palace out on West Peachtree.

More talk about Georgia clay! But this time not about the slick clay roads, one is thankful to say. Georgia's magnificent clay deposits have attracted the attention and captivated the imagination of the country's ceramic chieftains. And now nobody can find things too nice to say about our clay, which is in agreeable contrast to the comments made by tourists this winter.

Georgians, returning from Florida, seem more impressed with the greatness and possibilities of Georgia than ever before. They gained both perspective and vision when they went a few hundred miles away.

J. K. Orr, of Atlanta, is of the do-it-now type. Once, when writing a speech, there came to mind a Latin phrase which he wanted to use if it meant what he thought it meant. He searched his own mental reservoirs for the answer, but the deeper he probed the more shoe quotations he found—and the less Latin. The dictionary was discreetly silent on the subject. Nobody in the office knew. So he rushed out on the sidewalk, hatless, and halted the first man who passed and asked him the meaning of the Latin phrase. It so happened that the man knew, and told him. Now if that wasn't regular J. K. Orr luck.

The best advertisement the Missisissippi river receives is the oft-quoted statement that Georgia is the largest state east of the Mississippi.

Georgians know perfectly well what the devil is doing when the sunshine and rain both get on the job at the same time. But when the sun shines and the snow flakes fall simultaneously—as happened in north Georgia the other day—why, it exceeds both the knowledge and the traditions of the folks of this latitude, and we are all at sea as to what Satan is really up to!

A good many of us have known that "Ceramics" starts with a "C," but that was about all we did know about it. The recent convention was an eye-opener. Ceramically speaking, Georgia is around here, to use the quaint mid-Victorian expression.

Atlanta business man was in a quandary a recent Wednesday night over whether to attend prayer meeting or feed his car alcohol. . . . The radiator did not freeze that night.

Georgia is a great cotton-producing state, Banker Black, of Atlanta, told the ceramic convention. And then added, impressively: "But how many of you know that it plants a million more acres in corn than it does cotton?"

The most economical cash register in Georgia is at a little news stand at Five Points, Atlanta. When you buy a paper the news merchant drops the coin in a cigar box and with much ceremony taps a large, shiny bell.

Yes, it is true, Judge Lynch holds daily sessions in Georgia—Judge Arthur Lynch, presiding jurist of the recorder's court at Columbus.

Just 45 conventions stand between Fred Houser, of Atlanta, and complete happiness. His goal for last year was a-convention-a-day for Atlanta, and the total was 320. This year he has strong hopes of going over the top, with the full 365. "A convention a day drives dull times away," is Cousin Fred's unofficial motto.

A Georgia banker recently declined to buy a 100-acre pecan grove for $100,000 on the ground that he didn't believe just a 100 acres of trees could keep him in pecans all the winter. We're that fond of our home-grown nuts.

Around Griffin they're injecting pepper as well as pep into farming operations.

When March comes J. D. McCartney, widely known and as widely liked Georgia newspaper man, will have been assistant to the president of the Central of Georgia railway five years. "It is a memorable date in the history of the Central of Georgia," murmured "Mac," with that modesty so characteristic of publicity folk.

Strictly white—the Georgia kaolin business.

The Atlanta Terra Cotta company (operating, in Georgia, the only terra cotta plant in the south), has a Wey of delivering the goods.

"How many greens can it go?" is now said to be the test of speed of a new car in Atlanta.

With the completion of Muscogee mill No. 6, contract for which was let the other day, Columbus will have more than a half-million spindles.

"Only nice men lie," the girl said, according to the story Dr. M. L. Brittain told; and that was the Georgia Tech president's alibi for the agreeable introductions he gave to the orators at a recent banquet. He was almost

Georgia People in Europe

PARIS, FRANCE.—This is the season of the year that finds Paris with its fewest American visitors. Those who arrive in Europe via the North Atlantic route, landing at Boulogne, Havre or Cherbourg, stop in the French capital only long enough to find their land-legs and then proceed to the Riviera, Italy or Egypt in search of the sun or to Switzerland for winter sports. And to those returning to the United States, Paris becomes just the place to take the boat train.

Captain James Dismukes, of Georgia, who has been on duty in the Philippines for the last few years, and had just completed a trip through Egypt and India, has made a short sojourn in Paris before sailing in the liner Olympic to spend a couple of months in America.

America soon may be reading of a European trip of Captain Jack and his negro servant, for Roy Octavius Cohen, of Birmingham, Ala., has settled on the Riviera for the remainder of the winter and report has it that he is working on a new series of short stories. It is worth hoping that the famous goat, Lady Luck, is taken for a trip through the Monte Carlo casino.

American society in Paris evidenced excited interest in the news from the United States that Miss Margaret Badollet Shotwell, of Omaha, Neb., and Captain James Wylie Arnold, of Atlanta, were secretly married in Iowa a week before announcing their wedding in Omaha.

Both young people are well known and extremely popular on this side of the water. Miss Shotwell spent last year with her grandmother, Mrs. L. Cochran, at the Hotel Bristol in Paris while studying to be a concert pianist under Wagner Swayne and Isadore Philipp, of the French National Conservatory. Captain Arnold, who is one of the youngest captains in the United States army, was with the army of occupation in Germany for four years.

It is understood that Captain Arnold has received a four months' leave of absence to accompany his wife to Paris where she will continue her studies, and the American colony is preparing to give them a royal welcome.

And still another wedding of great interest to the social world of Paris was that on January 30 of Miss Prue Durant Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George William Smith, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Captain Paul Ayres Rockwell, of Atlanta. The first American citizen, with his brother Kiffin Yates Rockwell, to volunteer in the United States for service in the French foreign legion, Captain Paul Rockwell spent the first winter of the world war in the trenches of Champagne and the Aisne. Made unfit for further active service by a damaged shoulder, he became a newspaper correspondent on the French front. One of the promoters of the memorial to the Lafayette Escadrille, of which his brother was a founder, Captain Paul Rockwell is an authority on the history of American service in the foreign legion and in the Lafayette Escadrille. He spent last summer with the American flyers who served with the French forces in Morocco and was decorated by the French government.

Major and Mrs. Hunter Harris, of Athens, Ga., have arrived in Milan, Italy, from Paris for a visit. Major and Mrs. Harris spent the month of January in the French capital, following a tour along the Riviera and through the south of France.

Mrs. Eugene Schuele and Miss Frances Elliott, of California, recently gave a tea, with music and dancing, to a large contingent of the American colony at the Hotel Continental in Dresden, Germany. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Kratina, of Augusta, Ga., and Dresden. Mr. and Mrs. Kratina also were among the guests of United States Vice Consul and Mrs. Stanley R. Lawson at a tea-dance given by them in Dresden last week.

Among the Americans arriving in Europe aboard the United States liner, Leviathan on its last trip to Europe this winter before going into drydock were N. B. Stewart, of Americus, Ga., United States consul general in Spain, and Mrs. Stewart, returning to Barcelona from a two-months' visit to the United States.

Mr. Stewart is a native of Butler, Ga., where he was born in 1871. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Georgia in 1893 and later studied law at George Washington University. Mrs. Stewart also is a Georgian by birth. Before her marriage to James Taylor and later to Mr. Stewart, she was Miss Lucy Middleton Cobb, of Americus.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart were married in Americus in 1911.

Mr. Stewart entered the civil service of the United States government in 1893. From that date until 1897, he served as a clerk in the navy department. From 1897 to 1899 he was with the war department, then transferring to the engineering department for service in Havana, Cuba. In 1902 he was appointed postmaster of the engineering department, and in the same year was transferred to the Philippine Islands, where he served as provincial treasurer until 1907.

Mr. Stewart's first assignment in the consular service was as consul at Castellamare di Stabia in 1907. Succeeding assignments carried him to Madras in 1908; Durban in 1910, and Milan in 1913. From 1914 to 1923, he served as consul general at large and then was appointed to Yokohama, Japan, as consul general, being transferred from there to Barcelona, Spain, only last year.

Donald Harper, of Rome, Ga., who has been spending the past two months in the United States, has returned to Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wardlaw, Jr., and J. C. Donovan, of Atlanta, were among the passengers aboard the Nile steamer Britannia which left Cairo, last week for Upper Egypt and the cataraacts. They will visit Assuan and Luxor.

M. E. Kalmon, of Atlanta, who has been stopping at the Hotel Wagram in Paris, was a recent visitor to Versailles.

WAS a snowy night in February when "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em" deposited itself on the stage of the Sam Harris theater, bringing along with it no less a person than Katharine Wilson. Prior to launching into the usual rhapsody about the enchanting Miss Wilson, I would suggest that those of you who think me somewhat prejudiced on this subject, refer to the New York papers and see what they had to say about her in their reviews. Not one of the critics failed to comment on her tremendously clever portrayal of Janie, as heartless a little demon as ever worked behind a glove counter.

Now you must admit from being charming in Mrs. Eugene Black's box at opera to enacting a slangy, gum-manipulating shop girl is quite some distance. And when I tell you that Miss Wilson is as beguiling a figure in the latter capacity as you already know she is in the former, it should then begin to dawn on you she is rather a good actress.

"Love 'Em and Leave 'Em" is a breezy, snappy comedy about some department store clerks who live in the same boarding house. It's littered with new and refreshing wise cracks, and it is my pleasure to tell you at no times does anyone say "So's your old man" or even the quaint "apple-sauce." It's the sort of show wherein the girls are named Mame, Janie, Pearl and Agnes. The authors have very cleverly called their play "a comedy in American." And those of you who have become somewhat weary of French farces and English tea-chatter should enjoy this latest goings-on in shop-girl circles.

Miss Wilson has the role of a fiendishly treacherous little devil who steals her sister's sweetie, and then after she's squandered the funds of the Ginsberg Welfare club betting "on the ponies," quite calmly accuses this sister of having stolen the money. Sweet little thing, isn't she? And the thing I like best about this play is the fact they don't try to reform Janie in the last act. It's quite apparent she's rather a bad egg, and so the play sort of laughs her off and lets her continue her pleasurable way to the gutter undisturbed.

It looks as though Miss Wilson has a hit in "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em." Be sure you put it on the list of things you must see.

MRS. JOHN APPLEBY has recently been with us at the Gotham on Fifth avenue and her appearance at this place and that one has helped to keep up Atlanta's reputation of producing the best-looking women in the country. Mrs. Appleby brought with her news to the effect that Mrs. Helen McCullough Mallett, whose Manhattan residence was much shorter-lived than I'd thought it would be, was flourishing again in your midst.

I found Mrs. Appleby somewhat noncommittal regarding the rumors I have heard concerning the matrimonial plans of her brother, John O. Chiles. This Mr. Chiles, whose antics on Atlanta ballroom floors are always just two weeks ahead of New York, Deauville and Paris, is "plenty well" contemplating matrimony if what reaches my alert ears is correct. The former Willie Green Chiles told me that while she'd enjoyed "The Green Hat" and various other shows, nothing would look quite as good to her as a view of her baby in Atlanta, patiently waiting for mamma to finish her tour of the theaters here.

AT THE start of "A Weak Woman" I began to think I was seeing enacted the life story of a former dancing belle of Paces Ferry road. For the first act of this play concerns itself with a young woman who cannot decide which of her suitors she cares the most for, and settles the problem by taking them all out together with her. I momentarily expected her to utter the famous words of the Atlanta charmer, "I think the world and all of you, but I don't love anybody." As the curtain fell on the first act, and off the lady started for a ride with the two of her suitors who hated each other the most, I was sure, quite sure, I was back with you.

However, let me hasten to say I am confident no such occurrences ever took place in Atlanta as happened in this second act. How mortified I was! How humiliated! For this second act contains the most frankly daring situation I have ever encountered in the theater. I might possibly be able to whisper to your mothers about it, but I could never break out into print with what I saw going on before my bulging eyes. It's one of those times you wonder what would have happened if the curtain hadn't come down at just the moment it did.

The third act puts the play back on a more respectable footing, although in this act the suspicions you had about some of those second-act happenings are confirmed. "A Weak Woman" boasts of an excellent cast. Estelle Winwood portrays the weakest woman I've ever seen, while those splendid actors, the Morgan brothers—Ralph and Frank—are the two lovers. Ralph you probably saw in "Cobra" or "In Love With Love," while Frank's performance last year as the duke in "The Firebrand," was the hit of that show.

Youth Makes Good

—BY—DORIS BLAKE

HE heckling, harping older generation, in spite of their misgivings and dark forebodings, have to admit one thing about the younger generation—that it is simply glorious to be of it.

Sometimes we sit back and ponder the possibility that much of the oldsters' sport in maligning the young has root in thwarted ambitions and desires of their own tender years. Particularly criticism coming from that older generation that lived in homes surrounded by an inflexible element of authority, as Carlyle would say. Homes where the young person's wishes often had little to do with the matter.

It would ill become the elders now, with their holier than thou attitude toward the young ones, to admit regret over kisses they might have had and would have had, no doubt, but for the restraining influence of a generally accepted code of manners. Nevertheless, we sometimes wonder if they were as frank and fearless in character as that much maligned younger generation, if they wouldn't be willing to make the admission.

These elders were brought up with the idea that there were certain things people of their kind never did. They thought of doing them, of course, but the restraining influence of the social code interfered. We don't refer now to kissing especially, for, at that, we suspect they managed to slip a few things over on their own watchful elders. We mean the dozen and one opportunities to become self-existing individuals denied them but permitted the young of today.

Personally, we envy this young generation the era into which they were born and the privileges that go with it to think and act for themselves. And we marvel at their astonishing competency in the business of taking care of themselves—this clear-eyed, go-getting younger generation. We admire their courage, their determination, and their efficiency. We wish we were 18 or 19 this minute and in their totally new environment and were given the chance to do what many of them are doing—standing on their own feet, doing their own thinking, and being themselves.

There is surely nothing of the rubber stamp about this younger crowd. They want to do something worth while and interesting and to tackle it while they are young. They want to be valued for exactly what they are—not for their parents' standings. Unlike the older generation, they want what they want and go and get it.

The young society girl is the interesting study in the new social order. She, more than any other class of girl, is trained in codes following that of established generations—up to the time of her debut, at any rate. Is the modern edition of her content with being exhibit A, B, or C in debutante or post-debutante activities? She is not. She is striking out at random in a dozen different directions from the old environment. She is struggling at a tighter leash than her less well financially placed sisters, since she has more definitely defined conventions about caste and exclusiveness to battle. But many of her are leaving luxurious homes to start life on a greatly reduced scale with young husbands, or with aspirations to extract from professional and business careers other than the social amenities from life.

To us they're wonderful in the way they take the bit in their mouths and forge ahead, with minds well made up about what life is expected to give them.

Witness the recent revolt of a prominent young New York society girl, Miss Ellin Mackay, daughter of Clarence H. Mackay, and the only official hostess designated by the British government to give a great ball at her father's country house for the Prince of Wales. In discussing the reason why the young society girl leaves home and its exclusive parties for cabarets, which discussion appears in a weekly periodical, she indicates clearly enough that the modern society girl has a head that does its own thinking, that she isn't going to remain shut away in a small, exclusive circle when there's a whole big pageant of life in which she may take part.

"We go to cabarets," writes Ellin, now Mrs. Irving Berlin, "because we prefer them to an exclusive party. We do not like unattractive people, but, at least, in the cabaret, though we see them and are near them, we do not have to dance with them. At present day exclusive parties the stag lines have extremely unalluring specimens. There are hundreds of specimens, each poisonous in his own individual way.

"There is the partner inspired by alcohol to do a wholly original Charleston, a dance that necessarily becomes a solo. And there are hundreds of pale-faced youths exactly alike, who have forced the debutante to acquire a line of patter that will apply with equal appropriateness to all the numberless, colorless young men whom she once had the misfortune to meet, and with whom, if they choose, she must continue to dance at every party. So, to escape these unalluring specimens, we go to cabarets with people whom we find attractive. We are with people whose conversation we find amusing, and we dance with partners we like."

Miss Elinor Patterson, Chicago society girl, is another example of the young modern asking the privilege of standing on her own feet in a group which will value her for what she herself is.

"I'd rather scrub floors than follow the life of a continuous round of parties," she told us back stage at a "Miracle" performance, in which she gives a portrayal of the fugitive nun, Megildis. "Or I'd rather go out dress-making by the day."

A brief social career followed Miss Patterson's debut a couple of seasons

Mr. Astor Says Movie Films of

*Why the Millionaire's Objection
To the Films of Fashionable Society Life Is Such a Hard Blow.*

Do society men have pretty maids to assist with their baths and do they entertain their guests while in the tub as this scene from a recent film would indicate?

THE American moving picture industry received a most discouraging blow the other day when Vincent Astor, in a magazine article, denounced what he termed the "Hollywood interpretations of the luxurious laziness of the so-called Four Hundred," and pronounced them ridiculous.

If there is one thing more than any other on which the movie producers and actors have lavished pains and expense, it is their effort to show the world how the men and women of rich and fashionable society live and love and amuse themselves.

In order to give what they hoped and expected to be accurate pictures of the life and habits of the smart set they have time and again used the actual homes of millionaires as the background for their film dramas. Often they have employed fashionable men and women at large salaries to take roles in the movies and help transfer to the screen the atmosphere of exclusive society. They have even engaged for the servant roles, butlers, maids and valets who have actually served in homes of wealth and fashion and should know exactly how everything is done there.

And now, after giving the portrayal of fashionable society life all this laborious and costly attention, to have Mr. Astor come along with his sweepingly unfavorable criticism—well, that is a blow, indeed!

If it were anybody of less distinction and authority who said these things, the movie industry would doubtless rise as one man to deny their truth and to prove that society life as it really is and society life as it is portrayed on the screen are as alike as a pair of identical twins. But Mr. Astor is a young man who by reason of his wealth, ancestry and social position has every reason to know what he is talking about, and so nobody in the movie world has had the courage to undertake to contradict him.

In the early days of motion pictures of course nobody will deny that the attempts to picture society life were attended by many gross and glaring inaccuracies. This was only natural in view of the hasty preparation of the films, the limited amounts spent on them and the fact that the movie producers of those pioneer days were for the most part men who had never been inside a fashionable drawing room and were thoroughly at home only in third-rate hotels and walk-up flats.

Fifteen years ago, when Mary Pickford was starting her movie career at $25 a week and everything else was in proportion, a struggling producer was preparing a film in which was shown the return of a millionaire to his magnificent country estate after an absence of several years. Seated in his library, he orders a glass of wine and starts questioning the butler who brings it about events that have occurred while he has been away.

While this scene was being "shot," the head of the producing company interrupted.

"Hold on," he cried. "That don't seem right to me. This rich guy has been away a long time and of course he's glad to see all the home folks. I think it would be more natural for him to ask the butler to sit down and have a glass of wine with him while they talk things over."

In vain the scenario writer and the director protested that in the circle of society where the plot was laid it was hardly the thing for master and servant to fraternize like that. The movie magnate was a man of strong will and he had his way.

When the film was released there appeared at this point a sub-title reading: "Bring another glass, James, and have some of this rare old wine with me." The butler obeyed and stretched himself out in a big leather chair, as much at ease as any guest. Before the scene was over he and his millionaire employer were swapping stories and slapping each other on the back like old college chums.

The "human merry-go-round" which is shown in a current society drama as one of the rich and fashionable turn when they are bored with dancing and

Then there is the story of the producer who went to his studio to inspect a fashionable dinner table that had been arranged for the big scene in a film that was being made. He was particularly interested to see how this looked because he had paid for the purchase and rental of properties for it what was in those days a tremendous sum—as much as $18 or $20! He wanted to see if the bit of realism was worth the price.

After carefully inspecting the array of cut glass, silver and china with which the table was arrayed, he gravely nodded his head and said:

"Looks all right to me except for two things. You've forgotten to put on a bottle of ketchup and a dish of toothpicks."

These things were added to the table, the scene was "shot" and probably everybody was satisfied. For those were the days when films were shown only in the cheap and obscure nickel theaters and probably nobody who saw this one understood anything about the etiquette of table arrangement as it is followed in the homes of the rich and fashionable.

Incidents like the two just described ceased to occur, of course, as soon as the movies started becoming the universally popular form of amusement they are today. The often socially crude magnates saw the wisdom of keeping in the background and letting expert directors have full charge of the making of the films.

Early in the history of motion pictures it was seen that what are called society dramas were going to be as much in demand as the cowboy and Indian thrillers which had formed the films' first big drawing card. There was much eager searching for directors who knew enough about social usage to instruct their actors which forks to use at dinner and how to get in and out of "Smart Set" are "Ridiculous" of a drawing room without falling over the furniture.

When the American movie producers heard that, in spite of the pains they were taking to give their society films not only zest but realism, the English were finding things to laugh at in them where no comical effects were intended, they were deeply pained.

What amused the critical English most of all was the way the butlers in these films dressed and acted. "Really, old dear," they said to one another, "it is positively ridiculous." Even the poorer classes of Englishmen, those who have no butlers to wait on them, knew that no real butler, no butler true to the ancient traditions of his calling, would ever look and behave like the butlers in the films from America.

The movie producers' answer to this criticism was to send to England and hire a butler to come over to America and teach our actors just how these servants should dress, just what they nity of a profession. He was imported to Hollywood and set at the task of teaching American actors how to dress and behave when they happen to be assigned to a butler's role. And very soon after he started work the English ceased to find the American society dramas so amusing as they formerly had.

When prominent figures in the world of wealth and fashion began to become "movie struck" and seek opportunities to act in the films, the movie folks quite naturally supposed that there would never more be any question as to the authenticity of their pictures of society life. How could there be when the casts of so many of their society dramas contained men and women who were actually members of the Four Hundred and who knew perfectly well how things are done there?

Mrs. Julia Hoyt and Mrs. Morgan Belmont were among the first of many prominent social figures to try acting is just one extravagant orgy after another, with a great deal of immoderate drinking and scandalous love affairs galore. What movie producers would have the courage to undertake to disillusion them by admitting that Mr. Astor is right when he says that fashionable society people are not continually making vulgar displays of their wealth and that they live very much like other people?

In the typical screen rendering of a week-end house party in the smart set the guests are seen breaking traffic laws in their snappy roadsters. On arrival toasts are drunk, around the fireplace in the sun parlor. This is the host's treat but all the guests have brought along well filled flasks in case he does not prove generous enough.

Later we see the guests dressing for dinner. A valet assists each man and a French maid marcel each of the ladies.

A movie version of the luxurious laziness of the rich, something which Mr. Astor says is the exception rather than the rule should do and say under all sorts of conditions.

The man they found was named Charles Green, a butler with years of experience in the homes of dukes and earls where the work of such an important servant attains almost the dig-before the camera. They were followed by countless others, until it seemed that there was hardly a family in the social register that did not have at least one representative in the movies.

Fashionable aspirants for fame in the films were eagerly snapped up, regardless of whether they possessed much or any talent. They were thought good bargains at almost any salary because of their intimate knowledge of social life and the authority it was thought they would lend every drama dealing with the smart set.

But now the producers are wondering if these fashionable actors and actresses were worth all the trouble and expense. If what Mr. Astor charges is true they could not have done very much toward helping the movies give a faithful picture of the way the rich and fashionable live.

How will the movie producer, always eager to please everybody, meet Mr. Astor's criticism? That is an interesting question.

The films which he condemns as giving an utterly false impression of society have become so standardized and have gained such a tremendous hold on the public that it is hard to see how they can be abandoned without disrupting the whole industry.

For years millions of moviegoers, not only in America but all over the world, have been educated to believe that with the rich and fashionable life

Sometimes the intemperance of the women is indicated by flasks on their dressing tables.

The familiar dinner scene follows. Quite often the tables are ranged about a miniature lake where jeweled fountains play and live swans float. The feasts of the decadent Romans are quite outdone in all sorts of extravagant appeals to the senses. Wine bubbles in amber and ruby rivers and before dinner is over some of the more exuberant guests may be dancing on the tables or gayly plunging into the perfumed lake.

After dinner—more dancing, more drinking. Things grow dizzier and dizzier. A swathe of chiffon from a dancer's gown is kicked across the floor. The furniture begins to be threatened. A portiere is torn down by an inebriated gentleman. Priceless vases are knocked into pieces.

Toward morning those of the party who are able, pile into their cars and speed to some notorious roadhouse to pass the rest of the night in still more riotous carousing.

This is the sort of thing of which most "society" films are made. They have become such a fixture in the movies, the picture they give of smart set life is so widely accepted as truth that it's a hard blow to the public as well as to their producers to have Mr.

Mrs. Julia Hoyt, one of many fashionable women who were welcomed into the films and were supposed to help them give a truthful picture of society life

Astor come along and say they are all "bunk."

What on earth can be devised to take the place of the thrilling films of society life that are so popular?

Bernard Shaw's Modern Utopia

Four Hours Work Per Day Is Enough for Any Man, Says Irish Philosopher—Also Has New Ideas On Marriage and Religion In His Program of New Socialism

BY HAYDEN CHURCH.

Special Correspondent of The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.

LONDON.—Bernard Shaw has marked the passing of the old year with his annual outline of a year's meditations on the philosophy of socialism. Shaw's socialism is of a peculiarly intellectual variety, but annually he contrives to bring it back to public attention in some vivid way. This year his lecture before his favorite "Fabian Society" was a picture of a modern Utopia. He promised a working day of only four hours for all mankind, and he outlined his latest ideas on marriage and religion, embodying what he called a "new freedom."

"What will be the standard working day under this ideal state?" Mr. Shaw asked himself, and forthwith replied:

"I take it that the economies which will be effected by socialism, and the tremendous impulse given to production, and the stoppage of all the terrific waste of all our working-class energies by unproductive or actually mischievous labor, will mean, at the very least, that every day will be what we should call a half holiday.

"At any rate, for the purpose of argument, I take it that the standard day will be this: Four hours work, eight hours sleep, and say four hours for eating, drinking, dressing, undressing, a little resting that is not included in your sleep, and a certain amount of time for getting about.

"Therefore what we may look forward to is that socialism will give every one of us eight hours a day of leisure—a word which has fallen a great deal too much out of use. It is a better word really than freedom, because people may employ their leisure to destroy their freedom. But, nevertheless, as far as socialism is concerned, it may confidently offer to the community the prospect of having eight hours leisure every day.

Dividing Up the New Day.

"Of course you could not carry out an arrangement such as that in the case of every individual. There are certain kinds of work, and very important work, too, which cannot be arranged in that way. I could give you many instances of the sort of work which you cannot knock off at a particular hour; the nature of the work does not admit of it. But still, if you have your standard day, that standard comes to this, that a man gets one-third of his whole time, of his whole life, as his leisure time; people who cannot divide their work in days, can have say four months in the year, or one year in three; you may work it out any way you like.

"There are also certain people whose work will have to be judged more or less by results; you will get to a point at which it is almost impossible to calculate in terms of leisure at all, and you have to let a man or woman do exactly what they like provided they are producing some sort of result. Those are more or less exceptional cases.

"Let your mind play over the sort of future which comes with eight hours of leisure a day. Think of everything it would encourage in the way of initiation and invention, the tremendous fruits of leisure. That leisure, I think, might become by far the busiest and most fruitful part of the days that we should live.

"I believe that we should probably do with less bread and butter. I am certain we should do with less clothes; I am not at all certain Mr. Wells is not right in looking forward to the time when, at least in the middle of the summer, we might do almost without them. There is already a large movement that way among women.

"Our leisure will become an extraordinarily fruitful leisure. It is the freedom which will transform the world far more than the mere economic side of socialism.

Eight Hours of Leisure.

THE only thing I want to insist upon is that the adjustment has always got to be made in terms of leisure, because you cannot make it in terms of money, as we do it today, by paying one person more and another person less. The very first postulate of socialism, the thing without which there is no socialism, is that every person shall have an exactly and precisely equal income so far as it is possible to bring that about. However you may be tempted to alter that, that is fundamental in the whole business; the moment you depart from that, your socialism will come to pieces at once. All the adjustments have to be made in terms of leisure, or possibly in terms of other amenities which people may desire. One of the things people must count upon in socialism, is that they will never be allowed to get one penny ahead of their neighbors in point of money, or, for the matter of that, a penny behind; it is just as great a crime in one way as the other.

"The socialist may say to the man who is anxious about his freedom in the future: Socialism offers you what you really cannot get, what certainly everybody cannot possibly get, under the existing system, and that is eight hours leisure, eight hours freedom a day. If he says, 'Yes, eight hours freedom a day, but will I be religiously and politically free during that time?' the first impulse of the socialist is to say, 'What is that to us? see thou to that.'

"As far as socialism goes, it will give people the possibility of being free during that time, and it would seem that, having shown how that may be secured, the socialist has nothing more to say on the subject of freedom than anybody else has. He may say: 'Having gained this leisure, which we never had before, if you like to use it to enslave yourselves, which would be very likely what you would do, judging by what you do at the present time, well, that is not the fault of socialism. All we can say is that we offer you larger opportunities for freedom than the present system, or any other imaginable system can possibly offer you, at least as far as the human brain can work out systems at present.'

"But I do not myself dismiss the necessarily be made if you bring about a state of society in which every individual is absolutely economically independent; that is to say, in a family the husband is economically independent of the wife, and the children are economically independent of the parents. From the moment the child is born the child has an income which is equal to that of the prime minister—unless, indeed, it may possibly be found necessary to allow the baby more for a very brief time.

"But what is it that keeps households together at the present time? We are all, I suppose, happily married men—more or less. Some of us are really so unhappily married that we allow ourselves to recognize the fact that we are unhappily married, but a very great many of us would only recognize that we were not very happily married if we could escape from the marriage.

"There is an extraordinary practicality about the human mind—men's and women's. Somehow or other the ordinary men or women who have got what is called good sense, do not allow themselves to worry about things that cannot be helped. Accordingly, suppose you have a man and woman married together; if the woman cannot break up her household and go, because she has no means of existence, and if the man is really in the same position and cannot extricate himself without ruining or embarrassing himself tremendously, then those two people will never allow their minds to dwell on the fact that they are not well suited to each other and might do better elsewhere. They know that they would be asking for trouble if they allowed themselves to face that.

"We have at the present time a certain number of very happy and suitable marriages. I know some of them myself. I recall two marriages which really seem to be romantically successful. But they are not the first attempts, in either case. One man is ideally attached to his wife, who is ideally attached to him and she is a very charming and talented woman; but in order to marry him she had to make her previous husband divorce her. In the other case, the husband has tried one wife before, and the lady has had two husbands. The thing has been arrived at by a process of trial and error, and the result is all right.

"Now between the happy marriages on the one hand, and the downright unhappy marriages—the ones which just stop short of being so intolerable that people get divorced and break them up, there are a large number of unions in which people go on together because they must.

"I occasionally get a letter from a lady—it is almost always from a lady—who says: 'Dear Mr. Shaw, I hope you will excuse the liberty I take in writing to you, though I do not know you, but I feel that I must tell you that your book has changed the entire current of my life. I saw your very beautiful Candida, and I immediately left my husband, and formed a union with the man whom I felt really was my affinity.'

"Well, when I pursue the correspondence, I invariably ask this question: 'Did you find this second man any improvement on the other chap?'

"I am sorry to destroy the romance of the situation by declaring that in almost every case the answer is strongly in the negative; in fact, in quite a large proportion of them the lady admits that she went out of the frying pan into the fire.

Matrimonial Pragmatists.

"A great many people hold together, not because they have a very extravagant esteem or affection for one another, but because they think that they might go farther and fare worse. They have no conviction, after a little experience of the world, matter quite so summarily as that, because socialism will undoubtedly alter social pressures very considerably, and when you alter social pressures you produce conditions which make it very difficult to imagine what might or might not happen."

Marriage, Old and New.

Mr. Shaw's next subject was marriage. He looked into the future for a new freedom in matters of matrimony, frankly confessing that he expected a loosening of ties which he believes at present make for unhappiness. He put it this way:

"How will marriage be affected by this extension of freedom? It will be affected, not by the mere question of leisure, but by the condition of the working day, of equal income, and so on, which will involve the almost entire abolition of what we call vested interests. The abolition of vested interests will have certain effects on political and social progress. But when you come to domestic freedom, then it is not so much a case of vested interests, it is a case of economic independence.

"A tremendous difference will

Fourteen Dollars For 160 Acres of Florida Land

Many Georgia Army Officers and Enlisted Men Filing Homestead Claims on Government Land.

BY LIEUT JAMES F. MORRISON.

Betting their endurance against Uncle Sam's offer of 160 acres of land to anyone who can part with $14 as a filing fee, a number of regular army officers and enlisted men, together with a larger number of ex-service men from Atlanta and Georgia, have filed on homestead claims in Florida. A community has established itself in one of the best citrus districts and, while the husbands and fathers spend most of their time on duty in Atlanta or at Fort McPherson, families are bravely proving the claims, many of which will, in a short time, become the property of the pioneer families.

The original homestead law required each residence of three years, with seven months' actual residence each year, together with five months' vacation, and a cultivation of one-sixteenth of the acreage. Additional provisions made it possible for a veteran of the late war to prove up in one year if he had over 19 months service, and those with less than that amount of service to prove up in various limits between one and three years.

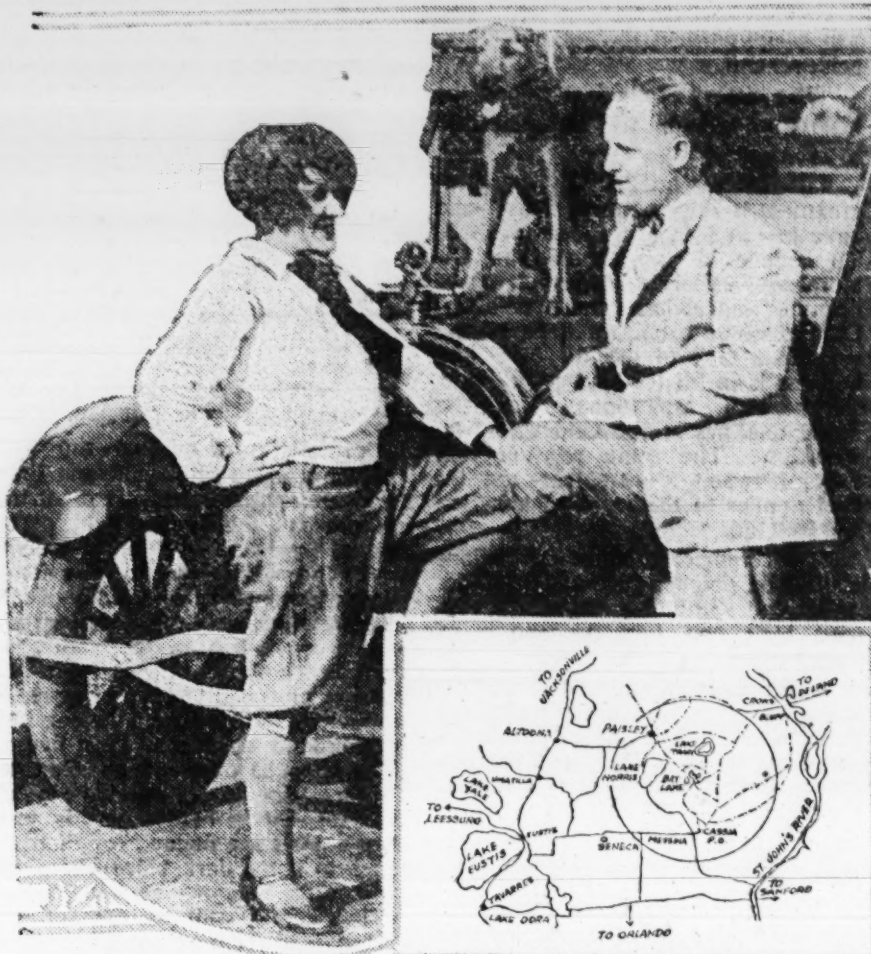

The largest colony persaps, of homesteaders from any one locality is that one in Lake county, which lies between the towns of Paisley and Cassia, on the north and south and the St. Johns river on the east, and Lake Norris on the west. This colony was started in 1924 by a handful of men and since that time about 11,000 acres of government land has been taken up.

Homesteads have been filed in 160-acre tracts, 80-acre tracts, and many 40-acre ones. Prior to the summer of 1924 this territory was a forest and lake wilderness of some 200 square miles. The woods were full of range cattle and hogs, as there was a no-fence law in operation and many settlers made their living by grazing stock in the government lands. Recent developments indicate that the no-fence law shortly will be a thing of the past, as the lands have all been taken up by homesteaders who do not want the cattle and hogs running at large.

Lake county has a large road building program under way, some of the projects of which are in this recently developed territory. The section is criss-crossed in every direction with roads leading to the various homesteads, as each settler must live, and build on his own land. Some of these roads were built by the county years ago, but have never been improved.

TO drop from a steam-heated, electric-lighted flat or home with hot and cold water on tap, with shows and theaters for amusement, good roads and street cars for travel—into a wilderness of some 200 square miles, 20 miles from a town, requires more than ordinary perseverance and gameness, especially for women and children who live on the land.

The usual procedure is for the head of the family to go to the homestead and build a shack, sink a well, clear a firebreak around the cabin, and perhaps stock up with some poultry and maybe a cow. Usually a road is cut and made passable. Then the family arrives and takes up residence while the husband goes back to his work or duties.

Lieutenant and Mrs. J. F. Morrison, two army pilgrims to homestead lands in Florida, as they appeared when they left Smyrna, Ga., on their way to Lake county, where they are proving title to a tract of government land. The map shows the section of Florida which has been taken up by a group of regular and former army men.

Camp routine then applies, with a that they would do any better in any other connection. That, of course, may be a powerful reason even under socialism for keeping people together, but when you make all possible allowances, I think you will see that in a state of things where a wife could leave her husband without experiencing the slightest pecuniary embarrassment, where she would be perfectly self-supporting, where she would have an income quite independent of whether she was with her husband or not, and where the husband would be in exactly the same position in regard to himself—naturally the social pressure that keeps many households together would break up. That is to say, a great many households that do not now break up, would break up under socialism, because there would be a great deal of trial and error before the perfect union was formed.

"I also very much doubt whether the union under socialism would be of that extremely close nature that it is at present. I mean, the way in which married people, even under existing circumstances, interfere with one another's lives to an entirely unnecessary extent.

"When the economic pressure was removed, I think that the marriage tie would really be a looser tie, and that I think would make for greater freedom and probably for greater happiness in marriage.

BUT I remember a nobleman who died a little time ago, a very noble nobleman, saying that the reason he was opposed to socialism was that he was afraid it would break up the family. He was a man whose own character in that respect was of extraordinary latitudinarianism. But still he had, as very often is the case with men of that kind, such a dread of a world consisting largely of people like themselves, that he really was concerned at the loosening of the marriage tie.

"I think that we must frankly confess that the effect of socialism would be to loosen all those ties which at present make for unhappiness and the restriction of freedom.

"Of course, marriage is an extraordinarily elastic term. Marriage does not mean to a Roman Catholic what it means to a Protestant. It does not mean in France and Norway what it means in England, and it is even a different thing in Scotland to what it is in England. But if you take it in its widest sense, that it means a registration by the state, of an association of two persons of opposite sexes with a view to producing a family, then you will always have marriage, and what the people will make of that marriage will, of course, depend very largely on themselves.

"One does not see, beyond the fact of registration, that socialism is going to interfere with them."

New Freedom In Religion.

In his closing paragraphs, Mr. Shaw took up the place of religion in his new Utopia.

"Grown-up people must find their own religion," he said. "You cannot control their religion; you can make them go to church, you can make them repeat a certain creed; you can say, 'If you do not repeat the creed we will burn you'—under such circumstances, they say, 'Thank you, I will repeat the creed.' That does not make people believe the creed, and it finally cannot make them behave as if the creed meant anything.

"But when you come to the question of children, then of course, socialism will necessarily bring about a very great change. You see, social-little brush-cutting from time to time, fishing to replenish the larder, going four or five miles each day for mail in the family car or behind a mule; hunting the gray squirrel and quail during the open season, and trying to make things comfortable in general, then becomes the order of living, with perhaps the setting out of a little vegetable garden and the fruit trees for the future.

The territory in Northeast Lake county has not, however, always been exactly a wilderness, for near Lake Norris prior to 1895 was the thriving town of Norristown, the remains of which consists of dim roadways, occasional old fence lines, outlines of former meadows now overgrown with second growth pine, and one or two old houses which have somehow managed to withstand the ravages of time. The terrible and unprecedented frosts of 1895 or thereabout struck Norristown and ruined the orange and fruit orchards. After this the people moved away, abandoning their homes and lands, and during the past 30 years forest fires and the elements have practically obliterated the traces of man's handiwork.

About four or five miles from Norristown was the town of Paisley, which also lost heart. Nothing is left but a store, postoffice, church and school-house.

With the influx of homesteaders and settlers of last year Paisley has taken on a new appearance, and the town has been moved to a location about half way between what used to be Paisley and the site of the former town of Norristown. A cross-state highway, soon expected to be hard surfaced, which connects Tampa and Daytona now passes through the center of the town, and other roads lead away from it to the newly settled government lands, with one road connecting it with Cassia, from which town there is a new road soon to be built to Crows Bluff.

SOcial clubs have been formed by the women of the colony. They meet periodically at the various homes.

Among those from Atlanta and vicinity who have taken up homesteads in this locality are Colonel R. H. Peck, Colonel James D. Watson, Colonel K. L. Pepper, Major E. D. Barlow, Major C. S. Caffrey, Captain F. L. Hester, Captain Thomas H. Page, Lieut. C. C. Moore, Lieut. S. W. Hulse, Lieut. James F. Morrison and Lieut. Boyd Inman, Lieut. W. H. Schaefer, Colonel James M. Petty, Major S. J. Heidner, Captain M. W. Marsh, Major (O.R.C.) Elmer E. Wilson, Warrant Officers William Handley, John E. Ward, James A. Fagel, M. G. Richeson, Lieut. (O.R.C.) George Perry, Major (O.R.C.) J. E. McKerracher and Major (O.R.C.) P. T. Brown. These men are members of the regular army or the organized reserves.

Still others from Atlanta and vicinity are Henry Rice from Smyrna, Ga.; Damon Watson from Winterville, Ga.; Archie Jackson, Atlanta; P. T. Baxley, Fort McPherson, Ga.; Frank Jones, Atlanta; R. A. Stauffacher, Atlanta; C. C. Hartman, Atlanta, and Henry Rosser.

Things New and Old About the Bible :

BY REV. W. P. KING
Pastor First Methodist Church, Gainesville, Ga.

God the Father in Whom We Are to Believe.

Rev. W. P. King

THE fact of God's Fatherhood is the determining principle and test of all doctrine and of all interpretation. It is the central sun whose light shines upon all the varied doctrines and duties of men. It is the certain test which determines the rightness or wrongness of all creeds, and of all deeds. The God whom Jesus Christ reveals is the answer to all one's questionings which need to be answered.

"I say the acknowledgment of God in Christ Accepted by thy reason, solves for thee All questions in the earth and out of it, And has so far advanced thee to be wise."

Whatever in human systems of belief or even in the scriptures themselves which is out of harmony with the Fatherhood of God is thereby discredited. Dr. W. H. P. Faunce writes, "What a man thinks of philanthropy, of reform, of politics, of industry is all determined absolutely by what he thinks of God. If he believes in no God, then he has no center, and all the world for him is shreds and patches, a thing of many colors, but dislocated and unmeaning.

"If he believes in a celestial tyrant, he will believe in tyranny; ecclesiastical, political and financial. If he believes in a pantheistic myth, a benign ethical confusion, he will prove incapable of anger or martyrdom." What we think of God is vastly more important even in practical life than all of our boasted achievements in all other realms of life and thought.

Dr. W. F. Tillett writes: "A people's idea of God and their fidelity or infidelity to that idea are not only an index of what they have been in the past morally, but it is the greatest and most influential single factor in determining what they will become morally in the future and what they will accomplish in the way of moral achievement.

"The history of civilization and the history of religion are vitally related to each other.

"The highest intellectual and moral greatness is impossible to those who have low and debasing ideas of God. To believe in and worship an immoral and unholy God cannot fail to degrade and debase the worshiper. On the other hand, to believe and worship a God of infinite love and holiness is to fill the soul of the worshiper with aspirations after the moral qualities of the God whom he worships. The same relation that exists between a worshiper and his God applies in the main to a nation and its God.

"Men, religions, churches, nations may all be weighed accurately in those moral and spiritual scales which register high and low conception of God."

In our interpretation of the Scriptures to allow the light of God's Fatherhood to shine on all the pages will bring to us a sanity and correctness of understanding where a minute exegesis of the root meaning of words and of obscure phrases will produce only endless quibbling and the confusion of knowledge. Every portion of the Scriptures is to be brought to the touchstone of the determining principle and test of God's Fatherhood. Dr. W. N. Clarke, with his accustomed discrimination, writes: "The heart of theology is the doctrine of God in his relations with men; of this the rest is the unfolding. This is the heart of theology because it is the substance of religion.

"Jesus lived in God, he lived out God's heart in his own life, he showed men how to live in God. This is true religion, and therefore this is true theology. In what he thus taught there is no dimness nor uncertainty. God is such a God as Jesus lived with in holy fellowship, and such a God as Jesus showed forth in life and love and death. In the light of what Jesus has shown us, we can have no doubt as to the spirit that animated God in his large relations with mankind, and we can obtain a trustworthy point of view for interpreting his gracious activities.

"Working in loyalty to the Christian spirit, we can be reasonably sure of a right judgment as to what else is true if Jesus' testimony to God is true; and this is the open door to a large part of our theological thought."

We must apply this formative principle with confidence and without fear to all the doctrines of religion which ask for our acceptance. Every doctrine and every ideal of duty which is in accord with the divine Fatherhood is to be accepted, and every doctrine and every ideal of duty not in harmony with this central and determining principle is to be rejected.

THE notion of original sin which imputes to man guilt and liability to eternal death because of Adam's sin can not live in the light of our central truth. A doctrine of election which foreordains men to salvation or damnation must be rejected as a false interpretation of God's dealing with men. In the light of the truth about God which Jesus reveals, man is a child of God and the object of his infinite love, and all men belong to a brotherhood which man must live out if he is to be obedient to God the Father. Sin as interpreted in the light of God's Fatherhood is more than a violation of law, for there belongs to it the dark hideousness of a blow in the face of love. In the light of this central sun we see suffering transfigured from an aimless chastisement into a discipline of character and we go forth to meet the sorrows and disappointments of life in the confidence in a "Good Will, wiser than our wisdom, more just than our measuring rod of right, more tender than our gentlest compassion, and more worthy of trust than all our imperfect conceptions of his goodness."

There is perhaps no doctrine which theologians have been less prone to harmonize with divine Fatherhood than the doctrine of the Atonement.

It is very fortunate that we are saved by the atoning love of Jesus Christ rather than by human theories of the Atonement.

Men have interpreted this gracious fact in the lurid light of the fiery pit, as a ransom paid to Satan.

Men have interpreted the Atonement according to the dominant conception of a particular age.

There was the satisfaction theory which held that the justice of God must be placated by a penalty which was to be paid by Jesus Christ, the innocent for the guilty.

There was the government theory which held that the majesty and stability of divine government must be maintained by the punishment of innocence for the sins of the guilty.

The first theory was stated by Anselm in terms of the feudal policy of his day; and the second by Grotius in terms of the governmental ideas of his day; and both are opposed to both the justice and love of God.

These conceptions are still employed in sermons as they were once employed in song.

This is a stanza by Isaac Watts:

"Rich were the drops of Jesus' blood Which calmed God's frowning face, That sprinkled over the burning throne

And turned the wrath to grace."

Another favored couplet was: "On Christ, Almighty vengeance fell Which must have sunk a world to hell."

Dr. C. R. Brown writes: "The God who provides the means of reconciliation does not himself need to be reconciled or propitiated. The Scriptures show us the divine Father who was ready for reconciliation and his sinful children who were not ready. To change our attitude, not to change his own, 'God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself.'"

Again the dark fact of retribution, whatever may be the depth of its misery or the length of its endurance, must be interpreted in the light of God's fatherly love.

Finally, heaven itself has been thought of as an existence of idleness according to a former idea of God as sitting aloof on a throne away from the activities of the world. But when we understand that "The Father works even until now" we know that to the redeemed spirits a task will be given which "suits the full-grown energies of heaven."

We must thus test by the determining principle of God's Fatherhood all ideas of life's doctrines and life's duties.

"He is the fountain light of all our day, The master light of all our seeing."

Sunday Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

Dr. Bundesen's Baby Book.

R. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, Chicago's minister of health, got out his baby book the other day—every doctor who gets out at all nowadays gets out a baby book sooner or later. But the more I study Dr. Bundesen's book the better I think it is. Even in the part where the book gives rules and directions about fresh air for the baby, Dr. Bundesen is so sound that I find I coincide with him at all points. Some readers may recall that I have ventured to disagree quite cordially with some of Dr. Bundesen's teachings about what he still calls "colds."

This book of Dr. Bundesen's is entitled "Our Babies." It is beautifully printed, has a profusion of pictures in it, and altogether makes a pleasing and eminently practical little counselor and guide for the mother who wants to raise a future president or even for the father who throws out his chest over a boy. Dr. Bundesen has been distributing free copies of the book to many thousands of mothers in Chicago, as a public health service. Of course it is not a public health service at all. It is a conspicuous example of personal health instruction. Lucky the bimbo whose ma reads this book.

At the time when the young people are doing their best stuff and learning more than they will ever learn in school, a health teacher in Dr. Bundesen's position can't get at 'em directly, so he does the next best thing—he gets at the parents. I don't recall at the moment whether poor old Dad gets any encouragement or consolation in Dr. Bundesen's baby book, but that doesn't matter. Dad is a figure of no particular importance in the bimbo business anyway. Dad does very well if he keeps out of the way when Mother and Grandma are in conference and knows where the dirty dodies are kept in an emergency. I take it upon myself to promise Dad that the information in Dr. Bundesen's baby book will not only make the bimbo happy but also ease the awful strain on Dad's pay envelope.

A cozy corner magazine writer figures that at present market rates a baby costs about $750 delivered. This gifted author complains of the high cost of specialists, hospital extras, day nurses, night nurses, layettes, et cetera, no joke—she takes all these luxuries seriously. I dare say that if customers didn't believe all they read in kitty corner magazines, particularly the colorful pages thereof, the choicest grade A, hand-picked bimbos could still be delivered at about $750 a dozen. Anyhow, by careful study of Dr. Bundesen's colorful book—the color is lavishly used in the pictures, the subject matter is solid and genuine—Mother ought to see many ways to save dollars that might otherwise be squandered on unnecessary luxuries; and in effecting this saving she will be building health for the Big Noise.

DR. BUNDESEN says in "Our Babies" all even I could wish said in a baby book about fresh air and sunshine. Throughout the book there is just one flaw, which I must take pains to point out, since I am recommending the book for mothers. "Over one-fifth of all deaths of children under one year of age in the United States during the past ten years were due to colds and their after effects." This is a deplorable reversion to the dark ages. Even if it were true, which it is not, according to mortality statistics, what good purpose is served by including such a morbid, frightful, calamitous, quackish assertion in a book which purports to preach fresh air and sunshine and health and happiness? Dr. Bundesen must have been feeling pretty mean when he permitted that misleading sentence to creep into an otherwise admirable health pamphlet. Let us hope he will omit the lugubrious scare when he revises "Our Babies." If the health minister of Chicago feels impelled to maintain that "colds"—as he calls 'em—do happen, he might get out a special pamphlet or something to uphold that quaint hypothesis. He will find no instance of a fatality from such cause recorded in the official mortality statistics. Nor does the medieval idea implied by the use of that term, in lieu of the real name of the disease or illness, fit in with the teachings Dr. Bundesen espouses in the chapters on fresh air and sunshine in this excellent baby book.

I have a few of these fine books, which Dr. Bundesen has kindly given me to present to parents engaged in the bimbo business.

While they last I shall be glad to mail a copy to any reader who desires one and who will provide six cents in postage. No telephone orders received, and anybody who calls at the office with a truck is hereby promised a cold reception. Readers who send clippings or unsigned memoranda instead of a letter of request qualify without further correspondence as Involuntary Contributors to my Unused Postage Stamp fund.

Five-Inch Baby Book Shelf.

Except in anticipation, no one to date, as far as I can ascertain, has read more than three or four inches along the five-foot book shelf. I find, however, that Dr. Bundesen's pamphlet practically completes my concep-

INSTALLMENT IV.

Latham Has a Patient.

LITTLE later, at the end of a general laugh, he tipped back his head and began roaring: "Hail! Hail! The gang's all here!" But Landlord Harrison raised a warning hand and admonished: "Shush, shush, brother! Soft pedal. You'll have the Ladies' Aid society down on my head!" In humorous appreciation of their obstreperous guest, the landlord chuckled at the company in general.

Not long after this came a discreet knocking at the door. After an instant of dead silence within it was repeated, low and confidentially. Charley Teller, one of the spectators, slid over, drew the bolt, and looked in the hall—then opened the door, as though with some misgiving. Mr. Donahue, of Detroit, stood there.

The man who had arrived on that afternoon's boat, registering as D. J. Donahue, Detroit, slid into the room, smiling in his unobtrusive, yet perfectly composed manner, as all the company stared at him in a state of surprise and uncertainty—noticing that he carried a pasteboard box under his arm.

"I heard a sound of revelry by night," said the intruder, "so I thought I'd bring what flowers I had left."

With cool and disconcerting assurance he advanced to the table, laid the pasteboard box upon it, and lifted the lid. The company saw that the box contained a brown bottle, like the one on the laundry tub. Benson promptly laid hands upon it, holding it up to the light, which showed it was half full.

Whereupon, with a grave air, he extended his right hand to the trespasser, saying: "I dunno your name, or what place you come from; but if anybody calls on me with a calling card like that he's just as welcome as though we belonged to the same church."

That cast the die; the stranger was taken into the fraternity forthwith—evidently being a pretty good sport himself. His bottle was sampled and also received with approval. Benson first expressed it, wiping his lips with the back of his hand.

"Say, neighbor, that's the real article! That didn't come from Jed Judd!"

Laughter greeted that indorsement. The newcomer, finding a place beside the two other spectators, inquired who Jed Judd was.

It appeared from various replies, all offered in drink-mellowed loquacity, that Jed Judd and his brother Wes occupied the weather-blackened shack on the sandy end of the island which Donahue had noticed from the hotel veranda, and that they bore a bad reputation—which, however, from the point of view of the present company was somewhat meliorated by the fact that they were the chief source of supply for smuggled liquor. Otherwise they were fishermen, notorious for persistent illegal use of the seine and for conflicts with the game laws.

The four men at the table resumed their game of poker, and Donahue, of Detroit—with his expressionless, but popping eyes, his large, pale, freckles, and his singularly assured manner—was forthwith tacitly accepted as worthy of good sports' company. "Yim Benson from Minnesota" had been so accepted fairly at first glance; he looked the part.

Benson's business in Indian Ledge was known from the beginning; no one could be long in his company without knowing it. He proposed to buy him a good little orange grove, not too far from town, where he could spend at least six or seven months every year until he got this dam rheumatism baked out of him. He had money enough to live in idleness if he wished; but he needed something to take up his time. As a prospective investor in real estate he had been immediately handed over to Lem White. By the evening of the second day he and the ex-sheriff were fairly cronies.

And before noon, following the poker party, Donahue put himself on a footing of intimacy with Lem White by a single stroke. When the pop-eyed man stepped into the bare little real estate office it was evident that he came on business. Taking the vacant chair by Lem's desk, he opened the business plumply, without a prelude:

"I want to get into that Yates place. I'm a detective. I had a man drive me down there this morning, but from all I can see there might as well be a stone wall around it."

The place was singularly unsuitable for spying—with a rank and overgrown hedge along its three land sides and open water on the other. No one could approach the house in daylight without great probability of being seen.

"There's a big crook and a pile of money in that house," Mr. Donahue continued. "I don't know what the newspapers down here printed about it, but the New York papers printed columns. Hallertan, Fink & Co. failed last month. The head office was in Nassau street. They had thirty-six branch offices—as far west as Denver and as far south as Atlanta. The newspapers put the liabilities at nine million dollars. It was a crooked concern from the ground up. There's over a million that's never been accounted for. Fink's in that house. He's got some of the stuff with him."

"You could have him arrested," said the ex-sheriff promptly.

Donahue's prominent, light blue eyes showed no expression, but his lips smiled and he shook his head:

"Knowing a thing and proving it are two different propositions. I know Fink slipped out with a trunk full of gilt edge stuff, but I can't prove it. If it had been as easy as that the district attorney wouldn't have let him get away from New York. Those fellows didn't keep books to let a district attorney find out what became of the money. The books are a Chinese puzzle when it comes to proving anything in court. I don't know whether you remember anything about the case."

"Afraid not," Lem confessed. "In a general kind of way I remember some scandalous big failures up there in Wall street—a lot of people robbed—but not the details."

"Soon after the failure Hallertan committed suicide," Mr. Donahue went on, and made a significant little pause before he added, "anyhow, the coroner's verdict was suicide. Now everything can be dumped on his shoulders; if the district attorney wants to find out anything he can ask Hallertan. You can't get anything on Fink unless you can get your hands on the money first. The money's the only proof—see? If you find stolen goods on a man you can make him explain where he got 'em. I want to get into that house. I can make it worth your while—more than twenty years of this real estate business. There's a million dollars in the pot."

At the second mention of that fabulous sum Lem stared at the detective in fascinated surprise and absently scraped his chin with the back of his hand.

DONAHUE'S low pitched, monotonous voice continued, "I operate on a system of my own. In Wall street they call me a beachcomber. I don't object. Take this case: Fink's got a million of prime, negotiable stuff that don't belong to him. There's a creditor's committee. I say to the committee, 'I can collect a million for you, at a commission of 25 per cent.' If they don't want me on my own terms they don't need to have me. But for the sake of getting their hands on the money they'll take me fast enough. Twenty-five per cent of a million—you see that I can make it worth your while."

The ex-sheriff's eyes grew rounded and he swallowed, as the action of his Adam's apple showed.

"This runs into big game, Mr. White. In late years hundreds of millions of securities—mostly Liberty bonds—have been stolen from brokers and banks and from the mails. You must have seen something about it in your papers."

Lem White nodded, saying, "Why, yes; in a general way."

"It runs into hundreds of millions," Donahue repeated. "You know a stranger can't walk into a bank and get money on a Liberty bond. He must be introduced. That stolen stuff couldn't be disposed of except by men who had some standing—men who were known and who could give a reason for having the bonds. Everybody in Wall street knows there's been a big ring for disposing of that stolen stuff. Everybody knows it must include some people who put up a good front. I'm satisfied Hallertan, Fink & Co. were in that ring. There may be a job for me on that side, too. This may run into nine figures. But anyhow there's a commission of two hundred and fifty thousand in sight. That's what I'm really down here for. I need your help. I'll pay well for it."

Lem White would count himself in wonderful luck if he made five thousand dollars that year in the real estate business. The figures which Donahue mentioned so lightly ran off into financial mythology and reduced him to a kind of hungry incredulity. But he inquired conservatively, "How would you plan to go about it?"

"The first move," said the detective, "is to make sure of the man in that house. I'm pretty certain it's Fink, but I want to know positively. I've got a photo of him. Being the agent, you can go up there to see about some repairs the landlord intends to make. That'll give you a fine chance to look over the house as much as you please and to get a good look at the man."

That first move at least sounded easy. They talked over the details for a while and Lem White—with an amazed feeling of having been transported into Arabian Nights—agreed: "I'll run down right after dinner."

Dinner, with him, meant about noon; and soon after noon he did set forth in his battered little car for the old Yates place. A tall mulatto woman, with a bright colored handkerchief around her head, met him at the door. Mr. Snyder, she said, had gone fishing, and the ladies had gone away in the automobile—a second-hand car which Mrs. Snyder had bought of Ab Teller, to whom Lem himself had recommended her. The mulatto woman seemed minded to deny him access to the house; but Lem was not used to being denied by persons of her color, even though tall and stately and wearing tropical looking headgear. He brushed by her and proceeded with his examination of the premises—while the servant, like a mute dark fate, dogged his footsteps. He prolonged his visit as much as he plausibly could, but Mr. Snyder did not return, nor did the ladies. At length he withdrew and drove back to Indian Ledge—being beaten on the first trick. To make his pretense of acting for the landlord at all plausible it seemed he must wait until tomorrow before trying again.

But chance arranged it otherwise for him and for Donahue.

Dr. Latham—who by way of shuffling off as much of his past as possible, now preferred to be called Lewis, instead of Lane, as he had been familiarly known in Norsex—had one great daily recompense, namely, a swim in the bay toward the close of the afternoon. When he plunged in, the cool, live salt water, pricking his skin, washed away all the stuffy, stupid boredom of the place. Its reviving touch sent the blood racing through his veins, and he struck out for a mile or so, pitting his skill and strength against an element naturally mortal to man. Thank God for the sea! That daily swim, and his books, got him through.

At half past four this afternoon he put down the book and got up—already, in anticipation, moving more briskly than common. But as he stepped

POEMS OF THE CONFEDERACY

WILLIAM GORDON McCABE.

William Gordon McCabe, the son of an Episcopal clergyman, was born at Richmond, Va., in 1841. He graduated from the University of Virginia and the greater part of his life was spent in teaching. He was a captain of artillery in the Confederate army. Honorary degrees were conferred on him by the College of William and Mary's, by Williams College and Yale College. While not a voluminous writer of verse, his poems, especially his war poems, have been popular.

DREAMING IN THE TRENCHES.

*I picture her there in the quaint old room,
When the fading firelight starts and falls,
Alone in the twilight's tender gloom
With the shadows that dance on the dim-lit wall.*

*Alone, while those faces looked silently down
From their antique frames in a grim repose—
Slight, scholarly Ralph in his Oxford gown,
And stout old Sir Alan, who died for Montrose.*

*There are gallants gay in crimson and gold,
There are smiling beauties in powdered hair;
But she sits there, fairer a thousandfold,
Leaning dreamily back in her low armchair.*

*And the roseate shadows of fading light,
Softly clear, steal over the sweet young face,
Where a woman's tenderness blends tonight
With the guileless pride of a haughty race.*

*Her hands lie clasped in a listless way
On the old romance—which she holds on her knee—
Of Tristram, the bravest of knights in the fray,
And Iscull, who waits by the sounding sea.*

*And her proud, dark eyes wear a softened look,
As she watches the dying embers fall—
Perhaps she dreams of the knight in the book,
Perhaps of the pictures that smile on the wall.*

*What fancies, I wonder, are thronging her brain,
For her cheeks flush warm with a crimson glow!
Perhaps—Ah! me, how foolish and vain!
But I'd give my life to believe it so!*

*Well, whether I ever march home again
To offer my love and a stainless name,
Or whether I die at the head of my men,
I'll be true to the end all the same.*

liquor better than any man I ever saw, but for all that a man can't stay just so drunk forever. He's got to pass out some time.

"Was he drunk?" asked Sylvia.

Poppy giggled. "Was he? I'm glad you didn't get it. He was absolutely crocked before dinner. The truth is, Eric drinks too much all the time. New York managers aren't half as crazy about him as they used to be, since he darn near ruined the last opening night by showing up stiff as could be. But he got through somehow. He gets away with it. I hope he hasn't gone upstairs to shoot craps with Mr. Kahn."

She broke off, with a quick glance at Sylvia.

"That's all right," said Sylvia, almost snappishly, "I know what craps are, Poppy. I'm not a fool."

Poppy's eyes widened. "Well," she said, "I can't wet nurse Eric now, I'm busy."

"Yes," said Sylvia. "I wonder, Poppy, if you would have them call my car? It's been a lovely party, but I have a very early call in the morning."

III.

But it could not have been such a very early call, for when Sylvia came down to breakfast the box and note lay beside her plate. She had already made up, and so the thick pink grease paint hid the sudden warmth of her cheeks from her mother's sweetly curious eyes.

In the tiny box lay one gardenia, as though it were the very first gardenia that ever was and a miracle all in itself. A gardenia very pleased with itself and sending up fragrance to amaze and startle, to catch your heart between two beats.

The note was very brief. It had no beginning and no ending.

"I must send you something, Sylvia, because no matter what a man may have done this is very wicked, you cannot ask him to be sad when you just happened to him, can you? And it must be a gardenia for you. But it is only one gardenia, in order

O, he was a subtle man, Eric Lawson, and he knew a great deal about women.

IV.

Of course, no one could be expected to understand the thing. And the more it was discussed and talked over, pro and con, as, of course, it was—the two of them being as well known as they were—the more every one was utterly dumbfounded.

The people who knew Eric Lawson, his friends and his enemies, and he had plenty of both, simply could not understand, in the first place, what he saw in her. That slim black and white velvet-eyed girl, who was a legend in Hollywood, and whose name was synonymous with all those very things which for so many years Eric Lawson had openly scorned.

She had absolutely no sex appeal, this girl. She knew not one of the moves of the game. The men of Hollywood had always left her more or less severely alone.

And understand that he was no back alley villain—no seducer of young girls, no vulture preying or desiring to prey upon innocence. He was a mad, reckless, extremely wicked Irishman, if you choose, but he had always played his love games in the open and with worthy antagonists. A man who loved the world, the flesh, and the devil, but who desired no hole-in-the-corner business about his devilries.

That Eric Lawson should be in love, even temporarily, with Sylvia Vail, was altogether amazing. There were a good many people in Eric Lawson's set who had a faintly veiled antagonism for Sylvia and her legend. They said openly that she was simply too dull for words, and that if she wasn't a hypocrite she was a fool.

And, of course, the people who knew and adored Sylvia Vail were astounded that she should for one moment tolerate or permit even the acquaintance, much less the advances, of a man like Eric Lawson. Some of those people were very much of the world and merely adored Sylvia because she was not, and they knew that Eric Lawson was a man of whom, in New York, it was said a woman could not be seen without besmirching her reputation.

And now Sylvia, upon her pedestal. To wear every day that single gardenia, the story of which very soon got about. Sylvia to appear in public, even accompanied by her mother, with Eric Lawson. It was too dreadful.

When they were seen for the first time together one night at the Biltmore, a positive shriek went up—one of those long drawn gasps of amazement that can be startled from even the best and most celebrated people upon occasion. Even when they saw the silver-haired, gentle figure of Sylvia's mother beside the pair, they were not reconciled. They stared and stared at Sylvia, who wore soft black gauze that night, so that the single gardenia pinned upon her shoulder was exceedingly noticeable. And there was no question about it, she glowed with a new brilliance that made her almost beautiful, even to the many people who insisted that she was not beautiful at all, and that all this fuss about Sylvia Vail was really ridiculous.

Eric Lawson drank rather more than was good for him that night, as usual, and the sight sickened Sylvia's friends a little.

O, they appreciated Eric's charm. Who did not? And they could see that he was at his wildest, most brilliant, most daring best that night. But, for all that Sylvia was a screen actress, they really acted as though they had seen Marguerite in the clutches not of Faust but of Mephistopheles himself.

And so the affair had gone on from that first morning of the one gardenia to a certain night when a messenger boy brought a telegram to Poppy's house upon the hill, and the butler brought it in to where Eric and Poppy sat before the fire.

Eric read the telegram, read it again, and then he began to laugh. He was not a man who laughed much. At most, there was that dark and dangerous smile of his. But this time he laughed, like a boy who is tickled about some secret prank he is about to play.

He went to the telephone, and when he came back he said, "I'm going out, Poppy. I except I shall leave for New York day after tomorrow. I'll be finished with the picture tomorrow. This wire is from Bonetti. He wants me for a new play. A great part. Marvelous, he says. And you know, for all he's a grand old poseur and all that, there's no one in the American theater today quite like Bonetti."

He laughed again.

"Are you going to Sylvia's?" said Poppy, over a fresh cigarette.

"Yes." Eric's eyebrows came down a little. He was not a man who liked being questioned.

"Don't be grand with me," said Poppy, pleasantly. "There's nothing left that you could do to hurt me, you know, so I don't care. And—strangely enough—I love you, Eric. You know that. I shall always love you. That, I suppose, is what the orthodox would call my punishment. But—and this is strange, too—I am also your friend. Are you going to marry Sylvia Vail?"

Eric Lawson swung back to her, his soft gray hat held restlessly in his hand. He did not answer, but his eyes were impatient.

"Because," said Poppy slowly, "you will be making a terrible mistake. I know you're crazy about her. But you won't be long. It's only a sort of reaction from me—and a few hundred other fools of my stamp. But you're not ready for heaven yet, my boy. Wings and a harp would bore you silly.

"And it would be rather horrible, Eric, even to me, to think of your marrying Sylvia Vail. Even though I would have given the soul out of my body to marry you myself, I can see that. For marriage to Sylvia Vail must be a sort of sacrament. And you have been—married a couple of times already, haven't you?"

Eric Lawson stared at her, while he put on the soft gray hat and pulled it down sidewise over his tense face—stared pensively and reflectively. Then he turned and went out into the night, his handsome mouth set in a hard, white line.

V.

Sylvia Vail hung up the telephone with something that was very like a shiver, and sat for a moment, her head bowed upon her hand. Even over the telephone his voice brought her that sweet and suffocating thrill. In spite of what she knew had happened last night.

It had not needed Poppy that morning to tell her what had happened last night. She had known.

And it was that unasked knowledge that was driving her now to a sort of panic. For there was something terribly fatal, something marked, about that knowledge. Why should she, Sylvia Vail, know by the slowed beating of her heart, the prayers that rose to her lips without intention, the tears that threatened her soft eyes, that a certain man was doing once more those things which she hated, was spending his substance in riotous living?

It made him belong to her, made her belong to him, against her will.

That was the thing she must fight.

And now he was going away, back to New York. He was coming now. She knew what that meant.

And she knew, too, that this one man was the man of all men to her. Why, she did not know. Why this feeling of love that was transforming her should have come for just this man and no other, so that it must bring with it heartbreak, she could not tell. But day by day for six weeks that first moment of happiness in his arms on the balcony had grown to a sweet and terrible conviction. In gorgeous, thrilling moments. In tender, intimate moments. In bitter humiliation, in the tearing aside of veils from such things as Sylvia had hoped never to look upon—still it had grown.

Her mother came in, looked at her as she sat so brokenly, and said quietly, "Is Eric coming tonight?"

Sylvia Vail looked up and smiled. No hurt of hers ever yet had been so great that the sound of that gentle voice could not bring a smile. No need even now to let anything mar the tenderness she might give her mother.

"Yes, dear," she said.

Mrs. Vail went over and put one arm about her fair shoulders.

"Darling," she said, "I want you to know that whatsoever you decide to do, I shall be happy, and I shall want to help you, because I shall know you believe you are doing right. But I want you to keep your heart very pure, that you may not be blinded, nor deceived—so that you may not be lured to condone evil. Nor to cast your pearls before—swine."

The girl's head slipped back against the shoulder where it had so often rested. It was the same pose which had been photographed and had become so famous. It was almost part of the Sylvia Vail tradition, that famous photograph of Sylvia and her mother.

"Are you going to marry him?" said Sylvia's mother. And in spite of herself she could not keep her voice from trembling just a little.

But Sylvia did not answer. She had caught the distant sound of a motor, speeding to her.

VI.

It seemed to Eric Lawson that she had never looked so altogether lovely as when she came to him in the small, white drawing room, so very formal and delicate with its paneled walls and its brocaded chairs. He had never seen her in that pastel pink, and the old-fashioned gown, with its tight little bodice and long, full skirt that all but touched the floor, gave her that not-quite-of-this-world look that he loved best. Beneath her skirt one tiny black shining slipper peeped, and the very sight of it softened and thrilled him through and through.

He kissed her, his heart upon his lips and his passion straining behind them. They had come that far—that he might kiss her and feel the flutter of her heart against him and see the moon glow come into her cheeks.

"I am going away, my blessed," he said, and she nodded.

And suddenly he found himself for the first time in his life without words—this man of the fluent tongue and the magic phrases.

That little choked silence. Before it Sylvia was all but overcome by the desire to hold him against her breast and run her fingers very gently through the double wave of his hair.

She said nothing. She was one of those women who do not feel much the need of words. Silence did not oppress her.

"My dear," said Eric Lawson, "you know what I want. I love you. I wish I had other words to say it with. Those are so shop-worn. I—I am shop-worn, too, Sylvia. I know it. And I know that I am not fit—not worthy—but this thing in my heart for you is not shop-worn. I love you. I want you to marry me."

Sylvia's eyelids fluttered down before the words, the thought, and lay a long time upon her cheek.

"I cannot," she said, and the words surprised even herself, as though some power outside her had spoken.

"I cannot," she said again, piteously, her eyes open and upon him, imploring him to respect this refusal of her spirit and not to bring to bear upon her the weaknesses of her flesh, of her heart. "I think I love you, too, Eric, but I must not marry you."

"If you love me," he said, passionately, "why not?"

"I do not want to tell you," said Sylvia Vail, gently. All that warmth was gone from her cheek now. "You must know. It is cruel—to me—and to you—that I should have to say the things that stand between us, should have to name them."

Distress lay upon her forehead and brought the patrician, arched eyebrows together.

"Tell me," said Eric Lawson, grim in his pain.

"We—do not believe in the same things," said Sylvia Vail, her hands torturing the black ribbons at her side. "Even love is not enough when two people are so different. You love all the things I hate. You do all the things that seem—terrible to me. You are steeped in those things that—that I can only pray to forgive, but that I cannot understand or tolerate. I sound so cold—but I am not cold. I am suffering. I should be utterly miserable with the people who are your friends and you would be," the faintest ghost of a smile trembled upon her lips, "you would be 'bored sick' with mine—my world. With me, after a while."

"I am the best judge of that," said Eric Lawson, grimly.

"No, you are not," she said quietly. There was steel back of that softness after all, to meet this test, this crisis. "No, you are not. You love me and you cannot see clearly. I love you, but because all my life I have tried to choose—the right—I can see clearly even now. You would break my heart, Eric, and I should ruin you. Because you see, my dear, you would never forgive yourself for breaking my heart."

"I shouldn't. Sylvia, what else can matter but just you and me? I adore you. I worship you. I'd change—to you. I'd be only what you wanted me to be. What else is there but just you and me?"

"Many things," said Sylvia Vail, steadily. "We must go on living in the world. We cannot be transported to some fairy garden. You think it would be different—but it would not. You do not really want to be. You only think you want it to be, that you may have me. But what you really want is to be you and have the things you have always had, and me as well."

"It—it is difficult to say these things. It is the fashion to speak lightly of good. People are more ashamed now of being good than they used to be of being bad. But—I believe in God. Not just—socially. But in my heart. I feel near to Him, and to—ever since I was a little girl, Eric, I have seen my mother follow daily, in every act, in every word, the things Jesus told about. It is the sort of thing people don't want to think about now, but I cannot help it. Can I? And don't you see, Eric, how differently, you think and live?"

Eric Lawson, seeing how different his life had been, how different were the things that lay even now in his heart, looked back at her.

And much as he wanted this girl, much as he loved her, he knew she was right. He did not want to change. That was the horror that came upon him. He did not want to live as she lived. He had no belief in those things which were her very soul. He could be honest, for all his devils.

"It's funny," he said at last, with a gallant, crooked little smile, "that I should be going back to New York to play the role of the Christ in a play. It's funny—isn't it?"

Startled, her hand flew out. "O, no," she cried, and he had never seen her so deeply moved.

That angered him, tore deeply into his vanity, as nothing else she had said had been able to do.

"That shocks you?" he said, in mock surprise. "Well, I am a very good actor, my dear. Give me credit for that."

"But to play the Christ—you—" her voice failed her, swamped with horror.

"It is sacrilegious, I suppose," said Eric Lawson, darkly, dangerously, his bright, golden head lowered against her. "That a man like me should dare even to speak the words. He spoke, that is blasphemous, eh? Well, it would be a bit difficult to find a man worthy to play it in your eyes, I'm afraid. But still, I suppose—I am the last one. Judas cast for the leading role. Well, it can't hurt any."

But she only lay back in her stiff little chair, her eyes wholly black in her white face.

"Bonnetti is going to put on a great new play, founded upon the life of Christ. Part modern—part biblical. He says it's the greatest play he's ever had. And have you ever heard that I am supposed to look like the pictures?"

But his flare of hurt anger had cooled pitifully.

Just once more he pleaded. He could not give her up without one last plea.

"It wouldn't be worth the chance, blessed?" he said. "Our love—perhaps—"

"I could not," said Sylvia Vail. "I shall be very unhappy. I am very unhappy now. But I can bear this, even though nothing will ever be quite the same without you. But to marry you—to live with you—to know, were doing—"

"Will you kiss me good-by?" he said.

Sylvia Vail raised her face and kissed him. Long, tenderly, deeply, with all the love of a woman for a man. A kiss of renunciation, of farewell, yet as sweet as a bridal kiss. Sylvia felt the breaking of her heart beneath it. fought the sobs that threatened to overcome her and fling her upon his heart in spite of herself.

"So this is the end," said Eric Lawson, when she had swayed away from him, whitely, "and good-by. You've been the sweetest thing that ever happened in my life. May the God that you believe in, and I don't, take care of you always!"

And he went out.

But Sylvia Vail did not see him go, though her eyes were turned upon him, for tears streamed down her face, washing away the last remains of her girlhood, blinding her to that last glimpse of this man possessed of seven devils, who also possessed her heart.

Almost without her knowing it, she found her mother's arms about her, and, turning, she buried her head, sobbing out the hurt and loss that choked her. "Mother—I love him—I love him so. Help me."

VII.

But Eric Lawson was wrong. It was not the end.

The end was much later, when had come to pass that amazing thing which Hollywood knows and whispers, with its tongue in its cheek, but with wistful eyes that somehow half believe.

The theater was already dark when the girl entered. Snow was packed outside, and it was still snowing. She brushed the white flakes from her cloak. As she slipped into the end seat on the front row the curtain slid upward, revealing the shores of the Galilean sea.

She sat very quietly. She did not even look at the program that lay folded in her lap beside her still, clasped hands. So motionless was she that the woman beside her glanced at her once or twice, in wonder. Only once did she move, as though something were choking her. That was during the famous scene which all New York had acclaimed, had raved over—the scene in which Jesus cast out the seven devils.

But even that was surprisingly little, for most women sobbed openly at that point. It was a very successful play. One of those strangely successful plays that occasionally reveal the depth of faith and simplicity in the heart of a people.

Before the lights had gone up after the final curtain the girl had moved up the aisle and out into the snow, very silently and swiftly, her head bent forward.

At first Eric Lawson was not sure that he had really heard the faint knock upon his dressing room door. But when an even fainter echo of it sounded he said "Come in."

They said nothing for a long moment, looking at each other.

A slim, dark girl, with eyes like black velvet shining in a white face. And a man with a crest of thick, golden hair, whose face, now without its makeup, looked haggard, clawed, ravaged. But at peace.

A dingy enough dressing room it was. Disordered. Smelling of grease paint and hair tonic and painted scenery and dust.

But the two people who stood there looking at each other had forgotten it as though it had never existed.

"Sylvia," said the man, softly, very softly, as though if he spoke loudly she might disappear, this vision of a girl that his heart had so long called for.

She moved quickly, and somehow she was sitting on the one good chair, and somehow her cloak had slipped to the floor, and he was kneeling beside her, within the circle of her arms.

There was no need, no place, between them for those silly words that meant nothing. Life and death, the things beyond life or death, were in their faces.

"You can understand," he said, and he made no pretense about the tears that had come and that followed each other slowly down those new furrows in his cheeks, "you can understand. You were out there. You knew, or you wouldn't be here. I have been ashamed. I cannot tell any one. They think I am mad or something—at the club, my friends. But I cannot explain."

"But you will understand, Sylvia. I could not go on speaking those words every day—I could not live that life, even for a few hours, every day. I meant to. I hated it. And then it began to get me."

"I think I fought it at first. But for almost a year now, Sylvia, ever since we said good-by, I have been speaking them. The deathless words that have survived everything, the only words that have proved immortality. I have stood there, wearing His robes, upon the very spot His feet trod—for I am an actor, and illusion is strong in me—and, I tell you, they have done something for me. It is like—a miracle."

"Until now, when I say, 'Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid. In my Father's house are many mansions'—now, when I say that—"

Sylvia Vail sobbed aloud. "My dear, my darling," she said, "my darling."

"And," said Eric Lawson, secretly kissing again and again the lace upon the breast of her dress, "I can't drink—I haven't for months. I can't smoke, even. I can't—"

But Sylvia would not let him even say that. And so she kissed him.

And so that was the end—or the beginning.

Except that that night, in her twin bed at the hotel, Sylvia said to her mother, "Mother, what is it about 'my word shall not'—"

"O," said her mother, in the darkness you mean, 'Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away.'"

"Yes," said Sylvia. "I believe that, too, mother."

"Of course," said her mother.

At least you won't fall asleep at "A Weak Woman." However, don't let my comments so unsettle you as to cause you to bring binoculars with you. It wouldn't be in such good taste, I don't think.

* * * *

IT IS almost inevitable that from time to time I should pick out for you what I consider the ten best attractions running on Broadway. Not that anyone has suggested that I do, but it is a privilege all we so-called theatrical writers think we must take disadvantage of. And so those of you who have been unable to sleep nights breathlessly awaiting the list may now sleep peacefully, as I recount the following shows, which happen to have pleased me more than the rest:

"Charlot's Revue," "Easy Virtue," "Craig's Wife," "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em," "Sunny," "Young Woodley," "The Green Hat," "Tip Toes," "The Vagabond King," "Hedda Gabbler."

* * * *

AS a matter of fact, "Hedda Gabbler" is the Ibsen play with which I'm most chummy, and I am sure it has never been given a more charming rendition than the one the Actors' theater are giving it now. And how glad I am that Miss Emily Stevens turned up her nose at "The Makropoulos Secret" and instead decided to portray "Hedda," for she gives the most interesting performance I've seen this year. The two people who I think are almost essential to the shows they're in are Miss Stevens in "Hedda Gabbler" and Dennis King in "The Vagabond King."

It is always difficult for me to tell you about an Ibsen play, for it is apparent that you already know far more about it than I do. "Hedda Gabbler" is, I should say, sufficiently well-known to be able to struggle along without any comments from me. I grant Mr. Ibsen that much with the most generous gesture. But I'm sure the present cast is as excellent a one as ever before portrayed this play. It is perhaps best that I do not get started on the subject of Miss Stevens, for space, after all, seems to be so limited these days. Louis Calhern and Erik Conroy, both of whom were with Laurette Taylor in "In a Garden" are Lovborg and Judge Brack in Miss Stevens' "Hedda," and are particularly good. Dudley Diggs gives a splendid account of himself as the insufferably stupid Tesman.

Here at least is one Ibsen play which Miss Eva LaGallienne did not get her hands on first. With her nightly rendition of "The Master Builder," and her special matinees of "John Gabriel Borkman," (not "John Bergdorf-Goodman," as I heard one woman say), she probably feels, (and rightly so), that she'll have to let this one go by. However, I believe Miss LaGallienne would agree with me that "Hedda" is not exactly the sort of part for her, anyway.

NOTHING has so completely staggered me in years as seeing Julia Hoyt perched in the balcony of the Guild theater at one of their recent Sunday night invitation performances preceding a Monday night premiere. Not that there's any reflection in being caught in the balcony, especially at an invitation performance where everybody's a guest no matter where they sit. But I somehow couldn't become reconciled to Miss Hoyt's being anywhere but in a box or the first five rows of the orchestra. That white fur coat of hers was never meant for balconies. And somehow, to see her during each intermission charge down stairs to the lounge to see what was going on, and then mount the balcony stairs again, was just one of those sights I never thought I'd see. It was just as though you'd go to the Auditorium during Atlanta's opera week and discover Mrs. Frank Ellis suspended in the topmost peaks of the dress circle.

* * * *

I SUPPOSE the same motives which prompted Miss Hoyt, Miss Gloria Gould and scores of others to bring the social world into the theater caused William Tilden, the second, to see what he could do about getting the sporting world in on it. And in a tremendously unimportant and purposeless play, called "Don Q., Jr.," Mr.

Tilden appeared and vanished all within two weeks' time. As an actor, Mr. Tilden is undoubtedly a good tennis player. I have seldom seen such an exhibition of utter helplessness as seemed to seize the tennis star whenever he was on the stage. The play starred "Big Bill Tilden" and "Little Bill Quinn" and my hat is off to the splendid performance given by young Mr. Quinn. It fell to his lot to do not only his own acting but enough more to cover up the embarrassing shortcomings of his co-star. Furthermore, "Don Q., Jr.," is that play about "the kid" who goes to jail after having stolen money for his invalid brother or cousin or something. You haven't seen it in the movies over thirty-five times, anyway.

* * * *

THIS is the time of year when children decide on the color of their Easter eggs, and Easter brides decide on just what atrocious color they'll rig their bridesmaids in.

That most fashionable of apartment hotels here, the Marguery on Park avenue, is as good a place as any in which to be married—as far as marrying goes. Is it true that a certain fox-trotting blonde of your city has decided the Marguery is the setting in which around "Rabbit Time" she will shed her gaily eventful girlhood? I have a mental picture of that charming face of hers wreathed in smiles and tulle as she charges down the aisle at the Marguery to meet her new name.

She went at her studies with the energy and determination of a young law student bent on making a mark for himself in the world. She was finally selected from a number of candidates by Morris Gest for the enviable role of the nun.

On her first appearance critics confessed difficulty in believing it was the ambitious young girl's first performance. Thereupon was revealed a young actress with qualifications to carry on successfully.

"Something to do!" is what Miss Patterson says she wants from life.

"Parties," she confides, "are all right for a while, but not an incessant round of them. Boys aren't so interesting as I like to meet them somewhere else, esting at a dance. They're all alike, like going to the theater with them or riding or dining with them. They seem to show up better."

The interesting thing about our young women is their wholesome analysis of men. Presently the modern youth is going to get wise to the fact that the girls feel they have the right to expect an intelligent and responsible vis-a-vis. They're conferring no favor on the modern young thinker if they escort her to a party or cut in on her dances. The girls want more than patter for their pains. And that is about the healthiest way of ruling out of existence tongue tied bores or lethargic cynics. They're real themselves, these girls, and interesting, and they ask no less of boys.

Asked about the kind of boy that makes the biggest hit with girls, Miss Elinor answered, "The boy that doesn't talk about another girl."

"A funny thing about boys," volunteered the young woman. "They will never enthuse about another boy. They'll never admit another is handsome. If you rave about a boy's looks, they'll say: 'I can't see it, at all.' Or, at the theater if you enthuse about the leading man, they won't admit him even good looking. A girl will admit another is pretty. Men may not be cattier as women, but they're not so clever as women. A woman wouldn't say another wasn't pretty if a man praised her."

"Another thing I notice about men. They don't like to see a girl smoke, in spite of what they say. They'll offer her cigarettes. But most of them are like one boy I know who stood watching a girl smoke as long as he could, then walked over and removed the cigarette from her mouth and begged her to stop it."

"I don't smoke," said Miss Patterson. "It is bad for the wind and I have to run about so much in the 'Miracle.' Besides, it undoubtedly does discolor the tee h."

ism is not one of these things that is going to be established by nationalizing the means of production and exchange and so on, and you must not think that on that basis the thing will go on and that we shall live happily ever after. That is a nineteenth century delusion. If there is one lesson which we ought to have learned from the history of the last two centuries it is the lesson taught us by the German poet Goethe, who said that the man who wanted life and freedom has got to fight for them every day. Socialism has not only to be set going but it has to be kept going, and it never can be kept going unless every child is educated as a communist.

"How utterly disheartening it has been to us all to find that when we had educated these people in our own generation who were live wires, who were capable of education, that then a few years passed and the whole thing was gone; a new generation had come up in the hands of the parson, in the hands of the squire, being taught in the old ways and taught the old things, being given the Bible as a rule of conduct, and being given the catechism and the prayer book and so on."

Religious Education For Children.

"We fail because we can't get at the children. We with great difficulty root out of the minds of our generation everything that was taught at school; and then another generation comes along with all the old things going. Now if anybody imagines that that a socialist state, a socialist government, is going to let the schools alone and let that sort of thing go on in the name of religious freedom or anything else, they are tremendously mistaken."

WHY BE FAT?

Would You Like to Lose a Pound a Day? Then Try the New Simple Way Which Thousands Say Is Giving Them the Slender, Graceful Figure Dictated by Fashion—No Exercise or Starvation Dieting.

Excess weight or fat, its attendant embarrassments and danger to the heart need be dreaded no longer, since the underlying cause of most cases has been revealed through the investigation of several widely known American and European scientists. Now it is possible for some of the worst cases to start reducing at the rate of a half pound to a pound a day through the use of a new formula which is meeting with wide success.

Mrs. Gertrude Williams, a well-known resident of Virginia, says, "I not only lost forty-one pounds the first month, but feel like a new person." In fact hundreds of users say that their health is vastly improved, in addition to the pleasing loss of weight.

This treatment, which is known as Fat-O-No is easily used at home, and seems to give remarkable results for both men and women of all ages. No exercise or starvation diet is necessary, as you merely take one pleasant tablet after each meal. After you have lost all you wish, simply stop taking the treatment.

To prove that this wonderful formula will succeed where everything else has failed we offer to send a treatment of Fat-O-No for only $2.00 on 10 days' trial. If the results are not satisfactory and you are not more than pleased in every way, it costs you nothing. Send no money—just your name and address to W. M. Bentley, 822 Bentley Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and the treatment will be mailed at once. Simply pay postman plus postage on arrival, or if you prefer you may send $2.00 with your order. Use it according to simple directions. If at the end of 10 days you are not reducing a pound a day just send it back and your money will be refunded without question. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write today and give this "remarkable" compound a trial.—(adv.)

ped out of the front door of his little yellow office a car came wheeling to the curb; a dingy, second-hand car, not costly even when new. Brown-eyed, bow-lipped Mrs. Snyder sat at the wheel alone, and challenged him before the car had fairly stopped:

"Will you come with me, doctor? Lou's been hurt." There was alarm and urgency in her eyes as well as in her voice. "It's a stingaree, the cook says. It bleeds fearfully."

"Half a minute," said the doctor, turning back for his medical bag and bandages.

"Is it very dangerous?" Mrs. Snyder asked breathlessly as he climbed into the car. "Selma says it's worse than a rattlesnake. Is it?"

"O," he assured her. "There'll be no trouble. How long ago did it happen?"

"Twenty minutes," she replied promptly. "She was going bathing, you know. It struck her in the ankle. It bleeds fearfully. Selma—that's the cook—says it's poison."

"Not at all," he assured her again. "Hundred to one there'll be no trouble. The stingray is an ugly brute to meddle with. He's got a bunch of long, fine bone needles in the end of his tail—capable of punching a hole through a leather boot. Sometimes there's trouble, due to neglect and infection. That may happen with any wound. But we'll take this in time. She must watch out for them." Having professionally disposed of the case, he added, to make conversation, "How do you like your house?"

Relieved by his assurance, Mrs. Snyder—driving fast, with an alert eye to the road—became her sunny and loquacious self. "Well, it's great in some respects. For holes and cockroaches you couldn't beat it." She gave her melodious and infectious laugh. "We wanted a quiet place; and a graveyard's riotous in comparison with this. My husband is not well. The poor boy has been working too hard. He's really all shot up and needs a long rest. I can see, already that there's oceans of rest down here. I'm so rested I could go out and catch an alligator single handed."

SHE laughed again and the doctor laughed with her.

Chatting in this fashion, they left the brick pavement and struck into a white shell road, in poor repair, that led north from town. Soon they were bumping through a tract of southern pine, the trees standing tall, slim, and straight as masts, with clumps of palmetto between them. Then the road ran out into a mere wagon track that would have become impassable to automobiles on account of the deep loose sand, but periodically loads of tough palmetto leaves were hauled up and strewn along, which kept the wheels from sinking in.

They struck the remains of a short shell road that led up to a weather-beaten, five-barred gate. The gate had been shut when Latham last saw it; he thought it was shut usually. No doubt Mrs. Snyder had left it open at her hurried exit. They drove through. This gate was the only opening in a rank and tangled hedge that skirted the Yates place on the land sides.

The grounds, as Lem White said, had been prodigally planted with many kinds of vegetation, but long untended in a moist, warm climate, where constant exercise of the pruning shears was necessary to keep shrubbery in order. The old shell road itself was buried or torn up in spots by over vigorous roots and branches. Along its sides a bignonia vine, grown to monstrous proportions, had overrun many feebler plants. Over their dead tops the bignonia now spread a profusion of brilliant yellow blossoms. In the same fashion, everywhere in these grounds, the fittest had survived riotously and the feeblest had died. In a few years more, Latham thought, that gorgeous bignonia would spread its yellow flowers to the sun above the dead bones of all the rest.

But it did not attack the spruce. That funereal grove, standing in six ranks of somber green on three sides of the house, seemed to cast a subtle shade all about; the very sunlight appeared paler in its vicinity. Looking at it, Latham thought of a procession of black-robed monks, their faces hidden in their hoods, chanting a dirge. They stopped at a shed back of the grove, which was evidently used as a shelter for the car. Noting the direction of Latham's glance as she climbed out of the car, Mrs. Snyder surveyed the tall spruce wall, serrated on the upper edge by the conical tops of the trees.

"If the man that planted that went to hell I hope he's got warm by this time," she commented. There was a note of irritation in her voice.

No path led through the matted spruce, so they skirted it, coming out by the end of the long, low frame house. Up in the half story, which seemed to be unused, a shutter hung drunkenly by one hinge. At the first glance it was obvious that the veranda across the whole front of the house—perhaps sixty feet in length—was vacant. Skirting it on a narrow and overgrown path, Mrs. Snyder led the way to the steps.

Abruptly Latham's nerves tingled at the sound of a woman's voice uttering a man's name: "Frank!"—a cry from the heart, full of fear and pleading, sweet and poignant. It came from an open window on the other side of the veranda, and it was swiftly followed by confused entreaties: "O, don't, Frank! Please! Don't! No! I beg of you!"

Mrs. Snyder had glanced back over her shoulder, like another woman—for her saucy, pretty face, with its little straight nose, warm brown eyes, and bowed lips was set like steel. Even her voice was different as she commanded, low and terse, "Wait here!" This backward glance and command took a bare second. She sprang forward, running along the path, and flew up the steps.

Latham stood in his tracks, and that sweet, agitated appeal broke out again across the veranda, "You mustn't do it, Frank! You know you mustn't. O, please don't!"

Silence. But he thought there was a struggle. Not a sound, and his eyes, bent upon the open window whence the voice had issued, could see nothing whatever save a chair, and, dimly, the wall of a room. Yet he thought there was a struggle. The voice began again: "You know you promised Sarah! You know you mustn't! You know how sorry you'll be afterwards!"

It was hard to bear that. With another of those sweet agitated notes Latham would have put his hand to the decaying balustrade and leaped up to the veranda. But the pleading voice ceased. He hesitated, listening, uncertain to leap up on the veranda and invade the room from whose open window that pleading voice issued. Then, in the complete silence, he thought that Mrs. Snyder had reached the scene.

Well, if Mrs. Snyder had reached the scene there was probably no need of his intruding. An impression that she was competent to deal with whatever situation there might be within the room remained with him from the set face which she had turned over her shoulder as she sped away. Probably he would better wait, as he had been told to do. He drew a full breath and gave a little, derisive laugh. Pleasant sort of place, this!

Then there was Mrs. Snyder in the doorway, down the veranda, calling to him quite cheerfully, "Come in, doctor!"

She waited for him, apparently the same sunny woman with whom he had been chatting on the way up from Indian Ledge—offering no explanation, and he could not have guessed from her manner that there had been any untoward interruption. Stepping into the dingy hall, he almost asked himself whether, in fact, he had not dreamed that heart wrung voice issuing from the open window.

But he saw at a glance that the room into which Mrs. Snyder led him was not the one whence the voice had issued. There was no wicker chair by the window here; this must be the room next that with the chair. He had time only for a glance, which gave him an indefinite impression of some shabby furnishings; then his eyes found his patient and remained.

SHE sat in a big wooden chair, of the sort which he had heard called a Boston rocker, clad in a bright, striped bathrobe and a bathing suit beneath, just as she had come from the water. Her left foot and ankle were swathed in hasty bandages, but blood had soaked through them. Kneeling in front of her and taking the injured foot in his hand, he noted some faint blood smears on the dark wood floor leading toward the door between this room and the adjoining one whence he had heard the pleas. Why had she gone in there? The wound was in the ankle—a vicious hole.

By way of professional patter and in a jocular tone, for the purpose of reassuring the patient, he commented: "You picked out a he-one—full grown, I'd say, from the way he punched your ankle."

"It was that broad," she replied, holding her hands perhaps thirty inches apart.

"O, you saw it, then?"

She seemed puzzled by the question, answering, "It was in the boat."

1. "Prenatal Care," by Mrs. Max West, pamphlet issued by Children's Bureau, Labor Department. 5 cents.
2. "Infant Care," same author, same publisher. 10 cents.
3. "Our Babies," by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, pamphlet issued free by Chicago department of health.
4. "The Prospective Mother," by Dr. J. Morris Slemmons, published by D. Appleton & Co., New York, N. Y. $2.
5. "Simplifying Motherhood," by Dr. Frank H. Richardson, (particularly good advice about nursing, weaning and artificial feeding), published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York, N. Y. $1.75.
6. "Care of the Baby," by Dr. J. P. Crozer Griffith, published by W. B. Saunders Co., Philadelphia, Pa. $2.

That's all there is there ain't no more. The Griffith baby book gives feeding instructions for children up to six years of age, but deals with the young infant's care in general. I know of no book or pamphlet I can recommend, dealing with the training or health care of the growing child—there are several in print, but I cannot recommend them. I am waiting and watching for something in this field which I can recommend.

Any one may purchase copies of "Prenatal Care" and "Infant Care" by sending five and ten cents respectively for them to the superintendent of documents, government printing office, Washington, D. C.

the 7,000 miles will not be hard-surfaced. But allowing for all this, and calculating the probable rate of road construction, we turn with renewed zest to that interesting speculation as to just exactly how Georgia will look in 2026.

It was not necessary to actually tell the delegates to the recent ceramic convention that Georgia has eight varieties of climate. Indeed, the orators could have made it 18, that particular week, and gotten away with it.

Stone Mountain has no physical magnetic properties but it will draw the American traveling public to it just as surely as if it were an actual magnet.

There is natural curiosity as to how many paint factories have to operate full time to supply the red coloring for marking non-parking spaces near water plugs in Atlanta.

Visiting autoists estimate that there are two million water plugs in Atlanta.

Georgia built 56 miles of concrete roads in 1925. The state's highway system was originally 6,000 miles but is now nearer 7,000. At that rate of progress—

Of course construction will be speeded up some this year, at least that is the optimistic plan. And all

There are 26 commercial minerals, says Frank T. Reynolds, and Georgia has 48 of them, loyally asserts President Downs, of the Central of Georgia railway. A slight discrepancy in statistics somewhere, but whatever the exact number of strictly commercial minerals (Mr. Downs places it at 52), Georgia has nearly all of them. And the hearts of these two Georgia boosters are distinctly all right!

Is Your Letter Printed On These Two "Letter Writers Club" Pages?

THE LETTER

ATLANTA, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: I want to join the letter writers' club. I am a little boy 6 years old. I go to school at Grove Park and am in the first grade.

I have gray eyes, but they're turning brown. I have brown hair and fair complexion, except when my face is dirty. Then I have dark complexion. I am 3 feet, 9 inches tall. My daddy works on the railroad and runs an engine. I have a dog for a pet. His name is Pinky, because he is brown and white. He barks loudest at night. He barks squeaky. He has one blue eye and one brown eye. His tail is cut off.

All you boys and girls write me and I will answer.

Your unknown friend,
WILLIAM EDWARD TRAINER.
Route 97, Box 250.

CORDELE, GA.

Dear Friends: As my little sister has written I am going to write, too. I am 9 years old and in the third grade. I have light curly hair and fair complexion. I have 6 dolls. I often play with them. Some of you write me.

Your unknown friend,
JOE MERRITT.

DALTON, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you let me join your letter writing club? I have read your letters and enjoy them very much. I like Orphan Annie and Perry Winkle best in the funnies. I will describe myself. I have white (bobbed) hair, blue eyes and am about four feet, nine inches tall. Am 13 years old and in the fifth grade at school. For pets I have a gray cat. As this is my first letter, I will close.

ETHEL MCINTIRE.
100 S. Thornton avenue.

LAKELAND, FLA.

Hello, Everybody: Do let me join your jolly club. I read the letters every Sunday, but this is the first letter I have written to you. Guess I had better not forget to describe myself as it seems to be the custom. I have dark brown curly hair (bobbed), brown eyes and fair complexion. There, we are introduced. Now everybody please write to me and get acquainted. I just love writing and receiving letters, so be sure and write and I will surely answer all that I get. Your new friend.

JANE ANN BAXTER.
Box 1233.

ANDERSON, S. C.

Dear Club Members: How I like to read the Letter Writers' club page! May I join your page? I will describe myself as most boys and girls do. I am thirteen years old, five feet and three inches tall, weigh 114 pounds, have brown hair and dark brown eyes. I am in the sixth grade, and go to North Pant street school. All you boys and girls write to me. I will be glad to answer every letter I receive.

Your unknown friend,

SPARTANBURG, S. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: May I join your Letter Writers' club? I go to school and am in the fifth grade. I am 11 years old. I have brown hair, brown eyes and dark complexion. I like the funnies, especially Orphan Annie and the Gumps. I have two pet cats. Your unknown friend.

GEORGIA MAE McLERATH.
341 Lanford street.

GROVER, N. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: I have been reading your letters every Sunday and I certainly to enjoy them. I like Winnie Winkle and Little Orphan Annie the best of the funnies. As the rest have described themselves, so will I. I weigh about 72 pounds, dark hair, blue eyes, fair complexion. I will be 10 years old the 12th of this month, (February). Who has my birthday? I go to Grover high school and am in the fourth grade.

Boys and girls, write to me. I will answer all letters. Love to all.
NANCY JAY DILLINGHAM.

KENNESAW, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: May I join your club? I do like for the funny paper to come. I like Perry Winkle and all the rest. I am 7 years old, have brown eyes and black hair. My brother and I have a lot of fun playing together. We have two sisters. They are twins. I go to school at Benson and am in the second reader.

Your loving friend,
GEORGE YORK, Jr.

FOREST CITY, N. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: Here is a new member wanting to join your delightful club. I have been reading your letters for some time and I have been tempted to write some of you, but thought I had better write and ask to join your club. I have black hair, brown eyes and weigh 110 pounds. I am about 5 feet tall.

How many of you love to dance? I just simply love it. I am learning the Charleston now but guess I will wear out all my slippers trying to learn. I want all of you boys and girls to write and I will answer.

Your friend,

I have blue eyes, blonde hair (bobbed) and fair complexion. I am 4 feet tall and weigh 75 pounds. I am in the sixth grade. I go to Chatsworth high school. I sure do like to go to school. I haven't missed a day this term. I ride to school on a bus. I have three sisters and one brother. I lived in North Carolina till I was about 7 years old, then we went to Central America. We did not stay long there. We came to Georgia, where we are living now.

I would be more than glad to get a letter from any of you girls and boys. I will try to answer all I receive.

Your unknown friend,
BLANCHIE ELIZABETH BUNGER.
Route 1.

GROVEOAK, ALA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you please let a little Alabama girl join your club? As I don't see many letters from Alabama and not any from here I thought I would write some this beautiful morning. I guess most of the boys and girls are in school today. I am 5 feet, 3 inches tall, weigh 135 pounds, am 15 years old, have dark hair, brown eyes, dark complexion. I wonder if any of you have my birthday—July 20. If you have let me know. I am in ninth grade at Groveoak school, and like school fine. Some of you boys and girls write to me and send your photo.

Yours sincerely,
NELLIE HOPE.

ALVATON, GA.

Dear Unknown Friends: Will you let me join your letter writing club? I go to school at Alvaton. I am in the fifth grade. I am 4 feet tall, have blue eyes, fair complexion, light hair, am 10 years old on September 8. Who has my birthday? My pets are a cat and a dog.

Your friend,
GUY MALONE.

HAMPTON, GA.

Dear Kiddies: May I join your happy club? I am between 10 and 14 years old and in the fifth grade. I go to school at Liberty Hill school. I have brown hair (bobbed), and brown eyes and medium complexion. Please, some of you boys and girls write to me. I will answer all letters received.

Your unknown friend,
ONA BELL BROWN.
Route 2.

GRIFFIN, GA.

Hello Boys and Girls: May I join the letter writers' club? I love to read the letters each Sunday.

I am a little girl 10 years old. I am in the fifth grade and have the sweetest teacher. I live in the country about a mile from town and have the best times. I skate just lots and when my cousin comes to see me we ride horseback. She lives in a city and lies to visit me in the country. I certainly would like for you boys and girls to write to me and I will answer every letter received.

JULIA MALOY.
Williamson Road.

WHITESBURG, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you admit a Georgia girl into your merry club? I enjoy reading all your letters very much. I have been intending to write for some time, but just could not pick up courage.

I am about 5 feet, 2 inches tall, have blond hair, blue eyes and light complexion. I am 16 years old. I go to school and am in the third grade high. I live out in the country about four miles, but I go to school in town. What funny paper do you like best? I like Uncle Walt. Somebody's Steuog and Winnie Winkle best of all. I am fond of outdoor sports, especially horseback riding. I also like wearing trousers and rambling on the river and through the woods. My cousin spent the week with me during the Christmas holidays and on Wednesday morning we fixed our lunch, put on trousers and were off to spend the day in the woods. We went to the mouth of a creek near my home and from there we began our journey up the Chattahoochee river. We walked about eight miles and reached home at three o'clock in the afternoon. We had a wonderful time. How do you girls and boys like swimming? I'm crazy about it. I learned to swim in the Chattahoochee river. I can't swim very well, but it beats not swimming at all. I live between a river and creek. I went fishing; I caught four crawfish. I was not very fortunate.

Some of you boys and girls write to me. I would like to correspond with you. I'm going to write to Lou Vone Rutledge.

Your friend,
GLADYS RICHARDS.
Route 3.

ALVATON, GA.

My Dearest Friends: Here comes a Georgia girl at your door asking for permission to join your happy band of boys and girls. I have been reading the letters you boys and girls have written for a long time and have at last decided to write. As every one describes themselves, guess I had better follow. Here goes. Am 5 feet 7 inches tall, weigh about 100 pounds and have fair complexion, brown eyes and black hair (bobbed). I almost forgot to tell you my age. I am 13, will be 14 the sixth of April. So who is my twin? Guess all of you boys and girls had a big time Christmas. I surely did. Well as this is my first attempt to write guess had better ring off. Hope I will get a lot of letters from you boys and girls.

Love to all of you,
RACHEL YORK.
Route 1, Box 69.

HARDEEVILLE, S. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: I have been a constant reader of your club; I enjoy reading the letters very much and wish to become a member. May I? I have written once before, but it seems as if Mr. W. B. was waiting to gobble my letter up. Maybe he will be out of the way this time or at least I hope so, anyway.

As it seems the custom to describe oneself I will endeavor to do so; that is if you promise not to run. I have wavy auburn hair, brown eyes, fair complexion, am 5 feet 3 inches tall and weigh about 94 pounds. My age is between 15 and 18. This I will leave for you to ponder over. Gee, isn't it cold? If this letter should appear in print I will be glad to correspond with any one who wishes to.

Sincerely,
KATHERINE BECKHAM.
N. B.—I am usually called "Kittie."

LEXINGTON, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Here is another customer knocking at the door. Will you let him in?

Are you looking for many Valentines? I am. As it is a custom I will describe myself. I have red hair, brown eyes, fair complexion, 5 feet in height, freckled face, weigh 115 pounds. I am 10 years old and in the fifth grade. My birthday is June 10. Have I a twin? If so let me hear from them.

Your Unknown Friend,
MARION BRIDGES.
R. F. D. 3.

P. S.—All write to me. I will try to answer all received.

GREENVILLE, S. C.

Dear Friends: I am a new member of the Letter Writers' club and hope that Mr. W. B. don't get this letter, as it is my first attempt at writing. I am 11 years old. I will be 12 the fifteenth of July. I weigh 74 pounds, am 56 inches tall and in the fifth grade. I have been reading the letters for a long time and I decided to write, too.

Your friend,
CHARLIE WOOD.
18 Allen Street, Dunean Mill.
P. S.—I will be glad to answer any letter. C. W.

KINSTON, N. C.

Hello Boys and Girls: A new member is about to come into your midst if you will but let her. Make room for me, please, next to that swell-looking brunette. You know, the sheik.

I'm going to describe myself, but first promise that you won't run and hide. Won't you? Well here goes: I am 15 years old, weigh about 100 pounds. I have straight light brown bobbed hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. You can come out now, all those who hid. I won't hurt you.

I want to make one last request. All of you club members (boys and girls), write to me several long pages, and I will answer them as soon as I can. Waiting for the postman.

HELEN SPENCER.
400 College Street.

ATLANTA, GA.

Dear Girls and Boys: I am a little girl 11 years old and in the fourth grade at school. Was Santa Claus good to you? He brought me a basketball and a doll bed, and a box of candy. I have one little brother. He is two years old. Santa Claus brought him a wheelbarrow. I hope to see this in print Sunday. My little brother's name is Kenneth Stuart. I have brown hair and brown eyes. Some of you send me a picture of yourself and a letter and the number of your house. I have a pair of skates and I love to skate. I can dance and I am going to a party two weeks from Friday night. I went to town yesterday. I have one pet. It is a dog. I have a swing out in the back yard. I have a baby doll. When you write to me write it like this.

Your new friend,
MISS MARIE SEALS.
351 East Georgia Avenue.

MACON, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: I have been reading and keeping up with your interesting letters for about three months now and you don't know what fun I have reading them.

We get The Constitution every Saturday and the puzzles, etc., interest me a great deal.

I am 13 years old and I work at the Central of Georgia railroad. You Atlanta boys and girls ought to know that railroad, because the Atlanta branch is one of the largest connections it has.

We are having some hot basketball game and other sports about now, and of course summer will soon be here again.

I am anxiously waiting to see my letter printed in the young folks' section, and until then,

I remain,
WM. COPELAND.
R. F. D. No. 3.

CHATSWORTH, GA.

Dear Letter Writers' Club: I read your letters every Sunday. I sure do enjoy reading them.

I go to school at Chatsworth High school. I am 10 years old and in the fifth grade. I weigh 92 pounds. I wish I had a picture of myself to send.

I bet Santa was good to all of you. He sure was good to me.

I want all of you to write me. will answer all.

Your unknown friend,
LOUISE CHAMBERS.

TALMO, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you let me join your happy club? As it the rule I will describe myself, here goes. I am 12 years old, 4 feet 1 inch tall and weigh 60 pounds. I see what a monkey I am.

Did you all have a merry Christmas? I did. And what did Santa bring you? He brought me a mar. doll. I am in the seventh grade. I to school at Talmo High. I like teachers fine.

I sure did enjoy reading the poem written by Georgia Ruth Minor.

Well, as this is my first time write I will ring off. All of you write me. I will answer all letters I get.

Your unknown friend,
AGNES SIMMONS.

CHATSWORTH, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you move over and let a Georgia girl join your happy club? I have written the letter writers' club twice. I read the letters all the time and sure enjoy them. I go to school at Chatsworth High and I sure do like to.

We play basketball, dodgeball and several other games. I have several playmates. Two of them are write at this time. We are all in a at school. All of you boys and girls write to me and I will answer letters I get.

WRITERS' CLUB

Write a Letter Real Soon and Join "The Letter Writers' Club"

NOTICE TO THE BOYS AND GIRLS!

A few weeks ago the editor of this page invited all boys and girls under sixteen years of age to join the Letter Writers' Club, but asked that all letters be written just as neatly and plainly as possible and only on one side of the paper. A number of letters are still being received written on both sides, and some are so carelessly written that they cannot be read. If you letter has not appeared sit down and ask yourself whether you have followed the above rules! Then write again, and watch for your letter.

MARIETTA, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: I wonder if you cousins will let me join your club?

I am a boy 8 years old, 4 feet and 6 inches tall and weigh 75 pounds. Have dark hair and blue eyes.

I am in the fourth grade and like my studies fine.

I hope my daddy will go to Florida before another winter for I am tired of much cold weather.

How many of you my age can drive a Ford? I can and like it.

Please some one write to me.

Your unknown friend,
TOY MOON.

MARIETTA, GA.

Dear Friends: I am a little girl 7 years old. I am going to school. This is my first year of school. I go Bill Arp junior high school. I am in the second grade. My sister Eunice goes on the school bus to Douglasville high school. I have a brother and a sister married. I have 3 nephews and 3 nieces. I have one brother at home. I am the baby. I have dark brown hair, black eyes and medium complexion. I cannot write any more.

Your little friend,
LURENE MILAM.

DOUGLASVILLE, GA.

Hello Boys and Girls: How would you like to hear from a little Douglas girl? My daddy takes The Constitution and I find your letters so interesting that I would like so much to become a member of your club. I am 13 years old, am a typical blonde, with great big blue eyes and big dark eye lashes and brows. My hair is shingled in the French bob style. I go to St. Andrews church. I forgot to ask you how you enjoyed Christmas. I always have a good time for my part. I receive so many gifts that it would take too much space to name them. I have a pet cat. It is black and white. It is so cute.

Goodbye.

FRANKLIN, N. C.

Hello Kiddies: Here I come from North Carolina. Will you permit me to join this nice club? Oh, yes, I thought you would. Who is that running down the street? Tell them to come back, and I will tell you how I look. I am not so ugly as to scare you. I am 5 feet tall, weigh 105 pounds, have rosy complexion and light hair, and am 13 years old and in the sixth grade. I just took the mumps today and I can't go to school this week. So every one write that I may have a pastime. Do you folks like sports? I surely do. My favorite is basketball. I have a nice teacher, and I enjoy my school work. Do you like music? I do. I can't play anything except a piano. I am taking art now and I like it fine. Remember, I have the mumps and I want every last one who reads this to answer and answer quickly.

A very good friend,
SUE CURTIS.

MORRISVILLE, N. C.

Dear Unknown Friends: May I join your happy band? I am 4 feet, 9 inches tall. I will be 15 years old my next birthday, which is July 15. I have bobbed hair, wear glasses, have brown eyes, fair complexion and weigh 79 pounds. I have no pets. Did old Santa Claus visit you Christmas? He did me. He brought me lots of nice things. I go to Edgemont school, and like it fine. I am in the sixth grade. How do you like your teachers? I like mine fine. I have seven. I live near Durham, one of the fastest growing cities in the south. Duke university is one of the largest colleges in the U. S. A. Sure we are proud of old Durham. Why? Because old "Bull" Durham is made here. All of you write to me and I will gladly answer.

Your unknown friend,
FLORINE DEAN.

KINGSTON, S. C.

Hello Kiddies: Will you kindly open your door and let me enter? I am sure you will. I do not have to ask if I may join your club. I am already a member. Gee, I received lots of letters when I wrote before. I would tell their names, but I am afraid my letter would be too long. I am a brunette, have black bobbed curly hair, brown eyes, weigh 89 pounds. I am 4 feet, 7 inches tall. Can you imagine what a horrible looking creature I am. I like Winnie Winkle and Moon Mullins best of all the funnies. Which do you like best? I will be delighted if some of you who "need a friend" will write to me. I will answer.

Your friend,
EMILIE KOZMA.

FROLANO, GA.

Dear Unknown Friends: I have been reading the letter writers' club for a long time and I thought I would write. Dear Boys and Girls: May I join your happy band? I read the letters every Sunday and enjoy them very much.

I am 11 years old, have black hair (straight) bobbed, blue eyes, fair complexion. Have I a twin? March 8 is my birthday. If so, write me.

Your friend,
MARGARET DENNIS.

ABERDEEN, GA.

Dear Kiddies: Here I am again. How is everybody? I am a new member and just let me tell you I receive four and five letters every day from boys and girls in Georgia and South Carolina. Oh, how I enjoy getting such sweet letters. I can hardly wait to get home from school a mother always greets me with a bunch of mail that the postman has brought on the morning delivery. I wish to thank the editor for being so kind as to allow us space in the paper to write letters. Maybe some of you have forgotten me. I am 13 years old and am a typical blonde. I have green big blue eyes and have my hair shingled. Who is my twin? My birthday is May 21. I haven't any brothers or sisters. Aren't you sorry for me? My favorite games are basketball and baseball. Do any of you girls play baseball? My pets are three cats and three gold fish. I have a Maltese cat colored blue and gray. I am sending one of my kodak pictures for the letter writers' club, taken in my knickers that Santa brought me Christmas. Had just finished playing a game of basketball. Don't I look happy.

Goodbye till next time.

STORIES — JOKES — THINGS TO MAKE

THE CITY OF THE DEEP

A Story of Adventure in the Mysterious Sargasso Sea

By JACK GIHON

SYNOPSIS

shipwrecked at sea, a man, Dan, and a boy, Bub, in a dingy, are caught in the Sargasso Sea, a huge mass of floating seaweed in the Atlantic ocean. They reach an old wrecked sailing vessel, caught in the weeds. The ship is populated by a colony of about sixty persons, who, they learn, are grandchildren and great grandchildren of sailors who sought new lands to colonize. They have much treasure aboard, and Dan and Bub, calling a meeting of the leading men to tell of a plan to free the vessel, incur the enmity of one Brother Alonso, who vigorously opposes them. However, they discover that someone has a plan for escaping in a small boat in which chests of treasure have been stored. The boat has been rigged in the hold of the vessel, and apparently the plan is to cut through the bows, thus letting the ship sink with those on board. Alonso finally confesses that it was he who formed this plan, and Brother John, leader of the colony, tells Dan and Bub to carry through their own plan to put the vessel on the high seas again.

INSTALLMENT VI.

Before the sun had come up out of the ocean next morning, Dan and Bub, keenly excited over their plan which now was sponsored by all of those on board the vessel, were pacing the decks, gazing intently over the wide expanse of green weed that had held the ship in its present position for so long.

"Tis a queer situation," said Dan, "and it ought not to be for the likes of me to try and better it. Look at all this seaweed about us—I'd say 'tis an impossible bit o' work we're trying."

"Impossible!" exclaimed Bub. "You're not getting cold feet, are you? I'll bet you that by this time next week, we'll be on our way home. What do you say to that?"

"I'll be hoping the same thing, lad. An' we're going to try our best—yes, our very best."

By this time dawn had broken, in all the hard, bright glory it has on the open sea.

And now the colonists of the ship had begun congregating on the decks, for they were as excited as Dan and Bub were. None of them had ever set foot on shore, nor had they the faintest conception, save what they had read in the few books on board, what life on shore would consist of.

The breakfast gong sounded, and they all trooped into the main cabin. Three score heads were bowed as Brother John said the blessing; then, clearing his voice he made a simple announcement.

"These two young men," he said, "have come to us out of the open sea—shipwrecked young mariners. They have offered us a plan whereby we may, God willing, free our ship from this weed that has held us for longer than any of us remember, and carry us to the shores of the America that our forefathers sought. We have deemed it best to allow them to attempt it. Brother Dan will be in charge, and has permission to call on any and all of us to perform such duties as he shall deem wise."

Then, as though only the regular daily routine of the ship were to be conducted that day, they began their breakfast.

The meal finished, every male above fourteen on the ship was called to the forward deck. Here Dan told his plan in detail, and began the assignment of duties.

Four who were considered the best carpenters were set to work at erecting the double bowsprits in the bows and in making the great rakes with which it was hoped to clear a path in front of the vessel. A squad of ten other carpenters was told to make such repairs as might be necessary to make the ship seaworthy. The remainder were assigned to skiffs to clear an alley all around the ship and to dislodge what weed had grown against the hull.

Dan, in the capacity of superintendent, moved all over the ship. One moment he was down in the hold, checking over the work being done in strengthening the beams of the vessel; the next he was leaning over the rail, watching the progress of those who were attempting to clear away the seaweed. This latter was the hardest task of all. As quickly as a rakeful of the weed would be gathered, more would push up in its place, so that it seemed a useless effort of perpetual motion.

All of the ship's treasured canvas had been spread out on deck, and here the women of the vessel were enlisted. Every tiny hole was darned, and in places where the sails seemed to be rotting with age, they were reinforced by patches.

"In our canvas," said Dan, "lies our biggest hope. The best of breeze won't help us if the sails are to rip when they're hoisted."

When the noon gong sounded, and work stopped for the lunch and rest period, it seemed that little had been done. Dan was discouraged, but Bub bolstered him up with his own cheery courage.

That afternoon, Dan realized that though steady work would clear a lane for the ship, when the work stopped at night, the action of the current would close it again. Accordingly, he asked for volunteers to do night work, which would consist simply of rowing around and around the ship in skiffs, dragging a rake after them.

A dozen men were chosen from the volunteers that responded, and these were given a respite from working the remainder of the day, that they might rest.

Thus the work went on, night and day, the whole ship keyed up to a state of keen excitement, all wondering what the future was to hold for them.

Much could be said about the brave valor of this little band of men, of their ceaseless efforts, spurred on by Dan's own tireless work, and the courageous efforts of his helper, Bub.

A week went by, and Dan, scanning the water around them, announced that the time had come for the attempt at freedom. All around the ship, the seaweed had been pushed back, and looking over the rail, one could see clear, deep water, instead of the green weed that had clung to the hold before.

The carpenters had done their work. Two great rakes had been constructed, with a series of guide ropes which would allow them to be operated from the decks and gradually push aside the tenacious weed as the ship progressed. Every beam in the vessel had been gone over, and the masts had been strengthened, while the canvas was rigged and furled, ready to be hoisted whenever Dan said so.

"We're ready to try," Dan said to Brother John. "Tis calm tonight, but I think by morning we'll have a stiff wind. We have done all we can."

"And that is a great deal," replied Brother John fervently. "Let us pray that your efforts have not been in vain."

That night there was little sleep had by those on the ship. It had been announced at the supper table that the trial would be made on the morrow, and every man, woman and child was excited about it. Only two on board that ship had much to lose—and those were Dan and Bub. The others knew no other world save the decks of this vessel, and a departure from this mass of seaweed would be simply a great adventure for them. But the two young mariners, in the evenings when they had been resting from the day's toil, had told them of this other world, where Dan and Bub came from, and all were eager to see it, and to feel soft earth against their feet.

Dan and Bub were tired when they finally turned in. "I'm afraid, Bub—I'm afraid," said Dan. "Maybe we won't be successful."

"But we've got to be—we will be—I know it," responded Bub. "We've worked too hard to fail."

"If we only have a good wind," muttered Dan, and then, strange to say, fell asleep.

True to Dan's expectations, a stiff wind was clipping in from the east when he awoke at dawn. All through the night, men in skiffs had been tirelessly keeping the lane open by constantly traversing it, and the moment had now come to put the ship to the trial. She was a sturdy vessel—yet would she be able to overcome these obstacles?

Breakfast was forgotten. Dan summoned the men to take their places; he sounded a gong, and shouted for sail to be hoisted.

It was an anxious moment as the canvas was lifted, and belled out before the wind. The boat gave a slight lurch; then slowly, almost imperceptibly, it began to move.

A cry went up from those on deck, but Dan was still filled with anxiety. He knew the ship would move through this clear water—but would she get through the seaweed beyond? As she moved, she picked up momentum, and by the time she traversed the traversed the cleared water, she was going at a fair clip.

Then there was a scraping sound, and the movement of the vessel eased. "The rakes," cried Dan—"man the rakes!"

They were thrown overboard; they caught into the seaweed, and the order to heave in was given to the men at the windlasses. Dan, standing on the bridge, could see the ropes become taut, and meanwhile the vessel came almost to a stop, while the wind whistled through the sheets.

There was a sharp snap, and Dan looked dully at the accident that had happened. The strain had been too much for one of the ropes. It had broken, and the rake, that had taken days to make, sank down into the sea.

A low moan went up, for the incident had been observed by them all, but Dan at that moment rushed at top speed down to the deck. "Reef the sails," he shouted, pointing to the southeast, where a black spiral cloud that seemed to reach down into the water, was coming toward them at furious speed. He did not have to repeat his order, for every man aboard understood. The canvas was hauled in with every bit of strength those men possessed, but in a moment, the storm had come upon them.

The vessel seemed lifted upon her nose; then she jarred back with a terrific crash, while the water boiled around her. Those on deck threw themselves on their faces, holding on to anything while the wind hurled all around them. Where the day had been fair, it now turned black, while the ship rocked back and forth, as though trying to shake itself free of those who by sheer force held themselves to its deck.

The hurricane, for that is what it was, had come upon them suddenly, but it departed just as suddenly. In its wake was a fierce deluge of rain, but the wind had slackened now, and Dan was able to rush back on the deck, anxious to determine what damage had been done.

While he was still investigating, he heard a cry, and looked around to see Brother John, tears of joy flowing down his face, pointing with trembling fingers to the west. Then Dan cried, too, and a mighty shout went up from all who were assembled there.

The hurricane had cleared a wide lane of water all the way out to the open sea!

Nine days later, boats in the harbor of New York were astonished to see a sailing vessel of ancient lines come

TWO MAGIC COIN TRICKS

All you need is a little practice to perfect these magic coin tricks, and all your friends will certainly admit you're Houdini's rival. Remember, the best way to completely baffle your audience is to be very cool and collected, and very mysterious.

There are two ways of getting a dime out from under a cup without touching the cup:

First: Place it underneath the cup, then placing your hand underneath the table, make some queer motions as if you were extracting it through a crack in the table. Act then as if you had the dime and say to the others: "It's gone. Look and see if it isn't." One of the other persons will then pick up the cup to see, and when they have done this, you pick up the dime. You have got it without touching the cup.

Second: If nobody bites on the first way, you can use the second. In this case there will have to be a cloth of fairly coarse weave on the table, although an ordinary tablecloth will do. Begin scratching the cloth lumbering in from the open sea. "Great Caesar's ghost," exclaimed one old salt, now serving aboard a tug, "if it's not the Flying Dutchman herself! And comin' to port in New York."

But aboard the vessel was an excited group that had never before seen land. Dan was busy on the bridge, but in the bows stood Bub, telling an admiring crowd of young people about his country—and about what the big statue rising out of the water—the Statue of Liberty—stood for.

at the edge of the cup as if you were leaning the dime to come out, always making the motion away from the cup. Gradually the dime will work toward the side, and, unless the cup is too heavy, will slide out under the edge.

Get an old-fashioned wine glass, quarter and a dime, fill the glass with water and drop the dime in and then the quarter. If the glass is of the kind specified, the quarter will not touch the dime for the glass will be too narrow for it to drop down. Now announce to your friends that this is a trained dime, then turn and blow against the inside of the glass, and catch the dime as it flies out.

Your friends will want to try it immediately, but when they blow, the chances are that the dime will fly out and hit them squarely in the nose, unless they have had a chance to practice as you have.

MAKING A PLANE

The Finished Plane

By TERENCE VINCENT.

You boys and girls, who have worked faithfully, will have your airplane wing at the end of this lesson.

When YOU have mastered a quarter of an ounce of wood, paper, glue, rubber and wire, and have made it FLY, why YOU ARE A FLYER! Who knows but you have the NATURAL BIRD-LIKE QUALITIES for an excellent pilot! So try, try again and again.

Mount the Plane.

Fasten the wing on top of the motorbase, or fuselage, with the wing tips up, the front edge of the wing higher than the rear edge. The motor may be either over or under the wing, if the motorbase permits—the right way is the way that obtains the best flight.

A rubber band holds the wing where you put it, on the motorbase. The tail, with rudder erect and elevator flat in the same plane as the wing, is attached to the rear end of the motorbase, or fuselage.

Put the propeller and motor in place next, and the plane is ready to fly!

Crank the propeller and thereby put in the power.

For every No. 33 rubber bands, about 100 or 400 turns will give a good flight, but if double that rubber is on, wind but 150 to 200 turns for a shorter and speedier flight.

Now hold the airplane over your head, with the motorbase parallel to the floor (or ground), and with the wing also parallel to the floor (or ground). With the propeller in front held by the lower blade with the left thumb and index finger, and the right thumb and index finger holding the rear end of the fuselage, gently toss the plane in the direction of desired flight, releasing both hand-holds at the same time. Some release the propeller about 1-5 second before the other hand lets go.

Try different number of turns. Try different modes of launching the airplane. Try moving the wing near the propeller, or away from it. Try increasing or decreasing the "dihedral" angle, by means of a silk thread attached to the front edge of the wing at the tips.

The combination that results in the best flight, is RIGHT for YOUR plane!

Did you get more than 5 seconds? First tip? If better than 10 seconds out of your FIRST airplane, you are apt to be very skillful. But you should get 20 seconds in one flight, from one of your airplanes in your first year, if you are a grade school student, and 40 seconds if you are a freshman or a sophomore in high school, or 60 seconds in one flight if you are a high school junior or senior.

How to keep the charm of youth
Read what I tell youGray Hair—Faded Hair—Discolored Hair?

Now, you can correct such disfigurements a safe, easy way

By MARY T. GOLDMAN

THE woman who lets herself be classed as "old" because her hair starts turning gray is certainly behind the times!

Gray hair is out-of-date, unfashionable—simply not done. Because there's such a simple, easy way to stop it.

How? The best way to learn is to mail the coupon for a free trial bottle of the scientific preparation which bears my name. Test as directed, use it to restore a single lock. Then you'll know why I say it's such utter folly to have gray hair.

A general beautifier

This famous remedy not only stops gray hair—it brightens dull, faded hair, re-beautifies disfiguring discoloration caused by unsatisfactory dyes.

What you get

A dainty preparation, pleasant to use—a real hair cosmetic.

It's clear and colorless, clean as water. You apply it like water—simply by combing through the hair.

The transformation is amazing—and, oh, how encouraged you'll feel! You'll know, positively and beyond doubt, that you needn't lose your youth and charm through prematurely gray hair, that you needn't have ugly, unattractive hair from any cause whatever. My restorer doesn't interfere with shampooing—there's nothing to wash or rub off. Have your hair curled or marcelled—anything you want. Even the operator won't guess you've treated your hair.

My advice is—have a smart bob. It makes you look as young as you feel. You can do anything with your hair once you restore it my sure, scientific way.

Now—can you resist mailing this coupon?

How can you wait to learn how to renew the original youthful charm and beauty of your hair?

Every druggist keeps Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer and will gladly supply you. Call on yours as soon as you've made the trial bottle test. If he can't supply you, order full size bottle direct from me. I'll send at once postage prepaid.
